Underpass OK expected

by BILL HILL

Plans for an underpass on Arlington Heights Road at the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks have been revised to allow access to and from Arlington Heights Road on Davis Street.

The new underpass plan is expected to receive approval Monday night from the Arlington Heights Village Board. Final designs then will be prepared and submitted to federal highway officials for approval. Federal financing is being sought to cover 70 per cent of the cost of the project, estimated at $5.7 million in 1975.

Updated estimates on the construction cost are expected Monday.

THE OPENING of Davis Street is an attempt to appease downtown businessmen who have complained that access to the central business district will be hampered severely if the plan previously recommended is implemented.

The new plan calls for depressing Davis Street between Evergreen Avenue and Arlington Heights Road so southbound traffic on Arlington Heights Road can turn onto Davis Street and to enable eastbound traffic on Davis Street to turn south on Arlington Heights Road.

The revised plan also calls for a two-level parking garage for 84 cars on the north side of Davis Street, immediately west of Arlington Heights Road, with a pedestrian walkway over Davis Street.

"I'm glad they've done what they've done, but I feel a lot more needs to be done," said Robert W. Mills, president of First Arlington National Bank. "I'd still like to see them look into the whole thing. This (new plan) will certainly help us on the south side (of the railway tracks), but it does nothing for those on the north side," he said.

MILLS AND DONALD Morton, president of Arlington Heights Federal Savings and Loan Assn., have led the attempts to get village officials to delay making a final decision on building an underpass until more economic impact and traffic studies have been conducted.

Petitions making similar requests will be presented to the village board Monday by the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce.

Edmund Pawelko, chamber president, said Friday, the petitions have been signed by more than 125 businessmen who believe they are affected by the proposed underpass.

"We are not opposed to the concept (of an underpass). And we are not opposed to progress. But we'd like to be able to work more closely with the village to solve this problem," Pawelko said.

The new underpass plan is not a solution to the over-all problem because it does not help businesses on the north side of the railway tracks, Pa-

Crosby dies of heart attack

by PETER UEBERSAX

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Bing Crosby, the golden-voiced crooner who made the song "White Christmas" almost a synonym for the holiday, collapsed and died of a heart attack on a Spanish golf course Friday after he and his partner won a foursome. He was 73.

Crosby, who sold 300 million records, was "happy and singing" during the 4½ hour round of golf that was to be his last, one of his golfing partners said.

He collapsed as the four walked back to the club house and was rushed to the Madrid Red Cross hospital. He was dead on arrival, a hospital spokesman said.

Crosby's recording of "White Christmas" sold more copies than any other record in history. But his most famous theme song, "When the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," gave him his trademark buh-buh-buh-boo style.

HE HAD TEAMED up with Spanish champion Manuel Pinero Friday to defeat another Spanish champion, Valentin Barrios, and the Moraleja golf club president Cesar de Zulueta by one stroke.

"We had just finished the 18th hole and were walking toward the clubhouse when Bing had a seizure and fell," Barrios said. "We thought he had just slipped. He injured his head slightly when he fell.

"We took him into the clubhouse and he was given oxygen and cardiac tonic injections, but nothing could be done.

"Bing has shown no signs of fatigue. He was happy and singing as we went around the course," Barrios said.

Barrios said Crosby did not utter a sound as he fell.

"There were no last words," he said.

"Bing played better than yesterday when he shot 92," Barrios said.

CROSBY DIED at around 6:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m. CDT) on a warm, sunny autumn day. The Moraleja course is situated 10 miles north of Madrid in the rolling hills stretching to the Guadarrama mountains, the scene of Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Crosby arrived in Madrid from London where he had been singing to standing room only audiences including those at London's famous Palladium, Britain's biggest variety theatre. He had been scheduled to take part in a partridge hunt today, then fly on to Majorca.

On Wednesday night, his wife Kathy flew home to America and disclosed that earlier in the week thieves had broken into their rented London apartment and stolen about $15,000 worth of items, including the antique gold snuff box and cigaret case she had bought as Bing's Christmas presents this year.

Crosby shrugged off the theft and joked that he'd been robbed on the golf course.

Shortly before his last round of golf, Crosby was interviewed by a reporter of the newspaper AS. He told the interviewer his favorite film was "High Society" which he made in 1956 with Grace Kelly, now Princess Grace of Monaco, and was looking forward to teaming again with Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in what would have been the eighth and final "Road" picture — "The Road To The Fountain of Youth."

HE WAS BORN Harry Lillis Crosby in Tacoma, Wash., on May 2, 1904, and acquired his nickname from a comic strip titled "The Bingville Bugle."

In his youth he worked at everything from delivering newspapers to packing pickles but began his musical career in the early 1920s as pianist and leader of a small dance band.

Bandleader Paul Whiteman saw his act and signed him on. His rise was quick starting with his first picture "The King of Jazz." The rest was history — and American folklore.

CROSBY, A CASUAL pipe-smoking baritone, also appeared in 57 motion pictures, including his famous "Road" pictures with his lifelong friend, Bob Hope.

But in his first venture into serious acting he won an Oscar for his role as the young priest in "Going My Way."

After his movie success in "Going My Way," Crosby went on to do "Bells of St. Mary's" with Ingrid Bergman and then won acclaim for his performance as an alcohol plagued singer in "The Country Girl" with Grace Kelly and William Holden.

With "White Christmas" and "Adeste Fidelis" and "Silent Night,"

Cops raid men's club in area

Reporter Dann Gire and photographer Dave Tonge Friday night joined police on a raid of a "men's club" in Palatine township. Here is Gire's report.

by DANN GIRE

Thomas Dunn began a new job four days ago and he was happy to get the badly needed pay, he said.

But his new employer, the Club Renaissance on Rand Road near Hicks Road in Palatine Township, neglected to tell him one of the hazards of the job.

The Cook County vice squad raided the club Friday night and arrested Dunn, 44, and a woman employe, charging him with being the keeper of a house of prostitution and her with prostitution.

"It's just my luck — I've been here four days and look what happens," said Dunn, of 8609 Golf Rd., near Des Plaines. "They (police) missed the regular doorman by 45 minutes. Of all the luck."

AN UNDERCOVER agent, neatly dressed in a dark three-piece suit, walked into the club, paid his $20 for 30 minutes, then entered a small, softly lighted cubicle containing one velour-covered lounge cahir.

The agent told the woman he was there to see how good the services were so he could tell his friends at work. The woman, later identified as Patricia Rogers, 24, of 177 W. Fre-

Jackie quits job over novel dispute

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis resigned as an editor at the Viking Press Friday in a dispute over the firm's publication of a novel dealing with the fictional assassination plot of her brother-in-law, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Mrs. Onassis joined Viking as a consultant editor in October 1975.

"Last spring, when told of the book, I tried to separate my lives as a Viking employe and a Kennedy relative," Mrs. Onassis said in a letter of resignation to publisher and friend Thomas Guinzberg.

"But this fall, when it was suggested that I had had something to do with acquiring the book and that I was not disturbed by its publication, I felt I had to resign."

THE BOOK, "Shall We Tell the President," was written by British author Jeffrey Archer and tells of a plot to kill Sen. Kennedy after he is elected president in 1980. It was published Monday.

Recalling a friendship spanning "half our lives," Guinzberg said, "I deeply regret Mrs. Onassis' decision to resign without a personal discussion."

The publisher also blasted the Boston Globe for reporting Wednesday that he said Mrs. Onassis did not object to the novel.

THE NEWSPAPER, Guinzberg said, "wildly distorted the tone and intention of responses to the interviewer."

Guinzberg said he discussed the book with Mrs. Onassis before signing a contract to purchase it and added he would have withheld publication if she said the book "might cause her further anguish."

In the two years since Mrs. Onassis joined Viking she has been credited with compiling a book "In the Russian Style," a study in words and picture of imperial life in Russia in the 18th and 19th centuries.

Friends, stars pay tribute to Bing

DURING HIS CAREER, Bing Crosby appeared in more than 57 films, most of them musicals, including the popular "Road" pictures in which he costarred with Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour. The three are shown here on the set of "The Road to Hong Kong."

The death of Bing Crosby brought profound shock and an outpouring of tribute from the highest to humblest levels of show business, music, sports and the American public Friday for a performer and man who in almost everyone's book was No. 1.

Frank Sinatra said that Crosby's passing "leaves a gaping hole in our music and in the lives of everybody who ever loved him and that's just about everybody."

Bob Hope, Crosby's sidekick in the memorable "Road" movies, was described as "terribly shocked, overwhelmingly shocked." Hope was flying back to Los Angles from New Jersey where he was to have hosted a hospital fund raising dinner.

Hope recalled in an interview just last week that he got a tremendous kick out of Crosby ad-libbing his way through those films. "I'd never have been able to get away with some of that stuff, but the brass let Bing do whatever he wanted."

Fred Astaire, who starred in a number of films with Crosby, said his death was "a tragic thing, a great loss — I'm so sorry, for all of us who valued him so much."

President Carter, in a statement, said Crosby "lived a life his fans around the world felt was typically American: successful yet modest, casual but elegant. He revolutionized popular music, sang the biggest hit of all time, and yet was a man who would be at ease in any American home."

DOROTHY LAMOUR, who made up a romantic trio with Crosby and Hope in the "Road" pictures, said she heard of Bing's death on the radio as she was reading a newspaper story about plans for the three of them to make one more film.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "It's such a great loss. Bing Crosby was an individual person. He was Bing Crosby. He was a wonderful man, a religious man. My only wish is that his road to heaven is as happy as our other roads were. I always was closer to Bob(Hope) but they were both like big brothers to me, teasing me."

Said Sinatra:

"The death of Bing Crosby is almost more than I can take. He was the father of my career, the idol of my youth, and the dear friend of my maturity.

"Thank God we have his films and his records providing us with his warmth and his talents forever. My prayers go now to Kathy and the children who brought Bing so much happiness."

SAID LUCILLE Ball: "I never worked in a movie with Bing but I was around him quite often socially. I always enjoyed being in his company because he intrigued me with his vocubulary and his knowledge. He was a brilliant man.

"I saw him about two years ago at a charity function and he seemed happy and looked great and then he said a surprising thing — 'I thank God I had a chance at a second family because I'm not sure I did all I could have with the first.' "

Crosby, from his early years a 70 shooter in golf, gained acclaim in the sports world for his annual tournaments at Pebble Beach, Calif., where he became the crony of the most famous figures in the game.

JACK NICKLAUS, who co-designed and built the Spanish course on which Crosby was playing, was stunned.

"BING'S DEATH is a great shock to me," Nicklaus said. "Only recently we discussed the possibility of having a father-son golf match between Bing and his son, Nathaniel, along with my boy, Jackie and myself."

Arnold Palmer, who was playing in a tournament in Paris, said Crosby was "an American tradition — something Americans take for granted.

"We won't know how much we'll miss him until we realize that he's not there any more."

SAID COMEDIAN George Burns: "It's a terrible shock to me and I think that, what can you say about Crosby. He's an institution. He invented a style and the style will always be with us. While Crosby's gone we'll always have his voice.

Remember Bing 'in song' asks wife

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (UPI) — Kathryn Crosby said Friday that her husband, Bing, who died of a heart attack in Spain, should be remembered "in song."

Mrs. Crosby told reporters outside their home on the San Francisco Peninsula: "I think he is remembered in song, isn't he? And I think that's the way he should be remembered."

She said she left his side and returned home from England Wednesday after they had performed together there.

Mrs. Crosby said he had been thrilled by the enthusiastic receptions he recieved there and was particularly impressed with the fact the English audiences knew all his songs and sang along with him.

MRS. CROSBY ALSO said she wanted everyone to know that her husband, an avid golfer, had played well in his final 18 holes. "I can't think of a better way for a golfer who sings for a living to finish his final round," she said.

She said her husband would be buried next week in the family plot next to his first wife, Dixie Lee, in southern California.

Crosby had wanted a simple funeral service upon his death, she said, but she did not want to deprive his many friends of remembering him.

Mrs. Crosby said Bob Moonan, a longtime friend and an organist at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Cathedral in San Francisco, would perform at the funeral Mass.

She said that her son, Harry, 19, and the family's longtime butler, Alan Fisher, would fly to Spain and accompany the singer's body back to the United States.

MRS. CROSBY asked that memorials to her husband be in the form of contributions to his annual golf tournament.

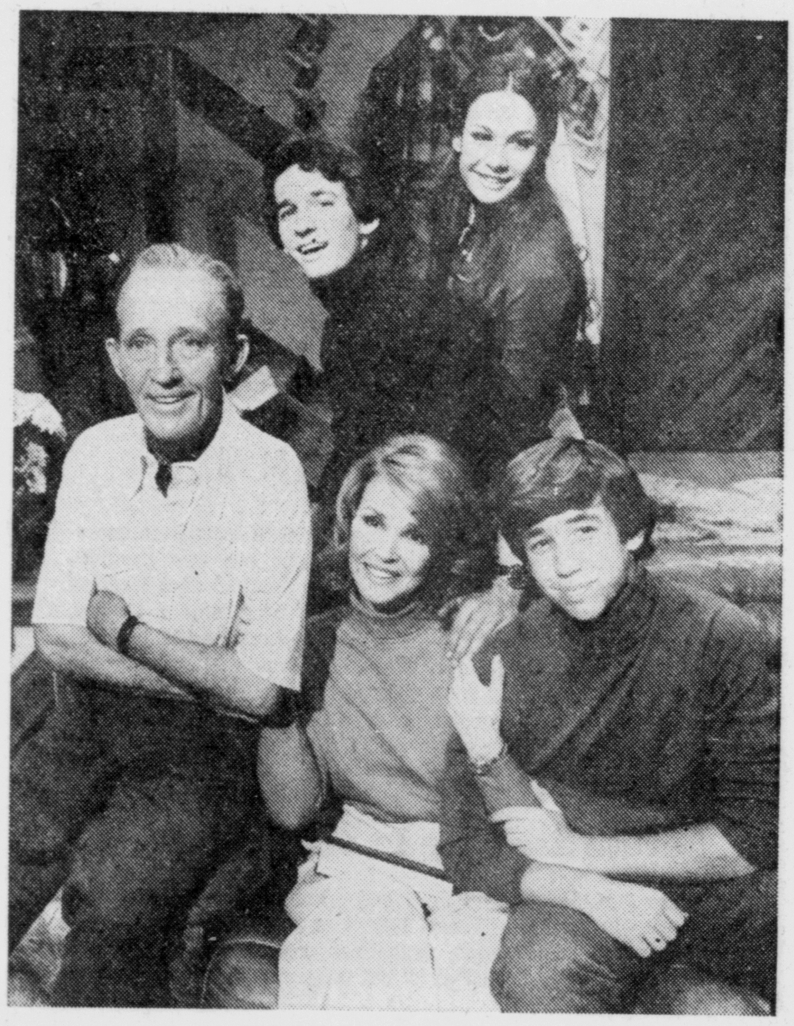
She said that her husband particularly had enjoyed the past summer because he accompanied his son, Nathaniel, 15, a one-handicap golfer, to a number of amateur tournaments in the state.

Nathaniel said that a tournament in San Diego stood in his mind when thinking of his father.

"We had a really fun week," the teen-ager said. "I got closer to him just being along and going out instead of the whole aspect (of publicity) that we're used to.

"He'd order beer for me, and there's more of a personality that I'll miss as well."

Mrs. Crosby was recording for television at a studio in San Francisco when she learned of her husband's death and returned home at once.



MARRIED TWICE, Crosby is shown here with his second family, Kathryn, his wife, and his youngest son, Nathaniel 15, are seated and Harry, 19 and Mary Frances, 17, stand behind him. Crosby had four sons by his first wife, Dixie Lee, who died in 1952.

Crosby dies of heart attack while golfing in Madrid

Crosby's voice for years was almost synonymous with Christmas. During a December in Europe in World War II, Crosby's voice was broadcast to the German troops and they dubbed him "Der Bingle."

ONE OF A family of seven children, Crosby had seven children himself — four by his first wife, Dixie Lee, who died of cancer in 1952 after a marriage of 22 years, and three by Kathryn Grant who was 29 years younger than Bing when they wed in 1957.

An expert fisherman and hunter who went on safaris in Africa and hooked marlin off Baja California, Crosby was a golfer of almost professional skill, shooting in the low 70s until age put a creak in his swing.

Crosby's running gag feud with Hope and the pictures in which Crosby always won Dorothy Lamour in the finale was one of the trademarks of his career, along with his flamboyant dress, which was due in part to the fact he was color blind.

Among his brothers were Bob, who became a well known singer and bandleader in his own right, and Everett and Larry who helped manage Bing's career.

HE ATTENDED Gonzaga High School then studied law at Gonzaga University. He was a member of the freshman football team, the varsity baseball squad and the glee club.

Bing also worked as a clerk for a legal firm in off hours until one day he met Al Rinker, pianist and leader of a small dance band in need of a drummer. Crosby bought a set of trap drums on the installment plan, quit school and went on the road.

The band broke up in 1925 and Rinker and Crosby went into vaudeville, billed as "Two Boys and a Piano — Singing Songs Their Own Way."

One of their biggest boosters was Rinker's sister, Mildred, who went on to become one of the greatest of the blues singers, Mildred Bailey.

"If it hadn't been for Mildred," said Bing, "Al and I probably would have starved to death in less time than it takes to tell. She not only fed us, but hammered at her friends until they gave us jobs."

AT ONE MATINEE in San Francisco, bandleader Paul Whiteman caught their act and signed them. A third singer, Harry Barris, made it the Paul Whiteman Rhythm Boys, a trio which toured with Whiteman for three years including a movie, "The King of Jazz."

It was during this visit to Hollywood that Crosby met actress Dixie Lee who was already a celebrity in the film capital. Against the advice of her friends, she married the little known "Bing Croveny" as one paper called him in its story.

They had four sons, Gary, Lindsay and the twins, Dennis and Philip. The Crosby boys tried show business themselves but never approached their father's success.

CROSBY'S FIRST movie in which he starred was a short produced by Mack Sennett. In 1931 he signed a contract to sing on the radio for the Columbia Broadcasting System several nights a week and was an instant success.

He broke house records for 20 consecutive weeks singing on the stage of the Paramount Theater in New York where Sinatra years later was to have girls swooning in the aisles.

His big break in movies came with "The Big Broadcast of 1932" and during the depression years he was as much a part of the American scene as the popsicle.

BING RECALLED that Leo McCarey, an old race track and football pal, talked him into playing the part of the new priest opposite Barry Fitzgerald in "Going My Way."

"I told him the church simply wouldn't stand for that kind of casting. But Leo said it would. He told me his idea and when he was finished there wasn't a dry eye in the place."

Paramount Studios cast him in picture after picture including "Anything Goes," "High Society," "Blue Skies," "Holiday Inn" and "white Christmas."

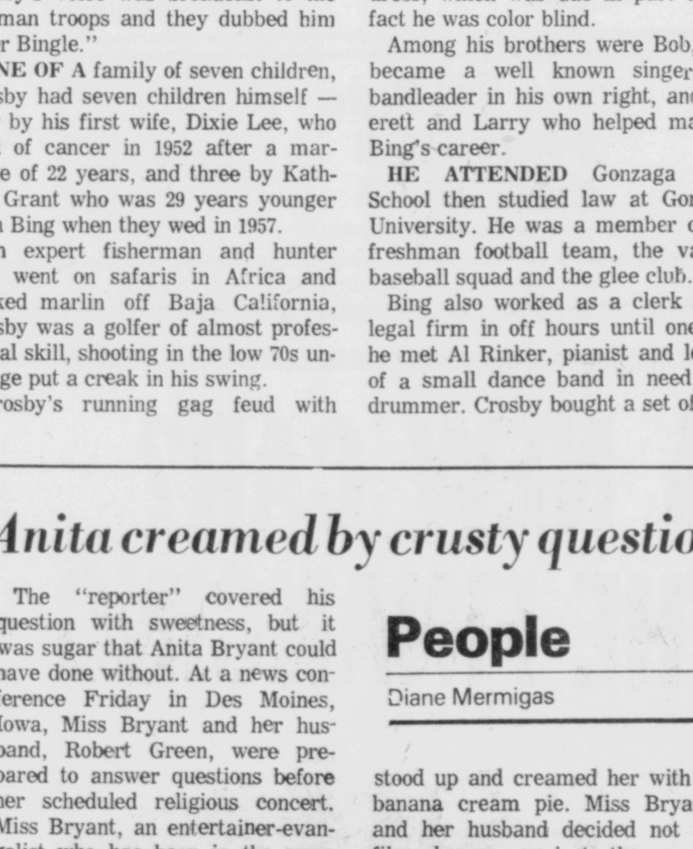
People

Diane Mermigas

The "reporter" covered his question with sweetness, but it was sugar that Anita Bryant could have done without. At a news conference Friday in Des Moines, Iowa, Miss Bryant and her husband, Robert Green, were prepared to answer questions before her scheduled religious concert. Miss Bryant, an entertainer-evangelist who has been in the news lately because of her stand on homosexuality, couldn't quite handle one question. A man from Minneapolis posing as a reporter stood up and creamed her with a banana cream pie. Miss Bryant and her husband decided not to file charges against the man, Thom Archon Higgins, who said he was a homosexual and had been directed to throw the pie by "my gods."



IN HIS FIRST VENTURE into serious acting, Crosby won an Oscar for his role as the young priest in "Going My Way." He starred in the film with Barry Fitzgerald and crooned "An Irish Lullaby" in one scene.

Second I-57 trial ordered to begin

A Cook County Circuit Court judge ruled Friday that news coverage of the I-57 murder trial of Henry Brisbon was not inflammatory and ordered the trial of another suspect, David "Muhammads" Sanders, to start Monday. Judge Frank W. Barbaro denied a defense motion to delay the trial for six months because of the publicity which surrounded the trial of Brisbon, 21, convicted last month of two of the three killings. Sanders' attorney James D. Montgomery, had argued a delay was needed "in radio broadcasts and 64 newspaper articles which he said supported his contention. The judge, however, ruled the news accounts were "not prejudicial." Rather, he said, "the reporting was largely factual, not inflammatory."

Hitchhiker fails lie tests

The hitchhiker who discovered 16-year old Debra Rosencrans bound and beaten in a forest preserve near Schiller Park has failed more than a dozen lie detector tests, investigators said Friday. The girl was found Sept. 6 by a man identified as Jerry Then, 23, Elk Grove Village. She died Sept. 16, but her identity remained unknown until Oct. 3. Then told investigators he was hiking through the suburb when he discovered the girl. Terry Sullivan, the assistant state's attorney, said Then failed polygraph tests administered by several different examiners including several different types of questions.

He dismissed reports that Then may have failed the tests because of medication he was receiving, saying, "He never told me he was on any medication." Sullivan said Then has been subpoened to appear before a Cook County Grand Jury investigating the Rosencrans murder, and has not been ruled out as a suspect in the case. Then's family complained he has been constantly harassed by investigators in connection with the girl's death.

Explosion in house kills one

At least one person was killed and two others injured Friday when an explosion, possibly caused by a natural gas leak, ripped through a private home on Chicago's West Side. One person was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Anne's Hospital one block from the scene of the explosion. Two others were being treated for cuts and bruises. Police said the explosion leveled the home.

Dead teen's family sues police

The family of a youth fatally shot by police in an alleged escape attempt last June filed a $4.75 million damage suit Friday. The father of John Neuman, 17, charged police used excessive force in trying to apprehend him. The suit also named Northwest Hospital, where Neuman later died, saying the hospital failed to give him proper medical care. Named in the suit are the two policemen involved, Philip Onesto and Robert Sims. Onesto shot Neuman June 11, as the youth ran handcuffed from the alley where he had been arrested for allegedly trying to steal a motorbike.

Final prison sites to be told soon

Gov. James R. Thompson, after meeting with legislators representing the five counties in the running for two new medium-security prisons, says he plans to announce the final sites Wednesday. The sites are close to Hillsboro in Montgomery County, Greenville in Bond, Centralia in Marion, Lawrenceville in Lawrence and Eddyville in Pope. Thompson, who met in half-hour segments with legislators from each of the four districts in which the counties lay, told reporters afterwards he would not say how he ranks the five in order of priority. But he said, "I haven't ruled out any of the five."

Ford, Kissinger to visit Peoria

Former President Gerald Ford and former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger will appear in Peoria Nov. 4 at $100-a-plate dinner honoring Rep. Robert Michel, organizers said Friday. Michel, a house GOP whip, is from Peoria and represents the 18th Congressional District.

Bakalis' aide seeks Dem spot for comptroller

CHICAGO (UPI) — Donald Eslick, a top aide to Comptroller Michael Bakalis, said Friday he wants the Democratic nomination for comptroller.

Eslick's announcement followed by one day Bakalis' decision to run for governor. In 1972 and 1976 Eslick asked party leaders to slate him for the comptroller's spot.

Eslick, 43, said he would "require no on-the-job training" because he understands the workings of the comptroller's office. "The people of Illinois can ill afford the risk of a comptroller candidate who is not intimately aware of the complexities of state finance."

HE HAS MANAGED the comptroller's legislative program and coordinated fiscal analyses.

Eslick has worked for the Illinois Board of Education, the superintendent of public instruction, former Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan and Michael Howlett's 1976 gubernatorial campaign. Eslick was an economics professor at Loyola University, the University of Illinois and Marquette University before joining government.

Eslick is the Democratic committeeman of Northfield Township. He and his wife Susie live in Northbrook.

Republican Bob Gray of Springfield is seeking his party's nomination for comptroller. Rep. Richard Luft, D-Pekin, is expected to enter the comptroller's race Monday.

Hospital rents oxygen equipment

In keeping with the trend toward home health care of patients after they have been discharged from a hospital, Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, now offers oxygen and intermittent positive pressure breating equipment to respiratory patients.

Anyone in need of the equipment can rent from the hospital usually at a lower cost than from medical surgical aupply companies, the hospital said.

The respiratory care department of the hospital will arrange for delivery and set up the equipment and a therapist will be assigned to check the patient's progress.

Patients may get additional information on home service by calling 437-5500, ext. 783.

Area 'men's club' raided by police mont, Elmhurst, told him it was $50 for intercourse, $50 for oral sex and $40 for masturbation.

The agent told her he wanted "the whole works." Then she removed her clothes and was arrested.

Four other women in the club and three club patrons were herded into the main lobby, luxuriously decorated with fine furniture, a large fish tank and a small bar. The women, most in their early 20s, waited nervously and joked with police.

THE MEN CROWDED next to the bar and were visibly shaken.

"I just stopped by for a cup of coffee. That's all. I was sitting here and then this (arrests) happened," said one man about 35.

"I'm the painter here. I was upstairs painting and came down for a few minutes to get a drink. That's all. You can call home and ask my wife. She knew I was here," another man said. "I better not see my name in the paper, I can tell you that right now. I know people in the city."

One of the women asked police if they wanted some champagne or beer," but they declined.

One woman, who was forced to dress quickly, complained she didn't have time to get her panties on.

THE WOMEN and Dunn were taken to the Cook County Sheriff's police headquarters in Maywood. All were released except Dunn and Ms. Rogers, who were held on a $1,000 bond each. Both were expected to be bonded out late Friday night. They are scheduled to appear in the Niles branch of the Cook County Circuit Court Nov. 21.

Dunn said the club's owners told me if I had any trouble, that it would be taken care of. I hope they're right."

Dunn said the owners told him they ran a massage parlor only and he had no idea that prostitution was taking place inside.

"I just keep my door shut and pay attention to what I am supposed to do (at the door)," he said.

Police tried once before to make a prostitution arrest, but failed after an undercover agent apparently was identified. The club opened in September.

The club advertises itself as an exclusive men's club that offers the company of a young lady for a fee of $20 for 30 minutes, plus a tip ranging between $20 and $65. Potential clients usually are screened, but no one asked for identification of the undercover agent Friday night.

Police made another prostitution arrest three weeks ago at a similar club called "Affairs," Elk Grove Township, which also opened last month.

A Chicago woman and Shiller Park man were charged in that case, which is scheduled for a preliminary hearing Monday in Niles.

For newspaper vendor, heist just business as usual

John Lampinen

Byline report

It created a lot of conversation Thursday night, but by Friday the glamor around the heist had faded into yesterday's news and few persons were talking about it.

It has faded even though bank officials revealed for the first time Friday that the cash had disappeared from a vault that was two stories below street level and was constantly monitored by four closed-circuit television cameras.

IT HAS FADED even though bank officials and the Federal Bureau of Investigation said they remain baffled by the disappearance, even though an FBI spokesman continued to say the loss could be "embezzlement, burglary, computer error — we don't know."

So Donald occupies his time inside his newsstand reading the paper.

Someone stops and asks if he's heard any rumors about the heist, and Donald looks up momentarily from the paper.

"No, I don't."

He looks back down at his paaper and reads. Finally, he says it is a "curious" thing. He puts the paper on top of the appropriate stack, and he grins.

"EVERYONE'S TEASING me. 'What did you do with the money,' " Donald says and he points his hands toward his chest and feigns a look of amazement. "If I have it, I wouldn't be here today."

A customer comes by and asks for a Sun-Times. Donald says he has no more, and the customr leaves without a word.

Everyday at about 2:30 p.m., Donald says with a nod, he takes his break and goes down the street for a few beers. He laughs and motions with his hands as if he were drinking.

But it is a long day, from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., before he can go home to Ravenswood and Addison where he lives with his mother and a dog. Usually he has to while away some of the time.

"I LOOK AT THE scenery," he says, and he lifts himself off his chair with the palms of his hands and gawks at a woman walking past "There's some very nice sceneries go by here."

Another customer stops to ask for a Sun-Times.

"I'm all out."

"How about a Daily Naws?"

"I'm all in." And he folds a paper, handing it to her and slipping the coins into a changer on his belt. He sits back down underneath the shelter.

"I have CP," he says. "You know what that is?"

Cerebral palsy?

"No. Crazy people." Donald laughs and claps his hands. "That's one for me."

SOME PERSONS really believe that. That is why Donald sells newspapers. He's tried to get better jobs, he says, but he never gets them.

"When they see me dumb, they won't hire me. I tried and tried and tried. Nothing. When they see me: 'Don't call us. We'll call you.' "

Donald taps a stack of newspapers and looks outside again toward the bank. It was big news when word of the heist was released Thursday. It meant a lot of sales. Crime, he says, is the biggest asset in his business.

Crimes, he says, sell newspapers.

So do people who never had a chance.

Harper bans disclosure of closed discussions

The Harper College Board has adopted a policy that prohibits board members from divulging what goes on in a closed-door session unless a quorum of the board has approved the disclosure.

The policy was adopted to protect board member David Tomchek from any suspicion that his affiliation with the Illinois Education Assn. — the state's largest teachers' union — would produce a conflict of interest when Harper was negotiating a contract for its faculty.

Tomchek works full-time as regional coordinator for the IEA. Harper's faculty is affiliated with the rival American Federation of Teachers. But members of the community had raised questions about Tomchek's "pro-labor bias" — to which he confesses.

"THERE WAS ANXIETY that I, as a union representative, was going to attend (Harper's confidential) negotiations and walk out and tell the president of the Harper faculty union what went on," Tomchek said. "I introduced this policy because I wanted to assure community members who had raised the question that I wasn't going to do that."

Tomchek introduced the policy in April when he was elected to the board. Then veteran board member Jessalyn Nicklas suggested it be broadened to include real estate acquisition, personnel matters, pending litigation and all other topics permitted to be discussed in closed-door sessions under Illinois law.

So Harper's attorneys redrafted the policy. Whereupon Mrs. Nicklas withdrew her support, because she came to believe that not everyone would interpret it as strictly as she had intended.

And board member Robert Moats voted against it because he said it is unenforceable.

AND THOSE WHO supported it agreed that, if it were not for Tomchek, Harper would not have the policy in the first place.

"I voted for it because of our own unique circumstance with David (Tomchek)," said trustee Joan Klussmann. "It's more comfortable for him to let the community know he's serious about (his responsibility to Harper)."

And Mrs. Klussmann, who knows about these things because she served on the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 school board and says she believes in the public's right to know, concluded, "It's not something I'd vote for, most likely, on another board. In another situation, I would have voted no."

Downtown underpass plan revised

MUCH OF THE opposition to the proposed underpass stems from the plans to not only run Arlington Heights Road under the railway tracks, but to also depress Northwest Highway to the same level as Arlington Heights Road. Lowering Northwest Highway will mean several businesses along the road will no longer have a road pass in front of them. It also will prohibit access to Northwest Highway from either direction at Evergreen Avenue.

Proposed detour routes during the two-year construction period also have drawn objections.

During phase one construction, the proposed detour calls for northbound traffic on Arlington Heights Road to go west on South Street, north on Evergreen Avenue and east on Eastman Street back to Arlington Heights Road. Motorists southbound on Arlington Heights Road will turn west on Eastman Street, go south on Vail Avenue and east on Grove Street back to Arlington Heights Road.

DURING THE second phase of constructon, the proposed detour calls for northbound motorists on Arlington Heights Road to go west on Sigwalt Street, north on Dunton Avenue and east on Eastman Street back to Arlington Heights Road. Southbound traffic on Arlington Heights Road will turn west on Eastman Street, turn south on Vail Avenue and go east on either Sigwalt or South streets to get back to Arlington Heights Road.

Also during phase two construction, traffic eastbound on Northwest Highway will turn south at Vail Avenue and go east on Sigwalt Street to the McKinley Avenue railroad crossing. Motorists westbound on Northwest Highway will turn north on Dryden Avenue and go west on Miner Street to Northwest Highway.

A special committee of downtown businessmen has been formed by Village Pres. James T. Ryan to help minimize the disruption of the central business district during construction of the underpass.

Named to the committee Friday were Pawelko, Irving Robbin, Bud Mills, Walter Aronson, Robert Nelson and Village Trustee August Bettman.

Ryan said the special committee will be involved in all preliminary planning for the underpass and closely will examine any problems related to traffic patterns, parking and other areas where negative impact may occur.

Politics discussed

"Suburban Politics and the Middle Years" will be discussed at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton Ave., by Paul Fischer, associate professor of politics and director of the Wood Institute for Local and Regional Studies at Lake Forest College.

Track sets open house

Arlington Park Race Track will sponsor an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. today with tours of the building and stable area, exhibition races and free refreshments, parking and comic books.

The event also will include talks with harness drivers and trainers and harness racing movies, Tom Rivera, public relations director for the track, said.

Participants are asked to enter the track through Gate 5 on Rohlwing Road, Rivera said.

Post time for the regular races is 8:15 p.m.

Library book sale

The Friends of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library will be selling books in front of the library, 500 N. Dunton St., today and Sunday.

Books will be on sale from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. In case of rain, the book sale will be moved to the lobby off the parking lot.

2 blood drives today

Blood drives will be conducted at two Arlington Heights churches today. The First Methodist Church, 1903 E. Euclid, will take donations from 9 a.m. to noon. Donors can call the church office at 255-5112 to schedule an appointment.

Southminster Presbyterian Church, 916 E. Central, will take donations from 9 a.m. to noon. Call 392-9572 to schedule an appointment.

Fire Dept. display

The Arlington Heights Fire Dept. will have displays and demonstrations at the Northpoint Shopping Center, Arlington Heights and Rand roads from 1 to 4 p.m. today and Sunday.

On display will be a fire engine and ambulance. There also will be demonsrations of the equipment.

At 2 p.m. Sunday Smokey the Bear will be visiting the center with information for children on fire safety and prevention. The programs are being presented as part of Fire Prevention Week.

Latin Festival today

A Latin American Festival of Arts will be today and Sunday at Surrey Ridge Shopping Center, 990 W. Algonquin Rd., Arlington Heights from noon to 6 p.m.

The festival, sponsored by the Northwest Opportunity Center Inc., will feature works of art and handicraft displays. Special attractions include a booth of homemade Latin-American foods, Mexican beer, a Mexican folk band and a continuous raffle where donated items will be given away.

All proceeds from the fair will go to assist the Northwest Opportunity Center, 410 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Ehrlichman gets reduced sentence

John Ehrlichman Friday was granted a reduction in his sentence for the Watergate Plumbers break-in and could leave federal prison in two weeks. Ehrlichman had been serving three concurrent terms of 20 months to five years for perjury and violating the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell Friday trimmed that to 42 months — making him eligible for parole Oct. 28 after one year in jail. Gesell's action came after Judge John Sirica on Oct. 4 granted Ehrlichman a reduction to 1 to 4 years from his original Watergate cover-up sentence of 30 months to eight years. Sirica had specified Ehrlichman's sentence run concurrently with his term for the plumbers' conviction.

Fallen power line kills 3, hurts 3

A scaffold yumped a 7,200-volt power line outside a fraternity house Friday, electrocuting three Oklahoma State University students working on a homecoming display. Three others were injured. Sparks flashed across the lawn of the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity house in Stillwater, Okla., as seven students hoisted the metal frame scaffold into position for stuffing crepe paper into a 30-foot replica of a castle. "It knocked four of the guys away from it and the other three got caught up somehow and couldn't let go," said Junior McClain, who saw the accident from the window of his room. The victims were Merle Wayne George, 17, of Manchester, Okla.; Kepin Brent Wilson, 21, of Beaver, Okla., and Randall D. Logan, 18, of Elk City, Okla. Steve Lemoyn Pope, 18, of Loyal, Okla., was in stable condition at a hospital and William H. Morgan, 18, and Theodore Tracy, 19, of Jerseyville, Ill., were treated and released.

Queen Elizabeth arrives in Ottawa

Queen Elizabeth arrived for a six-day visit to Canada's capital of Ottawa Friday to a warm welcome in chilly weather from thousands to start her final overseas tour marking her Silver Jubilee Year. The Queen and Prince Philip arrived aboard a Canadian Armed Forces Boeing 707 and was given a red-carpet welcome by a delegation headed by Governor-General and Madame Jules Leger and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. Some 3,000 well-wishers were at the airport to greet the queen. The 51-year-old monarch shook hands with several of the estimated 600 children who quietly lined a red carpet which has been laid on the tarmac.

Americans on yacht all right

Three Americans aboard a yacht which was rammed, fired on and intercepted in the South China sea radioed Friday they were "all OK" and under tow by Vietnamese boats into Saigon. A radio message monitored by an amateur ham radio operator in Bangkok reported that all three Americans aboard the yacht Brillig were safe. "We are all OK," a female voice from the ship said. "We are being towed to Saigon and should arrive there some time tomorrow. Please tell our relatives in the United States that we are all OK." We are peing escorted py three Vietnamese ships," the female voice said on the radio. The three Amricans were Cornelia Ann (Cricket) Dellenbaugh, 28, of Vero Beach, Fla.; Charles Affel, 30, of Philadelphia, and Leland Dickerman, in the late 20's, of Flagstaff, Ariz.

U.S., Panama clarify canal pact

In an effort to save the Panama Canal treaties from rejection, President Carter and Gen. Omar Torrijos formally agreed Friday the United States has the guaranteed right to defend the canal against "any aggression." Their joint interpretive statement also said the pacts will guarantee U.S. ships "head-of-the-line" waterway privileges in times of emergency, and, in a concession to Panama said U.S. defense rights do not permit American intervention . . . in the internal affairs of Panama." Carter and Torrijos issued the statement after a long, private White House meeting designed to put an end to fears that the treaties, as written, do not adequately safeguard U.S. rights to defend the waterway once Panama takes over or adequately ensure priority passage for American ships in wartime.

We're getting around more. So you'll get around better.
You'll be seeing a lot more of RTA's 234 bus.
RTA's route 234 used to be a "shuttle" bus connecting Wheeling with Mt. Prospect and Des Plaines C & NW railway stations during commuting hours.
Now it can do a lot more. Because now the 234 runs all day and on Saturdays.
That makes it very handy for getting to Wheeling High School, Randhurst Shopping Center, Holy Family Hospital and many other points of interest from Wheeling to Des Plaines.
So get around the easy way. For just 30 cents on the RTA's 234. And for another 30 cents you can get an RTA Universal Transfer and board any other RTA bus—including CTA services in Chicago—without paying an additional full fare.

'Country' attitude sour note for him

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Roger Dennis headed toward the stereo.

He lifted the dust cover without pausing.

"Let me put my record on."

There was no objection — none really had been invited — and Dennis placed the 45 on the turntable, guiding the needle to the outer edge with his fingers.

THE MUSIC started loudly, a little too loudly for Dennis' tastes, and he lowered the volume before retreating to a seat at the end of the sofa.

The record was what Dennis likes to call "pure country." It was loaded with traditional country twang and the traditionally simple country lyrics.

"She has to ration out her passion as she passes by the dresser, or she'll burn it out in ashes before she gets to me . . ."

Certainly, it could not be mistaken for pop music.

Dennis crossed his legs at the ankles of his pointed-toed cowboy boots and listened without saying a word, tapping the arm of the sofa with his fingers in time with the music.

HE HAD WRITTEN and recorded it. The title was "We Can't Quit," and it is the fourth record he has made, the one he is proudest of.

"That's what I think should be out there on them radio stations too instead of that damn middle-of-the-road stuff."

He said it almost defiantly.

There is a defiance about him. He is 32, and he lives far from Nashville in a comfortable suburban home in Hanover Park, but he makes no attempt to hide his southern accent. In fact, he tends to emphasize it with phrases such as "putting on the dog."

BUT HE IS most defiant when it comes to music. He is devoted to country. That is, "pure country."

It's not so much that he refuses to tolerate other kinds of music; it's that he is upset when those other kinds of music are dressed up and labeled country.

He took a sip of coffee from a large white cup marked "Roger."

"A year from now, they're going to take country music to the cleaners."

The "they" in question, Dennis said, are the radio stations, particularly the big country stations in Chicago.

In an effort to capture a bigger market, he said, "they" are taking music with a "down home beat," putting a little disco into it and calling the music "middle-of-the-road" or "crossover."

HE HAS BEEN trying to sell country since he was 20. That's when he tried his first two records.

And for years, he worked the clubs in between jobs as a truck driver. Now, he is a part-owner of a moving company in Des Plaines, and he has given up the appearances because he's afraid of a "local entertainer" tag.

But he hasn't given up his dream.

John Lampinen

Byline report

He cut another record, "We Can't Quit." It is his best, he thinks, and it could make it for him, and he could move down South, to a little place at the foot of the Smokey Mountains, where he'd ride horses in the mornings and work on music in the afternoons.

SOME STATIONS around the country, like one in Paris, Ill., and another in Brandenburg, Ken., have picked it up. But Dennis has had no success in Chicago.

The country stations here listened to it, and then said they wouldn't play it until they can statistically prove that people want to hear it, he said.

"It kind of makes you mad. You like country music, and you want to make a contribution to country music. You go to cut a record, and you want to make it just right, but then, when you do make it right, they don't play it. That's not fair.

"We're not synthesizers. We're people. Country music is gut. It's feel. They're creating an identity crisis in country music.

"I don't want it to come across that I'm peddling my record. I'm not. It's like anybody else. You have a dream."

THE ISSUE is much more important than his record, he said. Even if it got played and didn't go anywhere, it wouldn't be the end of his life, he said. The problem is that the pandering to "crossover" country is shutting off any chance for people like him, who won't compromise their music, to make it, he said.

Besides, he said, taking a sip from his cup, country music is the basis of America. That's where the country's roots are, he said.

He got up and headed toward the stereo.

"Want to hear the flip side?"

It was "The Uptown Hooker," a faster, bawdier little number that was still unmistakably country.

Dennis put it on and took a chair at the table. As the music started, he put a finger to his lip and smiled. It had taken him a year to write. Then, almost as if he were by himself, he began singing softly with it.

"She's an uptown hooker and a damned good looker, she turned my body to stone. She started messing with my mind and playing with my head and my emotions wouldn't leave me alone. . ."

When the song ended, Dennis smiled and, before speaking, extended a finger for emphasis. It was a different kind of country song, he said. It would give people a chance to laugh, he said. It might be something people would like, he said.

If they could hear it.

ROGER DENNIS lives and breathes country music, but the composer in Hanover Park finds that Chicago stations won't play his records. He'd like nothing better than to have his latest record make it big so he can move to the South where his kind of music is appreciated.

COOPERATIVE BLOOD REPLACEMENT PLAN 477-7500

'Playmate' prestige only brings grief

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI) — The exposure brought Lou Zivkovich a lot.

A free weekend in Hawaii, $1,000, the friendship of Mae West, offers of movie and television roles and marriage with Miss Arizona.

But it also brought him a divorce from his first wife, a running battle to keep his job as a high school gym teacher, a court fight over $8,000 in back pay and a $2 million lawsuit of his own against Playgirl magazine.

THAT WAS where Zivkovich got his exposure.

As the nude centerfold in July 1974.

The muscular Zivkovich, 35, went over big with the readers and was selected Playgirl's "man of the year." But he has been less than happy since and the repercussions continue.

A hearing was scheduled in Superior Court today on his suit against the school board of Apple Valley, a small town in the Mojave Desert about 75 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Zivkovich complained he lost $8,000 in pay because in the controversy over his appearance in the nude he lost the extra-pay duties that went with his job as a gym teacher at Apple Valley High School — chairman of the physical education department and coach of the tennis team.

HE SAID that before accepting the Playgirl offer — $1,000 and an expense paid weekend in Hawaii to model unclothed on the rocks and beaches — he asked a school district official whether there would be any objection and was told that "what a teacher does on his own time is his own business."

In the uproar that followed, the school board disagreed.

In October 1974, the board voted unanimously to fire Zivkovich. He appealed, and in January 1975, a three-member hearing panel upheld his position, saying that although he may have shown poor judgement, he was 'a responsible individual fit to serve as a teacher."

The publicity his legal battle generated brought offers of movie and television roles and the support and friendship of Miss West and director George Cukor.

BUT THE controversy, he said, also helped break up his marriage.

Since then, he met and married a former Miss Arizona, Sherry Love.

Still pending is his action against the school board and a $2 million suit against Playgirl, charging the magazine's text accompanying his photos was tasteless and untrue.

"If I had to do it over again," he said recently, "I wouldn't."

Time, progress tolled the bell for an old barn

It had stood for years in the pasturelands that are now called Buffalo Grove. It saw spring planting seasons blossom into fall harvests countless times, reigning as the stalwart amid acres of farmland. But time took its inevitable toll on the old barn. Hard Midwest winters and steamy summers under a baking sun weathered away the beams and rafters. And in the end progress stepped in, too. Timber built the countryside when farming was mid-America, but steel, concrete and "pre-fab" materials pushed aside the aging wooden structures. Modest glass panes were the farmer's window, but broken panes became "plexiglass" in modern new buildings. The farmlands yielded to bulldozers, the farm houses to subdivisions and shopping centers. The old barn is gone now, its legacy left to photographs and the memories of the old farmers whose fields became the suburbs.

Bakalis charged with using state funds for poll

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Comptroller Michael Bakalis spent $33,500 in state funds to have a research firm he used during his 1976 campaign conduct a poll on the popularity of the comptroller's office, two Republican state legislators charged Friday.

State representatives Roscoe Cunningham, R-Lawrenceville, and James Reilly, R-Jacksonville, said the poll was used to help lay the Democratic comptroller's political plans.

Bakalis announced Thursday he would seek the Democratic party's nomination to run next November against Republican Gov. James R. Thompson.

ALTHOUGH CUNNINGHAM said he knew about the poll in August, the statement was not released until Friday he said, because "we did not discover the broad implications of it until recently."

A Bakalis aide said the poll, conducted by Mid-America Research Associations of Chicago and Mount Prospect, was conducted last spring to determine if persons who do business with the state know the comptroller's office pays the state's bills.

The poll was of no political advantage, Tony Abel, Bakalis' press secretary said. Some of the findings showed hospital and nursing home operators were the most dissatisfied with the service they get in receiving payments from the state, Abel said.

Other findings, Abel said show some persons do not understand the duties of the office, saying some firms that do business with the state incorrectly believed the office prepares the state budget.

Cunningham, however, said the project was outside the constitutional duties of the comptroller.

"HOW CAN BAKALIS justify the use of more than $30,000 for this kind of questionable opinion sampling without solicitation, without authorization is a mystery to me," Cunningham said.

Both lawmakers called on Bakalis to make some public accounting of the need for the survey.

Abel said he prepared a report for the comptroller based on the results of the poll, but that at least one recommended a brochure sent to vendors who do business with the state explaining the comptroller's duties — was not acted upon.

Essays on safety may win grants

The Illinois Editor's Traffic Safety Seminar has invited Illinois high school seniors to compete for ten $500 scholarship grants for winners of the seminar's 12th traffic safety essay contest.

The scholarship grants will be awarded by the Chicago Motor Club to five boys and five girls. Twenty-five runners-up will receive $25 U.S. Savings Bonds from the motor club.

High school seniors enrolled in public, private and parochial schools in Illinois are eligible to submit essays on the topic, "Teen-age Traffic Accidents: How Can the Record Be Improved?"

The essay of 500 words or less must be submitted typewritten or neatly handwritten to Seminar Headquarters, 66 E. South Water St., Chicago, Ill. 60601, with a postmark no later than Dec. 31, 1977.

A committee headed by Paul D. Coffman, publisher of the Proviso Star-Sentinel, will be in charge of the contest. Final judging will be done by a panel of educators from the University of Illinois, headed by A.E. Florio, professor emeritus of safety education.

Winners will be announced at the seminar's annual meeting May 5, 1978, in Springfield.

GOP planning dinner-dance

An original show, "A Trunk Full of Dreams," directed by Edna Paukstis, Hoffman Estates, will highlight the 17th annual Elk Grove Township Regular Republican Organization dinner-dance Nov. 5 at Lancer's Restaurant.

Cocktails begin at 6 p.m. Dinner will be at 7:30 p.m., followed by the stage show and music by the Gerry Dittman band.

Tickets may be obtained from Linda Stevens, 253-6175, or at Republican Headquarters, 392-2580.

'Breathing easy' lecture

The Chicago Lung Assn. will present a program on "Breathing Easy" at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 27 at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton Ave.

Alane Harris, an education nursing instructor at Resurrection Hospital, Chicago, will discuss emphysema, chronic bronchitis and asthma and their effect upon the respiratory system.

Ecumenical spirit wanes as abortion debate grows

David E. Anderson

World of religion

In the fragile world of interfaith relations, a world with remarkable similarities to that of diplomacy, politeness is a key currency.

But as the debate over access to legalized abortions again has become heated, a growing number of Protestant and Jewish scholars have stopped being polite and begun to criticize the Roman Catholic Church in increasingly sharp tones.

The most recent example was in the form of a statement called "A Call to Concern," being circulated for signatures by a group of predominantly Protestant and Jewish ethicists.

"We are saddened by the heavy institutional involvement of the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in a campaign to enact religiously based anti-abortion commitments into law, and we view this as a serious threat to religious liberty and freedom of conscience," the statement said.

THE STATEMENT already has drawn 218 signatures, including a handful of Roman Catholic signers, and will appear in such magazines as the Christian Century and Christianity and Crisis, seeking more supporters.

In issuing the statement and singling out what they call the "institutional involvement" of the Catholic Church in the abortion ban effort, the signers of the statement, such as Dean J. Philip Wogaman of Wesley Theological Seminary, acknowledge they are taking an "ecumenical risk."

Certainly by singling out with such candor the Catholic church on a question the bishops maintain is not just a Catholic issue, the signers maintain those risks already have been assumed by the anit-abortion absolutists "who have pressed the absolutist position on religious grounds."

Rabbi Eugene Borowitz, one of the original drafters of the statement, suggests that the statement means "we have reached a new stage in ecumenism . . ."

"The time has come for believers to stop repressing their sharp differences of opinion with others because they do not wish to obscure how closely they stand to them on many other matters," he said.

NBC special film wins '77 'Angel'

Dave Ibata

Notes on religion

The NBC-TV special, "Jesus of Nazareth," a six-hour film directed by Franco Zeffirelli, has received the top award in the first Religion in Media "Angel" awards.

The movie, which is expected to be run again each Easter season, was honored for Outstanding Achievement in Media at a ceremony in Los Angeles hosted by actor Dean Jones Thursday.

Religion in Media, a nondenominational, predominantly evangelical Christian organization, presented bronze angel statues to 30 winners in motion picture, television, radio, journalism and special media categories.

The ceremony was taped for telecast at a later date.

Major television awards went to "Merv Griffin in the Holy Land," for travel; "The Family and Other Living Things," starrring the Osmond Family, for variety; and "New Religions: Holiness or Heresy," an ABC News Closeup, for documentary.

Concert series begins

The Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church will present "Praise Song," the first of the church's Festival Concert Series at 5 p.m. today and 5 and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

A mass concert choir, vocal groups and a full, 40-piece orchestra will perform at the church, 1331 N. Belmont Ave., Arlington Heights. The free concert is open to the public.

Jewish Gospel coming

The Chicago Jewish Gospel Music Group of the Jews for Jesus will perform at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Lutheran Church of the Living Christ, 1400 Arlington Dr., Hanover Park.

Miss U.S.A. on radio

Karen Morrison, 1974 winner of the Miss U.S.A. contest, will speak at 5 p.m. Sunday on the telecast, "An Hour of Good News," on WTTW-TV, Channel 11.

Ms. Morrison, of St. Charles, now is involved with Sharing Ministries in Aurora.

Also appearing on the program as principal speaker will be the Rev. David Allan Hubbard, president of Fuller Theological Seminary, Pasadena, Calif. Hubbard will speak on the topic, "How Free Is Your God?"

Businessmen host author

The Christian Businessmen's Committee of Chicago will host author D. Stuart Briscoe and singers Phil and Myrna White at their fall invitational luncheon Monday in Des Plaines.

The meeting, which will include participants from the Des Plaines and Rolling Meadows chapters of the businessmen's committee, will begin at 11:45 a.m. at the Seven Eagles Restaurant, 1050 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

Registration at $6 a person is required. Tables of 10 are available with seating capacity of 330 persons. Reservations may be made by contacting Warren F. Moore at 391-2837, or 823-8372 at night.

The Monday luncheon will take the place of October meetings scheduled for the Des Plaines and Rolling Meadows chapters.

At the meeting, Briscoe will speak on "The Pursuit of Happiness."

Trinity College concerts

Trinity College in Deerfield will sponsor two concerts at the campus this month and in November.

Singer-songwriter Pete Carlson will appear in concert, at Larson Gym at 8 p.m. Friday. Lamb, a Messianic Jewish singing duo, will appear at 8 p.m. Nov. 11.

Tickets for both events are $1.50 for adults and $1 for children and students. For ticket information, contact Kathy Balmer, Trinity College, 945-6700 ext. 250.

Recall proposal useless

A proposed recall ordinance offered to Wheeling officials by Village Atty. Alan Garfield borders on the absurd.

As discussed at a recent village board meeting, the proposed law would be virtually useless in removing a village official whose actions a majority of Wheeling voters disapprove.

Not only is the proposed law of limited value, it reflects an apparent concern on the part of the village officials who have already become unpopular with a large portion of voters since they were elected last May.

During the April election both village political slates promised to enact a provision for recall of village officials who abuse their powers.

The recall provision was promised to residents if they approved a referendum during the same election that would give home-rule authority to Wheeling. With the expanded government powers afforded by home rule status, a provision to recall officials who abuse those powers was deemed necessary.

However, the Garfield proposal is only a shadow of what is needed.

The recall ordinance, as proposed, would not take effect until 1979 — the next village election. The current board would be immune from recall efforts.

In addition, Garfield's proposal calls for the entire village board to be recalled and not specific individuals. This would "tend to stop political actions," he says.

Finally, under the ordinance a recall effort could not be launched unless the officials had actually done "something punishable by law."

If this kind of recall ordinance had been in effect in Wisconsin this year, voters in Madison could not have recalled the judge who said rape under some circumstances is normal. Surely Judge Archie Simenson did not break the law with that ruling, but he did outrage a majority of voters.

A strong recall law in Wheeling should offer voters the same power that Wisconsin voters exercised in the Simenson case. Village officials should not settle for political expediency in enacting such a law.

Small clubhouse enough for starters

A golf course needs a clubhouse, but the Arlington Heights Park District ought to take care that it doesn't build more clubhouse than it needs.

The park district has postponed a decision on whether to build a $620,000 clubhouse for the golf course being built on land formerly part of the Nike Base on Central Road after receiving protests from citizens. The $620,000 clubhouse is much larger than the $200,000 facility proposed in last year's bond referendum which authorized funds for the golf course project.

In considering the size of the clubhouse, park district officials should heed the arguments of the protesting taxpayers, who want to see the smaller facility built and extra golf course revenues used to abate taxes.

The smaller clubhouse plan calls for a snack bar, office and pro shop. As plans expanded, a dining room, nursery and apartment for the manager were added.

In justifying the larger clubhouse, park district officials claim the dining room will be needed to attract corporate golf outings. However, the park district has no marketing studies to show that the dining room will attract such events.

The park district should build the smaller clubhouse, thus living up to the terms of the referendum approved by the voters and make the building expandable if future revenues become available and evidence proves that a larger facility is needed.

Taxpayers have been generous in approving the golf course referendum but are fully justified in demanding that the park district live up to its part of the bargain.

Racism's brutality hurts whites equally with blacks

Paul Greenberg

Choosing not to avail itself of the usual protections against self-incrimination, the White House of its own volition has been sending out summaries of the Justice Department's brief in favor of Reverse Discrimination. Though of course that policy is never referred to by so clear a name. One of the hallmarks of racially inspired tracts of a certain level of sophistication is that the authors usually have enough shame not to call their purpose by its right name.

One recalls how Southern segs suddenly developed a fondness for "neighborhood schools" once it was no longer legally possible to bus black kids past their neighborhood schools. Now the Carter Administration says it isn't advocating "racial quotas" but "minority-sensitive programs."

What has inspired this rush to euphemism, that first and best refuge of the unacceptable thesis, is The Regents of the University of California, v. Bakke, a case now bearing down on the Supreme Court of the United States with irrepressible constitutional force.

THE COURT MANAGED to evade the issue the first time it was presented, but it's back. That issue is whether it is constitutional to discriminate on the ground of race in admissions to a public institution like the University of California's medical school at Davis. One Allan Bakke claims that 16 places were set aside at the medical school for which he, being a white of Norwegian ancestry, was not eligible.

The state Supreme Court in California agreed with Bakke's claim of racial discrimination. The Justice Department doesn't agree — on a variety of legal grounds that add up to the biggest ball of doublespeak since Leonid Brezhnev's last public address. To try to sum it up — well, to give the flavor of its case — here are some of the distinguished James Crow arguments forwarded by the White House in a press release:

• If Bakke is allowed a place at medical school, all government programs to aid minorities will be endangered right down to "the Ethnic Heritage Studies Program, special programs for the aging, science education improvement and minority access to research career programs."

One name for this specimen of argumentation is The Big Scare.

• BAKKE WASN'T denied a place in medical school because of unconstitutional quotas but because of a constitutional "affirmative action" program.

Euphemism again.

• It is not clear that these 16 places were set aside for members of only certain ethnic groups and others excluded.

It was clear enough to the dean of the medical school, who testified to this special admissions practice, and certainly to Bakke. And to the California Supreme Court, including the lone dissenter. Even he seemed to acknowledge that Bakke was discriminated against but upheld that practice in order to make up for past discrimination against those of another race.

• "A GRADE POINT average of 2.6 produced by a minority applicant may indicate every bit as much potential to be a physician as a 3.0 average by a white applicant, because the minority applicant has demonstrated not only the ability to succeed in obtaining grades but also the determination and ability to overcome non-academic hurdles."

The operative word in this kind of reasoning is may. If the black applicant comes from a middle-class, academic family and the white from a poor rural background with no academic connections, the difference in their grade point averages may indicate something quite different from what is assumed by the Justice Department.

One wonders why race as such should be a consideration in these comparisons. Apart from the constitutional question such as criterion raises, race as such would seem a pretty simple-minded test in a complex society like this one.

The argument in favor of Reverse Discrimination comes too close to replacing the individual's rights with those of his group or class. As long as the races are represented in some proportion that seems fair to some bureacrat, the individual would seem to have no claim. That is the antithesis of what America ought to be about. The aim of racial integration, or at least one aim, was to give the individual a chance regardless of his race — not because of it. That's too much like the old system.

THIS ADMINISTRATION'S secretary of health, education and welfare gave a commencement speech not long ago in which he too kind of defended quotos by some other name. But he ended that speech with a grand peroration that, perhaps unconsciously, refuted all the mush that went before. However, he meant it, this is what he said and it deserves repeating now:

"Above all, let us remember this: When we arbitrarily deny a young man the opportunity to develop his talents to their fullest, we are subtly brutalizing him. When we force a young woman unfairly to lower her expectations, we are subtly crushing her. And those are offenses that a society in search of justice must not tolerate."

Well, Allan Bakke is a young man with talents to develop and arbitrarily to deny him the opportunity to develop those talents is to brutalize him, too, and none too subtly. ('Sorry, boy, those 16 places are reserved for another race.') Racism is no prettier, and no less brutal or frustrating, when it is practiced against whites. It is an offense that a society in search of justice — and merit and competence and opportunity, too — must not tolerate.

Assessment hike eats up a tax decrease

Some local facts and figures:

The Elk Grove Township Assessor hints at a 28 per cent increase in the township's assessment for 1977.

School District 57 has decided to lower their 1977 tax rate from $2.60 per $100 of assessed value to $2.55, a reduction of about 2 per cent, thus suggesting "a $5 saving for residents whose homes are assessed at $10,000."

Three very recent sales in my immediate area indicate an average sale of $59,000. They had an average assessed value of $6,631 for 1976.

Assessor Tully had successfully lobbied to reduce the residential assement level from 22 per cent of market value to 16 per cent of market value, a decrease of about 37 per cent.

• The average 1976 assessed value of the three sales was $6,631.

• The 1976 state equalizer was 1.4153.

• District 57's rate was $2.60 per $100 of assessment.

So . . .

$6,631 times 1.4153 times .026 equals $244.

The sale properties paid about $244 as their share of District 57's school tax for 1976.

So far, so good, but . . .

• Using 57's 1977 rate of $2.55 per $100 of assessed value;

• And Tully's 16 per cent of market value ($59,000 times 16 per cent);

• We now have an assessed value of $9,440.

• At 22 per cent of market it would have been $17,980. Resulting in . . .

A tax bill of $340 ($9,440 times 1.4153 times .0255 equals $340) as compared to a bill of $468 if the assessment had remained 22 per cent.

Tully deserves some credit for the decrease.

However, because of the 1977 assessment, the $349 bill for Dist. 57 on a $59,000 home is $96 more! than the $244 bill on the same home using the 1976 assessment.

Where it the $5 saving? It would be there if the tax rate was cut from $2.60 to $1.79.

Isn't it interesting how an 81 cent cut in the school tax rate would result in a $100 decrease in a possible tax bill? Too bad it's only going to be five cents.

More on Miner

The Chatelaine Homeowners Association is to be congratulated for providing a simple solution to a complex problem.

The Chatelaine Homeowners Association is "flattered that Roosevelt wants to come to Arlington." Homeowners in the Miner area are not.

The Chatelaine Homeowners Association doesn't see Roosevelt creating a hazardous traffic situation. The people in the Miner area do.

"The directors of the Chatelaine Homeowners Association also agreed that if Rand or Berkley School had to be closed, they would like to see Roosevelt University there."

The Arlington Heights District 25 Board of Education can easily satisfy both the Chatelaine homeowners living around Rand Junior High and the people living around Miner Junior High by closing Rand and leasing it to Roosevelt.

There should be no problem in doing this. The preliminary report issued by District 25 said that they considered that all four junior high school buildings were good, serviceable buildings in excellent state of repair. And the first several board meetings stressed that District 25 Board of Education would consider closing any one of the four buildings and leaving the other three open.

She protests 'unfair' traffic ticket

Three weeks ago, on a lovely Sunday afternoon, I was driving home from Prince of Peace Lutheran Church. Remembering that I had some planting projects to do at home, I headed over to Frank's Nursery Supply.

After picking up the needed items, I proceeded towards the intersection of 58 and 72. As I approached the light on 58 the right turn arrow was yellow — I slowed down to check the intersection and proceeded to make my turn. I was approaching the Presbyterian Church when I saw the squad behind me with lights blinking and uulled off the road. I honestly felt he was going to go by on his way to an emergency — then, he stopped in back of me. My first thoughts were that one of my tail lights was out. He asked to see my license and at this point I was in such a state of nerves I had trouble locating it. He informed me that I had made a right turn on a red light without stopping. I explained that my last glimpse of the light was a yellow arrow. I am keenly aware of the intersection's dangers. I never proceed through it — even on a green light — without checking for turning cars or oncoming traffic. Unfortunately, this was my undoing. In my zeal to check for safe turning I obviously missed the changing of the arrow. I must admit by this time I was in tears and shaking like a leaf so I was not too coherent with the officer.

Under the circumstances - a warm, sunny Sunday afternoon — traffic "light" (certainly not medium as the ticket indicates) and there definitely was no action on my part which endangered person or property, I feel a discussion and warning would have sufficed. This was only the second ticket I had received in almost 20 years of driving, 17 plus as a resident of Hoffman Estates.

I would very much like to appear in Court on October 28 to protest the ticket, but I am holding down two jobs. The first is my pre-school class responsibilities to 42 children and the second as a companion to an 88 year old lady.

Neither job gives me the freedom of taking time off for anything but illness. I explained this to the officer.

The reason I am so indignant about this ticket is that I live on Ashland Street, near Conant High School, and I daily see maniacal drivers and outrageously dangerous maneuvers with cars. We have over a dozen small children on our street who are in jeopardy of life and limb. A neighbor, who lives on the corner, has permanent tire tracks across her parkways and lawn. In fact, most corner houses in this area have been similarly misused and scarred. This past summer other neighbors witnessed two youths breaking the glass on our gas lamp with what appeared to be a screwdriver. A youth on a motorcycle frightened my daughter and friend, who were parked out in front of our house, when in broad daylight he rode up the parkway, across the lawn and down our driveway. Another neighbor had a basement window blown out as someone taped a firecracker to it and lit it. The straw that breaks the camel's back is that not too long ago the people next door were ticketed for curb parking out in front of their house on this busy school access street.

Indignant — poor choice of words — I am furious. Let's quit harassing the honest, hard-working citizens of Hoffman Estates, who are human beings and occasionally do make mistakes, that are unpremeditated and certainly not hazardous to other people. Let's get after the people who risk our children's lives and who purposefully damage and destroy property.

The police should let us know when we are wrong — keep us on our toes — but let's start playing "cops and robbers" with the "robbers."

Unsinkable Connally off on GOP nomination trail

by GODFREY SPERLING JR.

The irrepressible, unsinkable John Connally apparently is off the mark first as a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980.

He has not announced his candidacy. But this is the conclusion observers now are drawing as Connally discloses he has put together a "political action group" to help him coordinate his mini-campaign next year.

Connally, who has only recently survived a heavy barrage of charges about his political ethics (he was acquitted two years ago of political-bribery accusations brought against him by the Watergate special prosecutor), is clearly bidding to become the "early runner" for the opportunity to challenge President Carter three years from now.

CONNALLY'S stumping plans, which will take him all over the United States and into almost every state, are ostensibly a completely public-spirited effort on his part to help Republican candidates in off-year general elections...

But the ebullient former Texas governor and U.S. Treasury secretary admitted to a group of reporters at breakfast the other day that this speaking tour might end in a decision to make a run for the presidency.

John Connally

Reporters were reminded of Richard Nixon's strenuous effort in 1966 on behalf of GOP congressional candidates. The political allies Nixon made on this assignment helped him immeasurably in his bid for the 1968 presidential nomination.

A recent Christian Science Monitor survey of GOP state leaders gave considerable support to the credibility of the idea that Connally's image is sufficiently improved now for his candidacy to be acceptable to those who run the party.

WHILE SOME 100 state chairmen and national committee persons said Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson , former President Gerald Ford, and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan were the "most likely" presidential nominees in 1980, there were 30 of the above state leaders who listed Mr. Connally as a second or third choice for the nomination.

As he talked with reporters in Washington, Connally sounded as though the elections were just a few days away, and gave both the President and the Democratic Congress a good going over.

He said that Carter was bringing only political and economic instability to the country, and he charged the Congress with show-off tactics and complete indirection. "They're like a bunch of cockroaches," he said of the Congress. "What they fall into, they mess up."

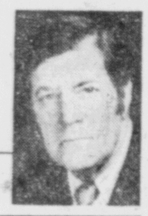
Lance affair warning to Senate

Clark Mollenhoff

Watch on Washington



The Bert Lance affair should alert the public and Congress to the inadequacy of the Senate confirmation process that too frequently results in superficial investigation before approval of presidential nominees.

The highest priority should be placed on establishing effective investigative machinery in the Senate so the committees with confirmation responsibilities for cabinet officers and other high-level posts are not dependent upon the executive branch for information.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman and ranking Republican on the Government Affairs Committee, have been frank in admitting responsibility for the pro forma confirmation process in the nomination of Lance as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

RIBICOFF NOTED that before the controversy over Lance in late July, he and Sen. Percy had approved a report that was critical of the general performance of regulatory agencies and had noted the superficiality of the investigations of those named by various presidents to head the regulatory agencies.

The Connecticut senator said it is a rare case when a Senate committee does any more than a superficial investigation of the persons the president nominates for Cabinet posts, subcabinet jobs, the regulatory agencies or such other power posts as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Yet it is those nominated and confirmed to these high-level positions on whom the president and the public must depend to look out for the public interest against powerful industry and political lobbying groups that are constantly seeking to influence the rule-making and administrative decisions of the regulators.

PART OF THE problem, as Sen. Ribicoff sees it, is that the various congressional committees with confirmation responsibilities over specific presidential appointees simply do not have the kind of investigative staff necessary to go behind the cover-ups or deceptions of the executive branch agencies that take place with and without the approval of the White House.

SELDOM CAN a Senate committee count on the Federal Bureau of Investigation to do more than a cursory examination of anyone the president has named as his choice for a Cabinet post, unless the nominee's known public record is so marred with documented improprieties that it is impossible to avoid making further inquiry.

In addition, agencies with evidence of illegal or improper activities involving a presidential nominee frequently hide the full record from the FBI or try to gloss over the problem.

And, even in those cases where the committee with confirmation responsibility is told all of the facts, it is rare that a senator will be motivaed to start a political fuss with a popular new president unless he has an air-tight case of gross impropriety locked in his file.

THE FACT THAT the committee with confirmation responsibility is usually the same committee with operational oversight responsibility creates a pressure for a cozy relationship that is inconsistent with objective arms'-distance decisions. It often means the staff members are reluctant to challenge seriously, and possibly anger, a cabinet officer or other high official they must later deal with.

RIBICOFF AND Percy believe that the way around these impedients to depth confirmation investigations is to establish one committee with the personnel and prime responsibility of challenging and getting behind the investigations and conclusions of the FBI, the Comptroller of the Currency, or other executive branch agencies or departments.

In pushing for support of this view, Sen. Ribicoff notes it is always embarrassing for a president to find himself with the choice of admitting extreme laxity as the alternative to taking part in a cover-up for a political friend.

Even in the wake of Watergate, the knowledge of superficial con firmation investigations caused persons with questionable activities in their pasts to take a chance that they would not be found out or they could get by with half truths and a big public relations push.

The Lance affair demonstrated theat superficial confirmation investigations by the Senate are no favor for a president, and are in fact a disservice to the president and his party.

Her dilemma: how to throw phone away

Dorothy Meyer

A month or so ago, while I was trying to stay awake through the 2:40 a.m. ending of a late television movie, I sort of heard the tag-end of a semi-commercial message. That's the kind that starts, "And now, an editorial opinion expressed by Herman Schmartzig, Channel X executive vice president in charge of expressing editorial opinion."

And I thought I heard the guy say something about the recent development of a fully automated "telephone selling machine" that would make junk calls even cheaper than junk mail.

I wasn't sure if I was hearing things due to the late hour or if I'd died and gone to hell during a used car commercial. So I went to bed and had nightmares about automated commercials via my telephone.

THEN JUST THIS week I read something that confirmed my worst gone-to-hell fears but tempered, thank heavens, by intervention from — of all places — Congress!

Yes, there is a new gadget on the market which will automatically make your telephone ring and give you a computerized sales pitch. However, both the Senate and the House were this week presented with identical bills to "limit unsolicited commercial advertising by telephone."

Now I'm wondering if I've died and gone to heaven instead of that other place.

But here it is right in front of me on non-asbestos newsprint: Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Sen. Wendell Anderson, D-Minn., said they were introducing their identical bills "because the volume of advertising calls is already too high." And let's hear it for good old Les and Wendell.

OF COURSE, this obnoxious new gadget isn't all THAT new—my phone already automatically rings when I don't want it to. But the way it is now I can at least tell a human being where to head when I answer an "unsolicited commercial advertisement."

My favorite ploy is to confuse the caller with a shot of "Haben sie Espanol," or "Sprechen sie Amerikaner, por favor," especially when my dinner, bath or the World Series is interrupted with a survey that turns out to be a spiel for a cemetery lot.

But how can I manage an automated nonperson?

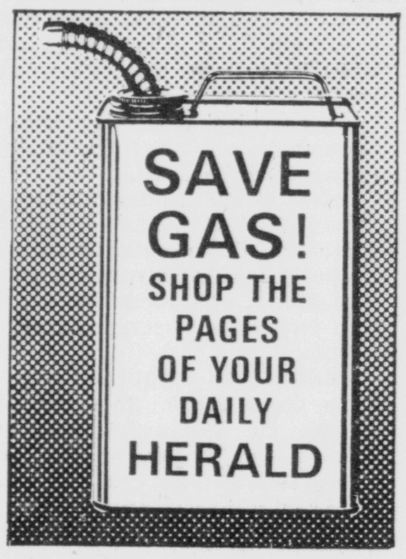
If I get cute with my multilingual terminal German, the computer will probably whirr while and say, "Ja wohl, Senor, voulez-vous wall-to-wall carpeting?" or "Bon jour, gefallt eins la petit tombstone?"

FURTHERMORE, there has been a personality clash between me and anything automatic since we first met — when supermarkets tried the do-it-yourself coffee grinders, the one I used not only to grind up the coffee but also the bag and my left glove.

I just know that the computer programmed to call me will get the hiccups and my phone will ring every 30 seconds.And it will get a.m. and p.m. mixed up and call me at three in the morning instead of three in the afternoon when I'm safe at work.

But will I be save, even at work?

What if — excuse me, I have to answer the phone . . .



The odd Oregon Vortex: is it cosmic or cosmetic?

Tom Tiede

GOLD HILL, Oregon — The story is that the Indians were the first to be confounded by the "Oregon Vortex." It's said they noted that no birds would nest in the area, and that the trunks of the trees therein leaned queerly to the north. Reportedly, the Indians avoided the region as "forbidden ground."

Years later, in the early 1900s, a white man named John Lister noticed the same peculiar conditions. Only he did not avoid the mystery. He purchased the hunk of land here, hard by Sardine Creek, he decided that the center of the property was influenced by an unknown force, and promoted it as a tourist attraction.

Since then, hundreds of thousands of visitors have paid up to $2 apiece to see for themselves the enigma of the Oregon Vortex. And the enigma is seldom disappointing. The present property owner, Ernie Cooper, says some customers have become so awed by the vortex that "one lady fainted dead away and we had to call an ambulance."

ACCORDING TO Cooper, whose authority is Lister, the vortex is a 165-foot circle in which the laws of perspective and nature are suspended. Lister said the vortex is "a whirlpool of force." What force? Cooper can't say. But he does say the vortex force is a basic form of the universe, from the galaxy to the atom.

Outside the force here, Cooper says all is normal. Inside, however, "everything is disarranged." Tourists find that they often feel heavier, that they have a tendency to incline 7.5 degrees north, that they are shorter when they face south than they are facing north. Cooper swears it's not just imagination; "It's the force."

Cooper says the force is present throughout the affected circle. But it is particularly noticeable inside a so-called "House of Mystery" which sits on the property. The house used to be a tool shed for gold miners; when mining operations ceased along the creek, the neglected shed slid down a hill to its present position.

The position of the shed is now haphazard. Its roof goes one way, its floor another, and the walls cave both in and out. Inside, a 25-pound ball hangs at what appears to be an angle, a plumb line is apparently bowed opposite magnetic north, and, in a slap at Isaac Newton, a broom can be balanced other than straight up and down.

THEN, TOO, AS the tour guide points out, the House of Mystery can actually control the size of human inhabitants. When two tourists stand outside the house, the one to the South is taller; when the tourists change positions, the smaller one suddenly becomes the taller, usually — as photographs indicate — by four full inches or more.

Naturally, the tourists are impressed. Cooper says visitors are often skeptical at first, "but then they see it for themselves." Oh, there are frauds of this kind, Cooper admits, "some people try to make a buck any way they can." But as for the Oregon Vortex, says its owner, it is a genuine, authentic geophysical fun house.

But is it? Several scientists who have visited the site with measuring equipment say it is not. A spokesman for the Oregon State Department of Geology and Mineral Industries (DGMI) says it is "merely an optical illusion, or disillusion." It is a good show, the geologists say, and a "gold mine for its owners, but it's not real."

Instead, says Earl Nixon, former director of the DGMI, the vortex is a place without optical uniformity. Nixon says this lack of planes of reference is most confusing to the human mind. He says people are used to seeing level horizons, squared corners, vertical buildings, etc. Without this data, the brain can be tricked.

A MEASURING device, however, isn't easily fooled. The state DGMI says accurate measurements of vortex inclinations show that, in fact, they are plumb. Nixon says people do not incline north here, except by the power of suggestion; his measurements indicate that people stand upright in the vortex, and the angled plumb lines are straight.

"We have tried to tell people this for years," says DGMI officer Ralph Mason. "Earl Nixon wrote about it first in 1940. Other scientists have agreed with him with regularity. Still, people continue to believe something funny is going on in the vortex. I guess they just like to believe in mysterious forces and all that."

There is a quotation from Charles Kettering posted at the gate to the grounds here. It reads: "We know practically nothing about anyting." That, says a tour guide, is a pretty good description of the Oregon Vortex. It is also a sound explanation of why, if there are always houses of mystery, there will always be tourists.

Gypsies bid farewell to their 'king'

by KURT BAER

A centry-old, horse-drawn hearse bore the brass coffin to its final resting place, as a three-piece band led the procession of mourners that circled in front of the Forest Home Cemetery, Forest Park.

Several hundred gypsies had come to pay their last respects to Peter Johns, 46, also know by his gypsy name, Sphiro.

Many carried beer and whiskey to drink farewell to their late leader.

AS THEY DRANK they poured beer out onto the ground in front of Johns' tomb. "It is a custom that is continued generation to generation. What it means, I can't say anymore," Frank Miller, a life-long friend of Johns, said.

Whether a king, or just a neighbor in Chicago's gypsy community of 5,000 persons, Johns was known and liked, said Miller.

"He was a member of the council that tries to help gypsies understand the American ways," said another. "Many of us are poorly educated, others do not read or write English. Some of us do good; others not good."

Some deny there was ever a king among Chicago's gypsies, but others were whispering Friday about who will succeed Johns and whether there will be a struggle for power.

The Gypsies guard their customs and traditions. Outsiders often view them with suspicion, distrust or even fear. But the gypsy life is not always gay, nor is every gypsy dishonest.

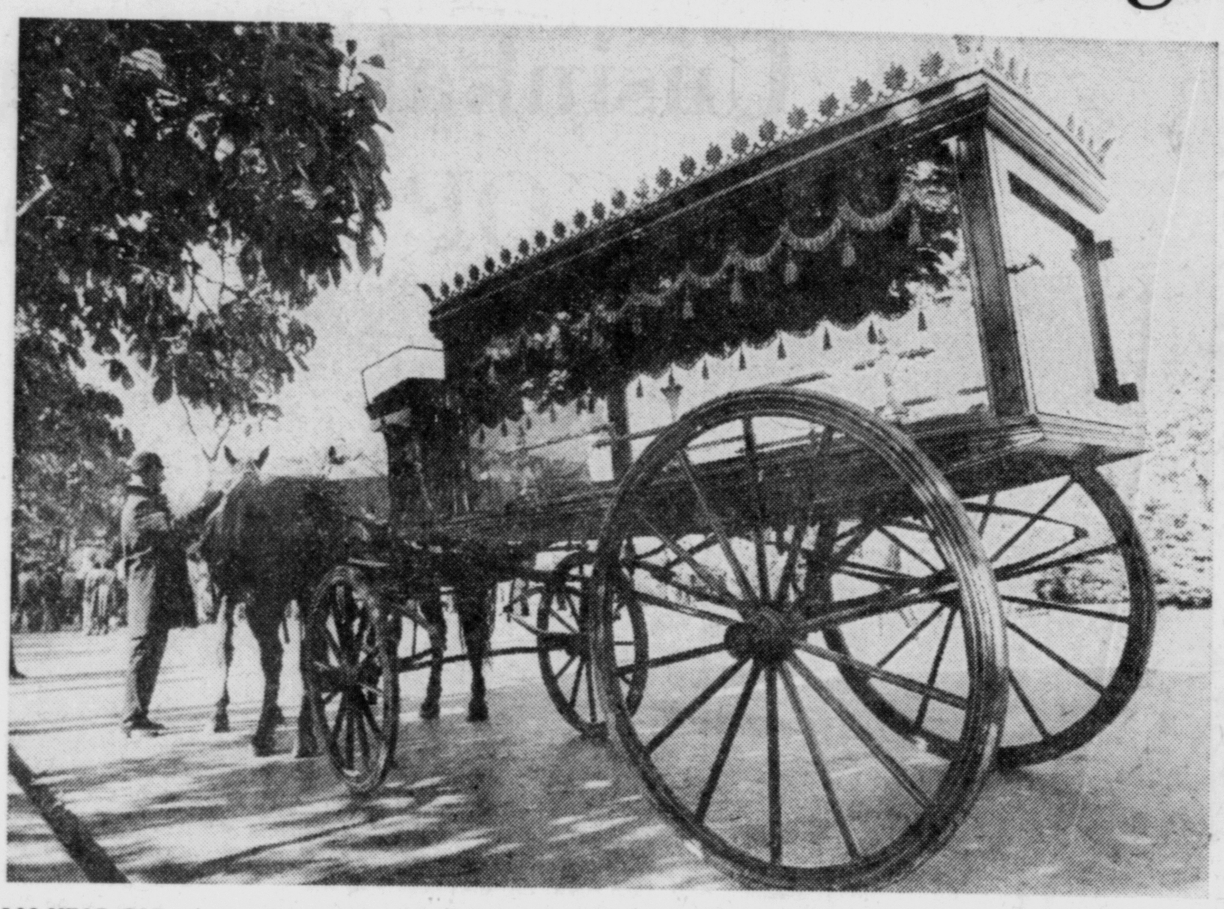
"MR. JOHNS was a very successful businessman," Miller explained. "He worked as a car dealer and a self-employed roofer."

But the presence of several plain clothes police detectives at the gathering Friday carried the message that this was no ordinary funeral gathering.

Many of Chicago's most important gypsy families are buried in Forest Home Cemetery, some going back three generations.

Gypsy ancestors migrated from India across Iran, Armenia, Syria, Egypt and North Africa in the 1300s. By the 1500s, they had reached Romania, Hungary, Spain, France, Russia and England. Small numbers crossed from Europe to America.

Gypsies and wandering are almost synonymous and having come together for a few hours Friday to say goodby to a friend, or maybe even a king, they left to resume the fiercely independent life they have always known.



100-YEAR-OLD, horse-drawn hearse was used to carry Pete Johns, the King of the Gypsies, to his final rest Friday. Several hundred gypsies gathered at Forest Home Cemetery in Forest Park to say goodby to Mr. Johns with a drink and a three-piece band.

Senate energy panel OKs tax incentive plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ignoring President Carter's proposals, the Senate Finance Committee Friday approved its own energy tax plan, calling for $32 billion in tax credits and incentives over the next eight years but no tax increases.

Approved 11-6, the proposals amounted to a total reversal of the President's original plan.

Instead of adding taxes to cut consumer use of oil and natural gas as Carter wanted, the committee proposals would provide tax credits to spur production of energy and incentives to turn companies to alternate energy sources.

INDIVIDUALS WOULD receive some direct benefit from the bill through tax credits for home insulation and various smaller tax breaks such as a tax credit for vans to be used in commuter van pools.

But most of the benefits would go to businesses, hospitals, schools, charitable organizations and local governments.

Committee chairman Russell Long, D-La., said a final draft of the bill would take a week, after which there would be a final formal vote.

The bill is in line with Long's plan to write the final bill in a House-Senate conference committee, combining the House-passed tax increases with the Senate's idea on how to spend those tax dollars.

President Carter, speaking to editors, warned again Friday failure to pass an adequate energy bill makes the United States "susceptible to severe damage" if a critical shortage develops.

At the same time, energy Sec. James Schlesinger ruled out any thought of the administration rewriting its energy program to fit congressional and industry expectations. "Absolutely not," he said in a television interview.

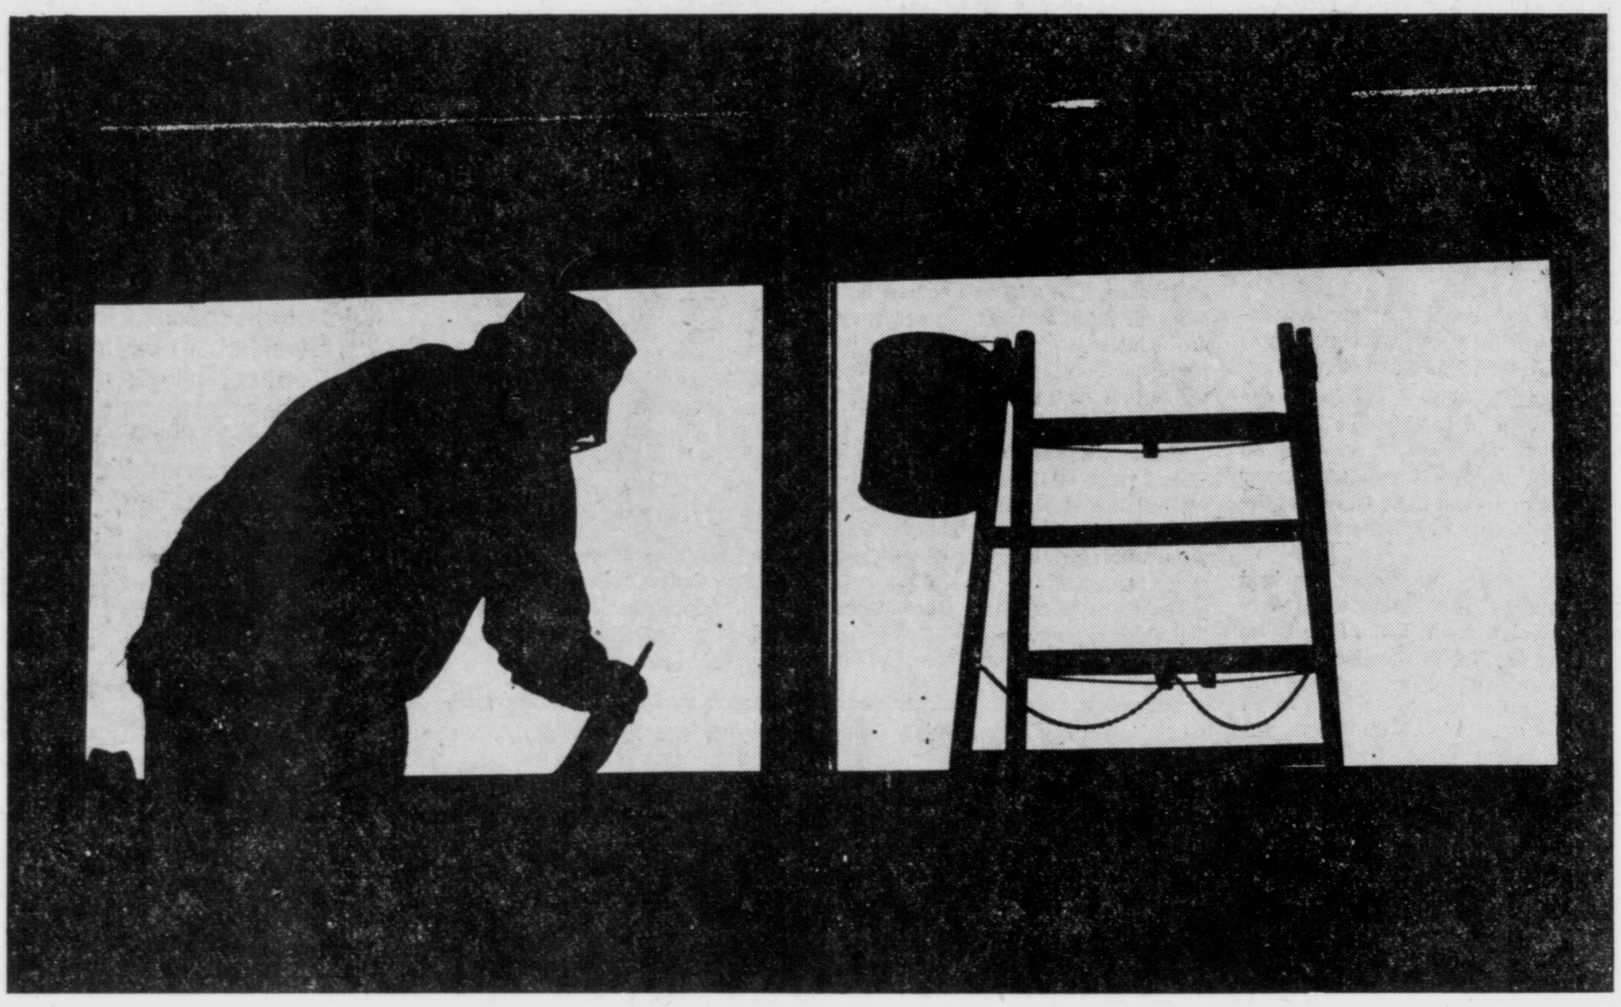
Building supplies still in short supply

by DAVE IBATA

A worsening shortage of building materials has cast a shadow over what has otherwise been a bonanza year for housing, and has caused delays of up to two months in deliveries of new homes.

Shortages in insulation supplies first hit the homebuilding industry in July. Since then, the drought has spread, until today it affects almost every component used in new housing, from shingles to electrical fixtures.

Products most severely affected are insulation, drywall and brick.



"IN THE use of insulation and drywall, the situation has gotten significantly worse," said William Kennedy, president of the Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago. "Production can't cope with the increased demand."

The shortages were brought about by a nationwide boom in new home construction, builders say.

In Cook County, 25,000 new homes will have been built by the end of the year — and of these, between 8,000 and 10,000 will be in the Northwest suburbs, Kennedy said.

Proposed federal tax benefits for homeowners who add insulation to their properties contributed to the demand for insulation.

TOM MILES, vice president of contracts and purchasing for The Hoffman Group, Hoffman Estates, said.

"The only one (shortage) that really hurts us is in insulation materials."

Increased demand for insulation also has prompted higher prices, Miles said. He said the price of insulation increased 24 per cent since the end of September.

The price of drywall, also in increasingly short supply, has risen 31 per cent over the past 12 months, Miles said.

Tom Merchut, project manager of the Arlingdale single-family home development in Schaumburg, said, "Everything is in tight supply right now."

Merchut said his firm has had to order window frames three months in advance. Deliveries of insulation and drywall take between three and four weeks, he said, while certain types of brick take from three to four months to arrive.

MILES SAID brick is in short supply partly because supplies of natural gas, used to bake bricks, were cut off to manufacturers last winter. Some manufacturers never reopened, he said.

Merchut said he feared the situation may repeat itself if this winter is as severe as last year.

"They're foreseeing quite a shorotage of bricks in the spring," he said.

Unlike other builders, Phil Mercado, sales and marketing manager for The Shires of Inverness, a townhome development, said his firm was having no problems with shortages because it had ordered materials three to four months in advance and stockpiled them in warehouses.

BUILDERS ALSO report shortages of skilled labor in the Chicago metropolitan area.

Qualified carpenters were in short supply earlier this summer, though the number of available carpenters since has grown to fill most of the needs of developers.

Still, Kennedy said, "Every man who is able to swing a hammer is hired without question."

The demand for labor has spread to other trades, builders say, and in demand now are electricians, plumbers, roofers, masons and heating and cooling installers.

SHORTAGES OF materials and manpower result in delays in deliveries of completed homes, and delays mean increased costs to builders.

Kennedy said every day a $60,000 home remains uncompleted it costs the builder between $7 and $10.

Kennedy said his homebuilding firm, Kennedy Bros. of Arlington Heights, has experienced delays in deliveries ranging from two weeks to two months.

Harry Buck, project manager at New England Village, a single-family home community under construction in Streamwood by the Lexington Development Corp., also reported delays of up to two days, with average delays of seven to 10 days.

"It's tearing us up," Buck said. "This is a year of short supply. I don't think anybody put in as much inventory as he used to."

BERNARD SMITH, president of the Illinois Communities Division of U.S. Home, said delays in new home deliveries have averaged 30 days at his company's developments, Woodlake Trails and The Timbers in Hanover Park.

Miles said The Hoffman Group has experienced delays of two months at its developments.

Builders say both single-and multi-family projects have suffered equally because of the shortages.

As for home buyers who must wait a little longer than expected before moving into their new dwellings, "They're accepting it as a situation that is uncontrollable," Smith said.

"THEY UNDERSTAND there are certain problems we can't as developers foresee, and in fact have no control over," Smith said.

Buck said the shortages "may ease off during the winter."

However, Kennedy said he saw no end to the shortages.

"Not if the housing industry goes on the way it has," Kennedy said. "The shortages will go all through this winter."

Mobile-home warranties probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — People who buy mobile homes are often stuck with leaky roofs, buckling floors and other problems which, despite warranties, they cannot get reaired, a consumer protection official said this week.

Even a recent federal law designed to get the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development to address the situation is not working, Robert Hilgendorf, of the New Mexico attorney general's office, told a Federal Trade Commission hearing.

He said officials in his state alone receive from six to 30 complaints per month and "the social cost of unsafe, unrepaired and unliveable" mobile homes is being borne by the "unfortunate victims" who live in them.

THE PROBLEM is especially acute in New Mexico, he said, where many low-income persons can afford no other type of housing.

He urged the FIC to pass a rule it first proposed in 1974 under which all repairs due under a warranty would have to be made within 30 days, or, in cases where the defect makes the home unlivable, within three days.

In addition, the separate responsibilities of dealers and manufacturers for obeying the terms of the warranty would be spelled out, and manufacturers would have to look over the shoulder of dealers to make sure repairs are made if the dealers are responsible.

Miles Kirkpatrick, a former FTC chairman who represented a segment of the mobile home industry at the hearing, told Hilgendorf the proposed rules could add $500 to $750 to the cost of a mobile home, and said he wondered if poor people could afford that kind of increase.

Hilgendorf said if a home was financed over a 15-year period, the increase would amount to only a few dollars each month.

New townhomes in Crystal Lake

A new townhome section of the Four Colonies residential community in Crystal Lake is open for sales, the builder, Residential Development Group, has announced.

Ten units have been built, and eight are under construction in the 49-unit section on Barlina Road. Fifteen homes have been sold.

A two-bedroom unit is priced from $60,400, and a three-bedroom model from $70,900. Prices are subject to change.

Included in the basic cost of the townhomes are wall-to-wall carpeting, insulated glass patio doors, attached garages, ceramic tile baths with separate dressing rooms and built-in vanities, and kitchens with oven, range, hooded exhaust fan, dishwasher and disposal.

Also included is membership in the Colony Club, a social and recreation center with an indoor handball court, tennis courts, table tennis and billiard game room, hobby and exercise rooms, private meeting rooms with a fully-equipped kitchen, a swimming pool and surrounding sundeck and saunas. Monthly fee is $15.

Four Colonies also has condominium units and single-family homes.

Luxury ranch features a reception bar

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

The floor plan of this ultra-modern ranch house is an exciting one. Of particular interest is the angled facade that provides both an exterior and interior look that will captivate the imagination of almost anyone.

Beyond the large covered front entrance porch is a spacious foyer that leads to a reception bar. An interesting feature of the bar area is that it can be closed off by a folding screen when entertaining is not part of the evening activities.

From the reception bar one moves into the good-size living room with its corner fireplace. It should be mentioned the bar has an over-the-counter facility providing direct access to the kitchen.

The almost circular kitchen is both dramatic and efficient. Food preparation in such an area is almost step-free because of the "round flow." Cabinets can be of the standard design (small units) with a special prefabricated formica counter top.

Part of the kitchen makes up the family room, a comfortable and virtually separate area. It includes an unusually shaped breakfast corner that can be served from an end of the circular counter top of the kitchen itself.

To the right of the kitchen is a mud room-laundry as well as a lavatory and good-size closet. From here is the stairway leading to the basement as well as a service doorway to the outdoors. Also at this end of the house is a spacious outdoor living porch with an angled barbecue and sliding glass doors leading into the living room. A two-car garage abuts the porch.

From the front porch is what the architect calls a "tete-a-tete" porch or terrace. The windows of bedrooms two and three look out onto this part of the house, which is faced with stone veneer. A full bathroom services these two rooms and has a double vanity.

The master bedroom is a 20-foot by 12-foot room at the rear of the house, with sliding doors that lead onto the back terrace. It has a shower bathroom with single vanity and the closet space is ample.

The exterior finish is stone veneer and vertical boards.

Plant arrangements can add interest to a terrace

George Creed

It's your landscape

In making a terrace you have tremendous flexibility. You can make it large or small and of any shape your fancy and location dictate. You can choose from a wide variety of materials in deciding what its surface shall be.

Another thing you can do to add interest to a terrace is to incorporate planting directly into it. In the accompanying plan this has been done, with plantings of flowers alongside the house and trees at the edge of the terrace.

The design here is rather formal but the arrangement of plants in a terrace need not be so. There can be no rules governing the kinds and placement of plants in paved areas of this kind, but common sense would indicate that you should avoid those that have thorns or other features that would make them undesirable.

THE SIZE OF A plant is important, too. You certainly wouldn't want one that reached such proportions as to usurp and make unusable a considerable part of the terrace. Nor would you want to place a plant so that the prime function of the terrace is impaired. Planting of this kind should be arranged in a manner that allows plenty of space to be used by people. Nor should planting obstruct the free flow of traffic. Note that in the plan there is ample room between the trees to permit free passage between them.

You also can make patterns in a terrace pavement with plants. Consider, for example, in the plan, the removal of the little leave lindens and their replacement clipped yews or flowers. Consider, also the extension of the pattern by including the planting of one more square at the right and left ends of the terrace.

THE PLAN AS A whole is a development on a property with little depth. The terrace with its planting and the planting at the right side of the terrace constitutes the main part of the total back yard landscape.

Q. Is it possible to grow macadamia nut trees in this country?

A. Yes, but they require very warm temperatures. I am told that they are cultivated in some parts of California and Florida.

Q. Is it a desirable practice to mulch tomato plants.

A. It is in two ways: 1) It controls moisture; 2) It prevents any tomatoes that touch the ground from being spoiled by slugs.

7 units sold at the Shires

The sales office of the Shires of Inverness, a 222-unit townhome and country estate, reported seven sales in its first week of business.

The 38-acre condominium development, at Roselle Road and Euclid Avenue in Inverness, was developed by Rogers Enterprises, and features six models of and two-story town homes ranging in area from 3,400 to 4,000 square feet.

Prices for the townhomes range from $103,500 to $164,500. All prices are subject to change.

Townhomes include full basements, attached two-car garages, R-19 insulation, R-38 ceiling insulation, kitchen appliances and cabinets, wood-burning fireplaces, masonry and stained-cedar siding exteriors with cedar shingle roofs, community center and swimming pool, landscaped grounds, and lake and non-lake views.

Interested persons may contact Phill Mercado at 991-9000, or visit the Shires sales office on Roselle Road, north of Euclid Avenue.

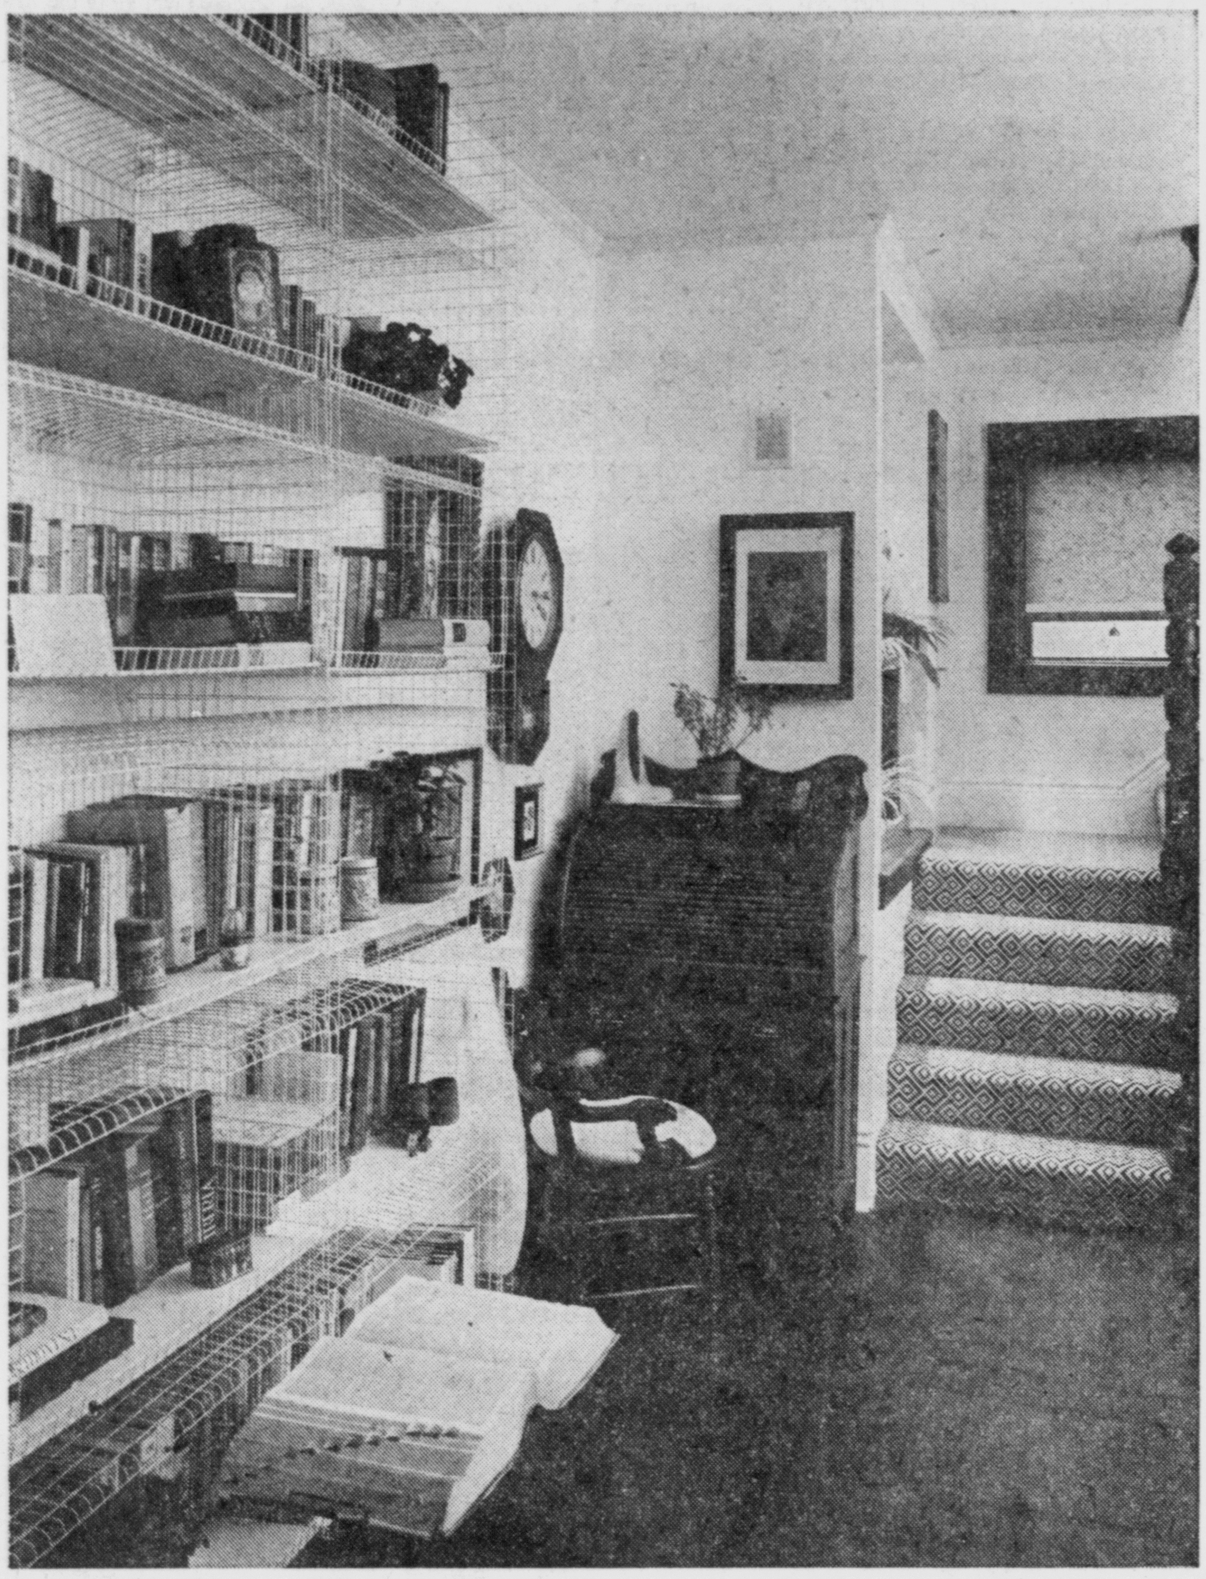
Stair landings needn't go to waste



A STAIR LANDING becomes a small but efficient home office in the imaginative decorating hands of designer Carl Fuchs. Upturned rabbit hutches make an unusual set of bookcases and a pattern shade cloth adds a decorative touch to the window as well as shutting out summer sun rays.

Those second-floor landings must have been meant for something besides walking through, but it's hard to discover their purpose in many older houses. Perhaps they merely provided breath-catching spots before one ascended higher?

Whatever the original purpose, hallways and landings are easy to press into service, circa 1977. In the stairwell illustrated today, interior designer Carl Fuchs created a small work/study area.

Carl is one of those persons who can walk into a surplus store or a swap meet and somehow spot the best bargain of the day. He sees the possibilities in things most of us pass right by.

Honestly, who would have purchased a dozen wire rabbit hutches? The neighborhood lab technician? Kids with prolific pets?

Naturally, it was our Carl Fuchs. But he realized that when turned on end and fitted with painted wood shelves, the wire hutches could be stacked and used for book storage. So he paid his money, bought some spray paint and viola!

Carolyn Murray

ONCE HE'D ESTABLISHED the idea of book storage on the landing, he realized that an older junior-size rolltop desk also could be tucked into the area. Now all bill-paying chores, research projects and letter writing are conducted halfway between upstairs, downstairs.

There was a niche and a window about five risers up. One has been fitted with plants and a changing art show. The other is nicely shaded with Stauffer's "Flanders" pattern shade cloth in cool green.

The Fuchs finesse is in the way the shade has been reversed on the roll so the hardware is less noticeable. Then there's the neat touch of an old harness-brass pull, also from Carl's lucky scrounging and salvage hunting.

A tidy geometric stair-carpet updates the area, and during high noon hours that Stauffer shadecloth cools down the hot rays of the sun, preventing fading and heat buildup.

Foil frost's nip and increase yield

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Worried about frost?

The first frosts usually are just a light kiss, and though there can be a string of them, they often are followed by a spell of fine, frost-free weather.

So, it is well worth trying to save some tender crops such as lettuce, bush and pole beans, cucumbers and squash, as these veggies do not ripen well indoors.

On nights of frost warning, cover with old burlap, plastic (garbage can liners do well) or whatever kind of makeshift protection you have at your disposal.

DON'T BOTHER covering root crops like carrots, radishes, onions, turnips and the like — a touch of frost makes them sweeter. They self-store quite happily in the ground, unless you have to clear them out to do fall soil preparation. I usually throw an eight-inch layer of straw over the root crops in fall to have them accessible to me all winter. If you have a cool basement or root cellar, fill a big box with barely damp sand and store them in it for winter needs.

Cabbage, swiss chard, kale, spinach, broccoli and brussels sprouts do not even need protection against early (light) frosts.

Peppers that are not developed now probably will not do much more, so kiss them off. Tiny peppers are bitter and not even worth picking.

JUST LET PARSLEY go to seed, cut the other perennial herbs down to just a bit above ground level. (They'll come back whether you do it or not.)

Since tomatoes ripen so easily indoors, why bother trying to save them in the garden by covering? The little ones sure won't do much more developing, and the edible-size green ones can be picked and wrapped in newspapers, stored in a box in the basement. They'll ripen gradually so you'll have a tomato or two every few days.

With only six tomato plants in my vast soil bank repetoire, the quantity of tomatoes I pick green after the weather starts to turn "fallish" usually lasts until Thanksgiving with the old "newspapers in the box" idea.

Do not put tomatoes on a sunny windowsill to ripen, unless you want them to ripen quickly (for immediate use).

THE IDEA IS to stretch the harvest by promoting gradual ripening, and the cool-basement, newspaper-wrapped plan is the best solution. Picked tomatoes ripen better in the dark than on a sunny windowsill. This may sound strange since they need sun to grow on the vine in the first place, but darkness is a better keeper after they are severed from the plant.

Bring patio pot-grown tomato plants into the house for growing and you risk the chance of bringing unwanted plant pest stowaways in with them. Unless you take super precautions to completely de-bug the patio pot-grown tomatoes before they are brought indoors and you have super light conditions and the humidity is sky-high — almost like greenhouse conditions — trying to keep patio pot tomatoes going through the winter is virtually a waste of time.

THIS LITTLE TOMATO is helping her mom save vegetables from killing frost by picking tomatoes green. They can be stored in newspapers in a cool basement for gradual ripening.

The doctor says

Breathing rates vary for individuals

My husband, 73, was concerned that he breathes too rapidly. He said he inhaled and exhaled at about twice the rate I do. I timed him and found that he inhaled and exhaled at a rate of 18 times a minute, which I believe is normal.

Then I timed my breathing. I inhale and exhale only seven to eight times a minute. I am 59 and am wondering if I should consciously increase my breathing rate. Can a person get sufficient oxygen breathing only seven or eight times a minute?

I see your husband's concern about his breathing has ended up with you being worried about yours. The rate for both of you may be entirely normal.

The purpose of respiration is essentially what you may have learned in grade school — to get the bad air out and the good air in. It is the amount of air you move, not how fast you breathe that is usually important. Your husband probably doesn't move as much air with each breath as you do. The normal rate at rest has been measured between four and 24 breaths a minute.

Your normal lungs will contain a lot of air at the end of each expiration unless you forcefully exhale it and even then there will still be old air in the lungs. The new air mixes with the old air. A person who breathes deeply with each breath probably has a more efficient mixing mechanism so your slower rate may be more efficient but not necessarily any more healthy.

A newborn infant in the nursery has an average respiratory rate of 33 breaths per minute but he only moves 15 milliliters with each breath — only about a pint (500 ml) of air a minute. An average 150 pound adult will have an average rate of 12 and move 500 ml of air with each breath or about 6,000 ml per minute. In this illustration you can see the trade off in rate and volume breathed affecting how much air is actually moved a minute.

The range of respiratory rate is rather large. A rate of 75 breaths per minute has been reported while swimming the crawl stroke.

The respiratory rate commonly goes up when the body needs more oxygen. Thus, respiration increases during exercise. Swimming exaggerates it because many swimmers tend to breathe with each stroke. You may be surprised to know that it is not the lungs that limit how much exercise, such as running a healthy person can do, but how much blood the heart can pump. The heart usually reaches its maximum capacity well before the maximum capacity of the lungs to ventilate is reached.

I approve of people doing some slow deep breaths each day. Moving the lungs and chest through the maximum range helps to maintain maximum capability. However, I would caution against breathing both deeply and rapidly. If you move too much air (hyperventilate) you will feel dizzy and may even faint. It blows off too much carbon dioxide and upsets the body's chemical balance. You should also avoid breath holding which may cause fainting.

Fall is time to plant crocusses, daffodils

If you expect winter weather to chill your soil, this is the season to select bulbs for colorful spring flowering. Where winter is usually brisk, October is the month to plant crocuses and daffodils. Tulips can be set in until Thanksgiving. Even if your lawn escapes winter freezing, plan to buy bulbs soon. For you'll need either to buy precooled bulbs, or to give untreated ones an artificial winter. Do this by putting them in the refrigerator (not the freezer) until planting in December.

For a bright effect, plant a number of bulbs of the same variety in a group, spacing each at recommended distance from another. (Besides, you can often get a bargain on bulbs by buying a dozen of the same species.) Also, set the group in front of something that will be either green or flowering at the same time — like an evergreen or a forsythia. Flowers appearing singly look sad, especially when surrounded by dormant growth. Follow instructions carefully for the right depth to plant each species, so blooms will be lush. Last, be sure to place each pointed tip up, and then mound soil firmly over each bulb.

Dear Roberta: I'm curious about the ingredients of soy sauce — particularly its salt content. — Mrs. Lee Phillips

My favorite brand of this delicious seasoning is made from water, soybeans, wheat, salt and a preservative. One tablespoon of soy sauce, reports the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, contains 1,319 milligrams of sodium. It's the sodium in salt, known to chemists as sodium chloride, that's bad news for those with high blood pressure and other disorders. (And, as we're finding out, too much of a good thing like this is not very good for any of us.) Contrast this sodium measurement with that of other liquids: home made French dressing — about 92 milligrams of sodium per tablespoon; lemon juice — just a trace; or any salad or cooking oil — none of which contains any sodium. Now you understand why soy sauce is a "no-no" for low-salt dieters.

Clearbrook fund-raising brunch set

A lofty goal has been set this year by the 19 area women composing the Friends of the Clearbrook Center.

They have chosen to help underwrite the establishment of a group home for six to eight handicapped young adults who have reached a maximum level of training and need to move on to more independent living.

A proposed opening date for the program is April 1, 1978.

Proceeds from the friends' annual fund-raising event, a Sunday brunch schedulel Nov. 6 in the Jimmy Durante Room of the Arlington Park Hilton, are earmarked for half of the initial cost of operation.

TICKETS TO the brunch are $15 each, available from chairwoman Brooke Nelson, Inverness, at 991-3769, or her co-chairwoman, Suzie Johnson, Palatine, at 359-4519. Deadline is Oct. 24.

To run a group home for the first three months will cost $25,505. The Illinois Dept. of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities will give $12,035 as a seed grant. The remaining funds must come from local sources. It is this amount, $13,470, the Friends of Clearbrook hope to raise from the brunch.

Since its formation in 1964, the group has contributed more than $130,000 to Clearbrook as a result of these brunches.

Happenings

Newcomers to 'glo'

"Autumn Glo" is the title of the fall luncheon, fashion show and boutique set Nov. 5, by Mount Prospect Newcomers Club. Chez Chantel of Mount Prospect Plaza will dress 10 of the members in new fall and winter ensembles for the runway show at the Carson Inn-Nordic Hills, Itasca.

Children also will model clothes from Just for Kids, Countryside Court. A boutique of handcrafted articles is another feature.

Cocktails will be served at 11:30 a.m. and a roast beef luncheon at 12:30 p.m.

Tickets are $8.50 and may be reserved until Nov. 1 at 299-0057 or 253-8465. All proceeds will go to the Arthritis Foundation and Shelter, Inc., a home for boys in Arlington Heights.

Bowl and dine

Prospect Heights Woman's Club will have a dinner and Scotch doubles bowling party Oct. 29, at Thunderbird Lanes, Mount Prospect. Paid reservations are due Monday with Marion Schaefges, 255-3387. The cost is $13 a couple, and reservations, open to new residents, are limited to 20 couples.

Weddings

Wedding bells to ring for couples

Mr. and Mrs. Greg Maguire

Chris Oleskow – Greg Maguire

A Harper College ski trip started a romance for Chris Oleskow, Hoffman Estates, and Greg Maguire, Palatine, culmininating in their marriage Sept. 3 in St. Hubert Catholic Church, Hoffman Estates.

Chris attended Sacred Heart of Mary High School before going to Harper and Greg attended Fremd. Their parents are the junior Mathew Oleskows of Hoffman Estates and the Gerald Maguires of Long Grove.

Greg's father and his brother Steve both were soloists at the 11:30 a.m. nuptial mass, which was followed by a reception for 175 at Indian Lakes Country Club.

The bride's ensemble was a white knit jersey gown with Venise lace accents and a Camelot headpiece of lace, holding a fingertip veil also edged in lace. Her bouquet was of white roses, carnations and baby's breath.

All of her attendants were gowned alike in pale blue polyester, halter gowns with hip-length capes. They also wore matching blue straw picture hats and carried white Sweatheart roses and carnations with blue baby's breath.

Attending the groom were best man David Capalino, Rolling Meadows, and Greg Williams and Mark Bailey, Schaumburg, Dan Jaacks, Palatine, and John Gurney, Arlington Heights.

Greg, who works for I.T.W. in Des Plaines, and his bride are making their home in Schaumburg. Their honeymoon was week's stay in Frankfort, Ky.

Mellenthin-Mullins

A June 1978 wedding is planned by Debbie Mellenthin and John Mullins, whose engagement is announced by Debbie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Mellenthin. John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Mullins. Both families reside in Elk Grove Village.

The young couple are '74 graduates of Elk Grove High School. Debbie is enrolled in the child development program at Harper College and also is working at Lieberman Enterprises, Elk Grove. John graduated from Greer Technical Institute in heating and air conditioning. He works for Zip-Dee Corp., also in Elk Grove.

Coniglio-Kluk

The engagement of Stephanie Coniglio to Robert J. Kluk is announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Martin J. Coniglio, Schaumburg. Stephanie and Bob, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kluk, Barrington, are planning a fall '78 wedding.

A '72 graduate of Conant High, Stephanie graduated in '76 from Harper College and is now employed at O'Hare Industrial Clinic, Elk Grove Village. Bob, a '71 graduate of Barrington High, graduated in '75 from Michigan Technological University. He is with Fansteel, Inc., North Chicago.

Jasnoch-Chlupsa

A May wedding is planned by Jean Jasnoch and Kenneth Chlupsa. Jean's engagement to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chlupsa, Arlington Heights, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Jasnoch, also of Arlington Heights.

Both Jean and Ken are graduates of Rolling Meadows High, Jean in '77 and Ken in '75. Ken also studied at the University of Illinois Circle Campus. He is now with New Process Steel, Itasca, and Jean is with Arlington Federal.

Kathy Gillespie – William Eitzenhoefer

A young couple who are social habilitation activity coordinators at Little City in Palatine were married on the groom's 26th birthday, Sept. 10.

The bride is the former Kathy Gillespie, daughter of the John Gillespies of Naperville, and the groom is William Eitzenhoefer, son of the Robert Eitzenhoefers of Elk Grove Village.

The mid-afternoon ceremony in St. Raphael's Church, Naperville, was officiated by the bride's uncle, the Rev. Thomas Gillespie of California. After a two-week wedding trip to Canada and New England, the newlyweds are living in Elgin.

KATHY WORE HER mother's wedding gown of white satin trimmed with Chantilly lace and a cap-type headpiece of satin attached to a flowing veil. She carried a single white cabbage rose.

Maid of honor was her sister Terry; bridesmaids were the groom's sister, Vicki Sanoshy, Elk Grove; Jan Andry, Palatine; and Joan Thoreson, Chicago. There was also a junior bridesmaid, 8-year-old Kathy Hughes, the bride's cousin from Westchester.

Kathy and her attendants made their light blue floral print, halter gowns with ruffled capes. The girls all carried yellow roses, blue carnations and baby's breath.

ATTENDING BILL were his brother Steve as best man and as groomsmen Dennis Brietholtz, Algonquin; Jerry Couvoisier, Palatine; and Chick Neuman, Elgin. The guests were seated by the bride's brothers, Pete and Brian Gillespie.

A dinner reception with dancing, for 270 guests, followed at Orrie's of Wheaton.

The bride is a graduate of Western Illinois University. Bill graduated in 1969 from Elk Grove High, then served in the U.S. Air Force and graduated last year from Harper College.

Of all things, Edith Bunker raped!

The "old boy" networks are sadly going after high ratings this weekend at the expense of women with, what else, double rape.

Middle-aged, motherly Edith Bunker will be attacked by a stranger who forces his way into her house on the eve of her 50th birthday in a special hour-long episode of "All in the Family" Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.

Lesley Ann Warren, who portrays a young tease turned high class prostitute in the opening two hours of Harold Robbins' "79 Park Avenue" Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 5, is brutally raped by her stepfather.

THE INCIDENTS are blatant examples of exploiting women in exchange for high viewership and profits, and are not indicative of the kind of meaningful treatment television should be giving a frightfully increasing crime.

Most sensitive individuals believe it is no longer fashionable or acceptable to open eyes and excite interests by throwing women around the room and pouncing on them. But, that is exactly what you'll see Sunday night.

Norman Lear, the creator and producer of "All in the Family," contends the episode is a peculiar mix of comedy and dread. When her attacker tells Edith she smells good, she attributes the scent to Lemon Pledge. After the incident, Edith disturbingly struggles with her own emotions and those of her family.

Although Lear has tackled a fair share of controversial topics before, one can't help but wonder why a rape, why Edith and why now? "All in the Family," although in its final season, is still a CBS leader in the ratings and does not really need such a stunt.

IF THERE IS an irony at all about the two television rapes it is actor David Dukes, who played the self-pitying,armless son of the Lassiter family in the one-time television drama, "Beacon Hill."

Dukes is the young man who poses as a police officer investigating a neighborhood rape and knocks on Edith's door while the rest of her family is at a friend's house planning a surprise birthday party for her.

At just about the same time Dukes will be attacking Edith Bunker on CBS' "All in the Family" Sunday night, he'll be blushing in church over sexual advances being made toward him by the promiscuous Lesley Ann Warren in the first part of NBC's "79 Park Avenue."

"79 Park Avenue," which airs in three two-hour parts at 8 p.m. on NBC Sunday through Tuesday, comes off as a sleazy, second-rate tale of hard times and prostitution.

MS. WARREN retains the sweet, playful face of the "Cinderella" she portrayed in the Rogers and Hammerstein version of the fairytale at the outset of her career 11 years ago.

But, the innocence of a fairytale heroine is something that has completely disappeared from Ms. Warren's new act, which NBC has labeled "blistering."

She does an absolutely knock-out job of playing a young girl anxious for love and life. Her slender, well-endowed body is somewhat of an enigma to her and a pleasure to onlookers, and the producers would have you believe that people and circumstances shaped her into a tough, detached, high-class madam.

Her character is Marja Fludjicki, who faces most of the traditional obstacles of a good Victorian heroine. Her mother, whom she loves dearly, is dying of tuberculosis and has remarried a drunkard, who makes advances toward Marja.

In a desperate effort to find work during the depths of the Depression, Marja takes a job as a taxi dancer only to suffer a brutal attack and rape by her stepfather.

SHE RETALIATES with a knife, goes to court on stabbing charges, which she refuses to explain to spare her mother's feelings. She is sent to reform school, where she learns the art of stripping from an inmate.

Meanwhile, whe falls in love with two best friends. One is Ross Savitch, the son of a rich gambling magnate, played by Marc Singer with all the dashing charisma of any F. Scott Fitzgerald playboy.

The other is Dukes' role as the old neighborhood's Mike Koshko, a sincere guy with a beautiful smile. He walks on air when he thinks he's in love and cherishes the idea that Marja has retained her virginity for marriage. She breaks both their hearts. She is hit over the head at every turn with the idea of selling her body to make good money. Finally she ends up at "79 Park Avenue," a Mafia-connected bordello.

ALTHOUGH THE acting by the cast of well-known actors is absolutely superb, the Robbins' novel is the perfect excuse for as much promiscuity on television as NBC censors could get away with in the typical "Best Sellers" fashion.

After watching Sunday's first two hours of the NBC "Best Seller", viewers will feel they have started reading a drug store novel of love and lust.

Marja's story of prostitution is not unlike that of Daniel DeFoe's "Moll Flanders," a victim of hard times and circumstances who became a successful madam with an iron will and her own way about things. Both women know just what they're doing from the start.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

LESLEY ANN WARREN FROM INNOCENSE

Ms. Warren's performance is bound to pave the way for other such roles. In other words, Cinderella may be headed for stereotyping as television's latest sex symbol.

But, the 31-year-old actress, who was formerly married to Hollywood hairdresser Jon Peters (Barbara Streisand's new love) and recently starred in the Chicago production of "Vanities", says "absolutely not.

"I THINK PEOPLE will be shocked by the story because of the subject matter involved, which is prostitution. It's glamorous, but it's degrading abusive and humiliating," said Ms. Warren, who admits that many of the scenes are potent.

"I think the role is a culmination of all the growing I have done the past 10 years or so. I was able to draw on some of the very painful, confusing emotions of my own life for the part, and certainly on the male dominated existence I once led.

"But, I don't intend to live this role out. I am an actress. I am not Cinderella and I'm not Marja. I felt like a victim for years during the early part of my career, always fighting off the stereotyping of myself as a Cinderella. If I could lick that, I can lick anything," she said. "I hope to do more theater, more movies and more television, and many other types of roles."

The star of two Walt Disney films admits her role of Marja was somewhat cathartic. "When I was young, I was stacked and received a lot of attention from boys, and didn't know how to handle it. I was always asked out for all the wrong reasons and always serving as a prop," she said.

HER RELATIONSHIPS with men have not been memorable, loving or successful, she says. The only man in her life at the moment is her 9-year-old son, Christopher, who spends time with both her and Peters.

A failed marriage however, has given way to an independent woman who is open, relaxed and confident about who she is and what she wants to do.

She plays the sex pot role well, and has the talent to tackle any role she wants. "79 Park Avenue" may have no other redeeming purpose than to help the career of a one-time sweet ingunee.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

• John Cleese is a comic wonder in the new public broadcasting series "Fawlty Towers," which premiers today at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 11. He stars as the proprietor of a typically English guest house with a caustic, pesty wife and a bellboy-waiter who only speaks Spanish. Cleese, a familiar member of the Mounty Python troupe, has the perfect setting for his own series with all sorts of bizarre, humorous types wandering in and out of his home.

Old comic stunts like trying to hang a painting on the wall and pulling a chair from beneath a patron being seated at the dining table are refreshed by the Cleese style.

"Fawlty Towers" offers some of the best, inoffensive humor television's had in a long time, and it will appropriately be rebroadcast each week on Sundays at 10 p.m. just before "Mounty Python."

• "Poisoning of Michigan," today at 8 p.m. on Channel 11 is the kind of documentary that should have been produced by WTTW in Chicago. It concerns a chemical foul-up of disastrous proportions close to home. Instead, Thames Television of London produced this insightful hour-long report on the accidental contamination of Michigan livestock with the toxic fire retardant PBB.

• "Shades of Greene" premiers today at 9 p.m. on Channel 11, with two of Graham Greene's short stories. The actors are distinguished and give respectable performances, but the stories themselves are of the bizarre sort, sometimes confusing and boring.

Caliban has a new master as ballet rocks to Tempest

by LYNN ASINOF

The Chicago Ballet's rock version of "The Tempest" includes a pistol-packing goddess who dances to country western music and a bevy of spirits who look like Harpo Marx.

Shakespeare's tale of the slave who yearned for freedom never was like this.

Neither, for that matter, was the Chicago Ballet. With seven new dancers and the opportunity to dance on a large stage, the spunky troupe plunged into its new season Thursday at Medinah Temple with something new and different.

AND THEY couldn't have found anything newer or more different than James Clouser's "Caliban" — a very loose interpretation of the Shakespearean tale.

Performed to live rock music played by Houston's St. Elmo's Fire, the ballet was like a happening. Everything was on stage at once — the band, the dancers, the stage hands and the lights. And the wide-open Medinah Temple stage let the dancers enter and exit from all directions.

The ballet itself was both confusing and exciting. The choreography often lapsed into chaos and the plot got lost in the absurdity of the characters — which included the magician Prospero portrayed as a khaki-clad facist.

To enjoy the ballet, you needed a "what-the-hell" attitude and by the final disco number I was almost there. The dancers nearly made sense of the thing, and that was an accomplishment considering the disorienting first act that left everyone wondering why they came.

It is also an indication that the 4-year-old Chicago troupe is getting its act together. A year ago they couldn't have attempted this ballet, which calls for high leaps, fast jumps and good timing.

THE DANCERS this year look more mature, and seven new members may be able to plug some of the holes that were all too obvious last season.

Gennadi Vostrikov as the slave Caliban never quite made his character come to life. He was either cowering in terror or agonizing over his fate, leaving the audience wondering if they were supposed to love or hate him.

James Sutton, however, as the airy spirit Ariel won the audience with his buoyant leaps and jumps. A newly promoted soloists, Sutton has matured during the summer and now has confidence in his dancing, not to mention precision and elevation.

Nancy Onizuka, another newly promoted soloist, tackled the role of Prospero's daughter Miranda but failed to give it any life. Despite a lovely lithe body, she hasn't figured out how to stop posing and start dancing.

THE BALLET gave some tantalizing glimpses of the company's new dancers, including Richard Collins as Prospero the magician, Kathleen Smith as the goddess Juno and Jayme Nesbitt as a slave. But the disco bumps made it difficult to assess the new talent.

Clauser, whose "Con Spirito" is one of the troupe's best numbers, has done better work. But "Caliban" has some of the energy characteristic of his choreography. When translated by the youthful Chicago company, it comes out as a plus.

And even the Bard might approve of that.

The company will perform at 8 p.m. today at Medinah Temple, 600 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago. Tickets are $6.50 and available at the door.

Symphony hosts harmonic virtuoso for night of 'fun'

by BILL GOWEN

Thursday was "fun night" in Orchestra Hall as even Sir Georg Solti showed he has a sense of humor, even while on the podium.

The Chicago Symphony welcomed harmonica virtuoso Larry Adler for the first time and the appearance was enthusiastically welcomed by the capacity audience. You could sense skepticism turning to awe as Adler in effect sang his way through the middle portion of the concert.

Adler, 63, has been a movie and concert artist for more than 50 years and his technical mastery of the instrument is amazing: this is no 'round the campfire harmonica playing.

ADLER WARMED UP WITH the George Gershwin "Lullaby" which was originally written for string quartet in 1919. Adler made the piece popular in the early 1960s by playing a Morton Gould arrangement for string quartet and harmonica. Thursday's concert used that arrangement with most of the Chicago Symphony strings playing the chamber-group parts.

That was just the beginning as Adler followed with a blazing performance of the 1956 "Roumanian Fantasy" by Francis Chagrin, a work commissioned by Adler and to whom the score bears its dedication.

It's not deep-thinker's music but a virtuoso showpiece for the harmonica nonetheless, containing several gypsy-like dances and quieter moments of intense beauty.

Solti and his players obviously liked what they were doing as the piece romped to a glorious close. The conductor gave his guest artist the majority of the bows to the audience and even the orchestra joined in enthusiastic applause.

A SOLEMN NOTE opened the second half of the program, a playing of the Bach Air from the Third Suite in D major in memory of Orchestral Assn. Pres. Joseph A. Burnham, who died Monday.

Review

The Berlioz orchestral excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" closed the concert and Solti really warmed to the occasion, whipping up a frantic "Dance of the Capulets," a most-moving love scene and a carefully paced "Queen Mab Scherzo."

As with any excerpted work the audience is often unaware just where the ending is to come. Thursday's program ended with the death scene, the music ending quietly and suddenly.

Brief applause by tentative audience stopped on one self-conscious pause.

Solti turned around, smiled, and said in his best Hungarian accent: "That's it!"

WITH THAT, the applause started anew amid the laughter of all concerned as the tension had been broken.

Solti completes his opening three weeks with tonight's concert, turning the baton over to Associate Conductor Henry Mazer for next week's program.

Solte returns Oct. 27, 28 and 29 for the orchestra's three nonsubscription performances of the Mahler "Symphony of a Thousand." While the Saturday concert is already sold out, some tickets remain for the Thursday and Friday concerts.

Couple elected head of symphony

Mr. and Mrs. Wally Thorn, Arlington Heights, recently were elected presidents of the Suburban Youth Symphony Board of Directors.

They will complete the term of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Cook, who had to resign because of personal business.

The board heard a report that the orchestra now has participating youngsters from Arlington Heights, Barrington Hills, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Glenview, Hoffman Estates, Kildeer, Lake Forest, Lake Zurich, Lincolnshire, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Prospect Heights, Schaumburg and Streamwood.

Positions are still open for trombone, trumpet, oboe and string bass players.

The winter concert will be Dec. 11, at Buffalo Grove High School.

Poet Brooks to give reading at Barat

Gwendolyn Brooks, poet laureate of Illinois and Pulitzer prize-winning poet, will read from her own poetry at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Faculty Lounge of Barat College administration building, Lake Forest, followed by a reception.

Both the reading and the reception are free to the public.

Miss Brooks is the author of a dozen books of selected poetry dealing centrally with blacks, three books of children's poetry, a novel entitled "Maud Martha" and an autobiography, "Report from Part One," which is summary of her life and the meaning she has found within it.

Oswald and James Jacoby will help you hold a winning hand in "WIN AT BRIDGE", appearing daily in the HERALD.

A HAUNTING WE WILL GO

Are there any ghosts haunting your house this Halloween? Here's one you can make to hang around your house!

Blow up a big round balloon. (Or use a big ball.) Put it in the center of an old white sheet. Tie the sheet around the balloon to make a neck. With a felt tip marker, draw a face. Make it scary or friendly.

Tie a string to a safety pin. Attach the pin to the top of the ghost's head. Be careful not to prick the balloon. Tie the string to a ceiling light or a curtain rod. Isn't your ghost boo-tiful?

Ask Andy

Good schools a vital part of our society

Andy sends the respected two-volume World Book Dictionary to Wayne Iannella, 8, of Tempe, Ariz., for his question: HOW DID SCHOOLS ORIGINATE?

It may surprise you to know that until the 1800s, most children never went to school. In the ancient days only a few selected children were given the privilege of receiving educations. Even in the advanced societies of ancient Greece schooling was very limited.

During the Middle Ages from 400 A.D. until about 1500, the Roman Catholic Church ran monastery schools in Europe, but only young men who were being trained for the priesthood were given a chance to attend.

By the end of the 1700s, the nation rather than the church became the chief symbol of people in a number of European countries and also the United States and Canada. As people shifted their greater loyalty from the church to the nation, control over formal schooling suddenly received a wider base and more children were given a chance for education.

Political leaders in America during the early 1800s, like those in Europe, realized that the economic and social well-being of a nation depended on educated citizens. Labor unions, then growing in the cities, also made demands for proper schooling for the children of workers.

During this period, many state legislatures gave individual communities the authority to collect property taxes to pay for schools. Many states at this time also started giving school districts financial aid.

The nation's first state board of education was established in Massachusetts in 1837. And by 1850 many states began passing compulsory school attendance laws which required children to attend school until they reached a certain age or grade. Every state except Mississippi has such a law today.

The nation's first public high school was started in Boston in 1821. The first public kindergarten opened in 1873 in St. Louis.

Physical education classes started in schools in the 1870s with shop classes in the industrial arts being added in the 1880s. Homemaking classes were introduced in the 1890s.

During this century the quality of schooling and education has increased dramatically. More and more students are now not only finishing high school but are going on to attend and graduate from colleges.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Lisa Danield,9, of Fredericton, N.B., Canada, for her question:

WHAT MAKES PEOPLE BEGIN TO SMOKE?

Andy can only guess that many people begin to smoke because they see others smoking — and for some strange reason they want to go along with the gang.

Scientists and doctors have established rather well the important finding that smoking is bad for a person's health. There are three dangerous items in tobacco: nicotine, tar and particles from the smoke. All three can do terrible things to the lungs.

In the late 1950s the American Cancer Society conducted a four-year study that showed 30 percent more smokers died of coronary heart attacks than would have been expected to die. Smoking was also tied directly to cancer, emphysema and other respiratory diseases.

Andy has these words of advice: Don't begin to smoke.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Win at bridge

Perfection stumbled upon

English writer Victor Mollo frequently writes articles about bridge in the menagerie. One of the players is the Rueful Rabbit, a rather absent-minded, bad player who usually profits from his own errors.

North and South belong in seven, but six hearts is all that can make due to the bad breaks in both major suits. Even six will fail unless declarer makes the safety play of leading a low spade after he finds that 4-0 heart break.

Sure enough, Victor has the Rabbit make that play, but not because he knew what he was doing. It seems that North had mixed his four of spades with his clubs, so the Rabbit thought that dummy was void of spades.

Thus, after taking the ace of clubs and playing the ace of trumps the rabbit led the deuce of spades and attempted to ruff in dummy only to be told by an opponent that dummy held a spade.

After this start there was nothing the defenders could do. The Rabbit ruffed a club, led another low spade, ruffed with the king of trumps, finessed against East's 10 and was home with the bacon.

Yanks 'shut up and play ball' in 5-3 win

by FRED McMANE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The New York Yankees, baseball's malcontents, received orders from Club Pres. Gabe Paul to "shut up and play ball" and followed them to the letter Friday night by beating the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3 behind the seven-hit pitching of Mike Torrez to take a two games to one edge in the World Series.

The Yankees now need only two more victories in the best-of-seven series to win their first world championship since 1962. The Yankees will send their ace, Ron Guidry, to the mound in game four Saturday while the Dodgers will try to get even with left-hander Doug Rau.

Because of recent squabbles among members of the team that made headlines Friday morning, Paul called a press conference early Friday to set the record straight on what he expected from his team. He made it clear that he wanted the Yankees to quit griping and get down to the basics of playing baseball.

HEEDING PAUL'S words, the Yankees came to play and ironically, the two key figures in the victory were two of the unhappiest Yankees, Reggie Jackson and Torrez.

Jackson had been a major cause of all the fuss when he second-guessed Manager Billy Martin for using pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter in the second game Wednesday night. Martin had publicly blasted Jackson Thursday, but the two men met for an hour and a half before Friday's game and buried the hatchet.

Jackson, though, came to play Friday night. He singled home a run and scored another during a three-run first inning, then walked and scored the Yankees' final run in the fifth on Chris Chambliss' single.

"PAUL SAYS the players are going through a period of controversy," said Jackson. "I don't know about that. I'm trying to do a whole lot to try from becoming a towering inferno. I shouldn't be the most well-known player because of controversy.

"I don't like talking when the game starts. That's no time to be talking, it's time to play ball."

But it was Torrez who emerged as the true hero. The big Mexican right-hander, who had griped periodically about his contract problems with owner George Steinbrenner, survived a three-run homer by Dusty Baker in the third inning and allowed only two hits over the last six innnings to win a game for the first time since Sept. 5.

"After the sixth inning, I felt I was getting stronger," said Torrez. "I was getting my slider down and my curve over. I guess you could say I started to feel stronger after giving up that home run to Baker.

"We came out here tonight to play baseball. I was determined to go after them in the ninth inning. If I was going to get beat, it was going to be with my best pitch."

MARTIN SAID the victory showed that the Yanks really were a closely knit club and not a bunch of wolves who were always at each others' throats.

"I think our ball club is well-knit because no matter what you say about us, we come to play baseball," said Martin, whose remarks about Jackson caused a furor Thursday. "I've been saying all year this club has togetherness and we proved it tonight."

Torrez, who had never pitched well against the Dodgers when he was in the National League, struck out nine and walked only three as he kept the Dodger hitters off stride with an assortment of breaking pitches. In addition, he retired the final 11 batters.

This was a game the Dodgers were expecting to win because they were going with their ace, left-hander Tommy John. But John, a 20-game winner and the man who pitched the pennant-clinching game against Philadelphia, didn't have it and was rapped for nine hits and five runs — four of them earned — before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the sixth.

ODDLY, JOHN wasn't hit very hard but the balls kept going in the right place. In fact, it was two infield hits which proved to be his undoing.

It was one of those infield hits which enabled the Yankees to break a 3-3 tie in the fourth. Graig Nettles started the inning with a line single to right and Bucky Dent then hit a slow hopper into the hole which kicked off third baseman Ron Cey's glove for a hit. After Torrez sacrificed the runners up a base, Nettles scored the tie-breaking run on an infield out by Mickey Rivers.

The Yankees added an insurance in the fifth in much the same manner. After Jackson walked with one out, Lou Piniella hit a one-hopper to the mound that deflected off John's glove for a hit and Chambliss followed with a ground single to right to score Jackson.

ABC butchering Series: Garagiola

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Veteran NBC sportscaster Joe Garagiola says he thinks the ABC broadcast crew working this year's World Series is "butchering" the job.

In a Cincinnati Post story published Friday, Garagiola, who was part of the NBC crew which telecast the World Series last year, was particularly critical of Howard Cosell.

"If I were (Tom) Seaver, I'd make sure Cosell shows up every day, even if I had to send a cab for him. He makes Seaver look good. Cosell is that dumb," Garagiola said.

Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver is serving as a commentator for ABC during the series. Keith Jackson does play-by-play and Cosell offers his own commentary.

"They are butchering the World Series. Doesn't Cosell have anything to say except plugs for the coming ABC shows?," Garagiola said, indicating he believed the "plugs" were the only time Cosell's comments were accurate.

Garagiola said his television viewing of the series' first two games was the "first time I ever talked back to my TV set."

The sportscaster was in Cincinnati Thursday to film several television commercials.

Forest View air show almost has Fremd grounded

by JEFF NORDLUND

Fremd football coach Joe Samojedny thought Forest View would come out passing against his bigger Vikings Friday night . . . and he was right.

But even though the Vikings knew the aerials were coming, the Falcons nearly flew right by undefeated Fremd before finally falling, 14-10.

Forest View's Craig Chuipek threw for 162 yards — one less than Fremd gained both in the air and on the ground — to spark an upset bid that fell short when Viking defenders staged two goal-line stands.

IT WAS THE final stand that hurt Forest View's chances the most. Trailing 14-10 with four minutes to play, the Falcons (3-3) marched 50 yards to Fremd's 10-yard line. A fourth-and-four run by Chuipek was stopped one yard short of a first down, ending Falcon hopes for the night.

"I thought Forest View was gong to open it up," Samojedny said afterward. "But the kids were caught thinking about the Barrington game next week.

"I could see it coming. Even though the kids wanted to do well in this game, their minds during the first half were on Barrington.

"At half time (with Fremd trailing 10-7), there wasn't any panic. I mentioned to the players that they were thinking too far ahead, and they all nodded. They decided to go out and play a different second half."

THE VIKINGS got a break early in the third quarter when John Mayer intercepted a Chuipek pass at the Forest View 38. From there the hard running of Brian Cromie and Kevin Weaver did the rest. Weaver scored from two yards out and Mike Freeman booted his second extra point of the game to put Fremd ahead for good.

Fremd opened up the scoring by taking the opening kickoff and marching 74 yards in 14 plays for a touchdown. Cromie bulled his way over from the one and Freeman added the conversion.

Chuipek, making his first start at quarterback since the first game of the season, responded by connecting on five of 12 first-half passes to put the Falcons ahead.

A 29-yard pass from Chuipek to Ron Laramie highlighted the Falcons' first scoring march early in the second quarter. Chuipek took the ball over himself from three yards out, and John Fredericks booted the extra point to tie the game.

LATER IN THE period a fourth-down quarterback sneak and a 26-yard screen pass from Chuipek to Rick Gardner took the ball to the Viking six, but the Falcons were unable to push the ball over. They settled for a 22-yard field goal by Fredericks to take a 10-7 lead.

Fremd's Weaver rushed for 96 yards in 20 carries, while Cromie had 50 yards in 17 attempts. Viking quarterback Mike Gavigan hit tw-for-six passing for 15 yards.

Chiupek completed 10- of -22 passes with Gadner leading the receivers with three receptions for 52 yards. Joe Forssander had three for 43 yards and Laramie pulled in two for 28.

Meyer leads battle

Elk Grove beats Meadows, 22-14

by ART MUGALIAN

This may come as a surprise to the people who were there, but Jim Meyer is not a one-man wrecking crew, though that's what it looked like at Elk Grove Friday night.

The Elk Grove senior — all 190 pounds of him — carried the ball 25 times from scrimmage for 153 yards, he scored two touchdowns, and he set up Dave Sargent's game-winning field goal with a 47-yard punt return. Meyer also blocked, he tackled and he intercepted the pass that finally doomed the Rolling Meadows Mustangs to a 22-14 defeat.

This, all after the Mustangs, now 3-3, seemed on their way to one of the season's major upsets. Meadows led, 14-6, at halftime of Elk Grove's Homecoming game, which was, by the way, the 50th home game ever played at Elk Grove.

TH ELK GROVE VICTORY kept the Grens unbeaten in MSL South action and moved their over-all mark to 5-1.

The Mustangs capitalized on two Grenadier errors in the first half, fumbles by Jack Walsh, and of all peole, Meyer himself, to rack up a pair of touchdowns. The first was a nifty 12-yard halfback pass from Mark Rustomeyer to Kevin Krutwig and the other came on a bullish 15-yard run by Bob Gill. Jaime Hernandez kicked the extra point both times.

While Meadows was piling up the scores, Elk Grove was getting most of the yardage in the first half. But only a fantastic 27-yard TD run by Meyer near the close of the first quarter put the Grens on the board. The extra-point snap was messed up.

That left it to Meyer and gang to make their second-half comeback — and they did it with relish and not a small amount of drama.

AFTER MEYER fumbled — his second miscue of the game — Elk Grove got the ball right back when John McCloughan pounced on a Mustang fumble at the Grenadier 18. From there, the home team moved 82 yards in seven plays for a score.

First it was McCloughan, from his halfback slot, scooting for 22 yards with the help of a key block from Meyer.McCloughan, a big and awfully fast senior, totaled 89 yards on just seven carries for a 12.6-yard average.

Meyer then toted the ball for gains of four, nine and 14 yards before McCloughan eventually took it in from the 27-yard line, Meyer again blocking.

Elk Grove quarterback Ralph Souder fell down when he tried to tie the score with a two-point option run.

SOUDER, ANOTHER Grenadier senior, had come out passing at the top of the game, shocking just about everyone in attendance by throwing passes on six of the contest's first seven plays. But Elk Grove went back to its customary grind-it-out attack in the second half, avoiding the air lanes altogether.

With just a couple of minutes left in the third period, and Elk Grove trailing 14-12, Meyer fielded a Hernandez punt at his own 22 and zigged and zagged his way to the 31 of Rolling Meadows whede Hernandez brought him down with a necktie tackle. But the little Mustang punter was called for a major face-mask penalty, putting the ball at the 16 of Meadows.

The Mustang defense held and Sargent came on to try a 29-yard field goal. Sargent, a big senior who has played quarterback and tight end this season, was accurate for the first time in three attempts Friday night as the Grens took a 15-14 lead.

Elk Grove's defense forced another punt and the offense went to work again, moving the ball from its own eight to near midfield. But the drive died and Meadows took over with 5:21 to go after an Elk Grove punt.

A SWARMING Elk Grove defense, led by Mark Angellotti, Ed Kurpieski and Rick Magsamen pushed the Mustangs back, twice sacking quarterback Bill Collis for big losses.

Meyer then added a 23-yard touchdown run as insurance.

A final Meadows assault on the goal ended when Meyer intercepted a Collis pass intended for Rustemeyer at the Grenadier one-yard-line.

Meadows archers leading contest

CHARLESTON — The Rolling Meadows girls' archery team, bridesmaid in last year's Illinois High School Assn. state tournament, is halfway to the altar after the first round of the second annual competition. The second and final round is today.

Paced by Cheri Bates' 664 individual effort, Meadows owns 2,564 points to lead runnerup Freeburg's 2,520. Glenbrook North has 2,458 for third, Waterloo 2,427, Lebanon 2,405, Maine West 2,405, Maroa-Forsythe 2,401, Red Bud 2,379, Columbia 2,366 and Lake Park 2,299.

Hersey's Michelle Frank has command of the individual derby after a spectacular round of 685, easily her best effort of the season. Included in Michelle's round were two perfect ends from 20 yards.

BATES HOLDS second with her 664 and is followed by Jenny Krock's 663 for Arlington, which included a perfect end from 30 yards, while Rhonda Ragan of Rolling Meadows sits fourth with 649.

"I told the girls that we would have to average 640 points down here and I think they responded by averaging 641," a happy Rolling Meadows coach Ken Bates said. "There was some exceptional shooting going on here.

"We're just where we wanted to be, although we expect Freeburg to come on tomorrow," Bates continued. "The pressure is on them. I'm confident our girls will do well again tomorrow."

Also contributing for the Mustangs were Carol Nelson's 633 and Nancy Namovicz' 618. Maine West totals included Marge Hahn's 602, Ann Zaccarello's 576, Sharon Vaughan's 629 and Cindy Tomaszewski's 598. Elk Grove notched Patty Johnsen's fine 633 and Laura Weber Fremd hit 507.

Conant dumps Schaumburg 21-0

by BOB GALLAS

Conant quarterback Rocky Pugliese ran for two touchdowns and passed for another in the first half to lead the Cougars to a 21-0 homecoming win over Schaumburg Friday night.

A sky-high Conant defense that went as flat as the Cougar offense in the second half, nevertheless limited the Saxons to 55 total yards on the night.

"It's a normal letdown after getting so fired up for the first half, but it's especially hard to keep them up during an extended halftime period," said Conant coach John Ayres, whose team is now 4-2, 1-2 in the Mid-Suburban League South.

HOMECOMING activities during halftime, which lasted 35 minutes, cooled both sides, but the Cougars could rest comfortably after a first half that saw the Saxons get just 28 total yards on offense.

Conant scored the first time it got the football as Pugliese capped a 43-yard drive by running the final yard for the touchdown.

But it was two quick touchdowns late in the half that put the game away.

An 80-yard, five-minute touchdown drive with Pugliese carrying the final five yards gave Conant a 14-0 lead with 2:27 to play in the half. Less than one minute later, the Cougars were on the scoreboard again.

ON THEIRA first offensive play after the Conant touchdown the Saxons fumbled at their own 24-yard line. One play later, Pugliese hit Mike Walston for a touchdown with 1:28 left. Steve Herring's third extra-point kick of the evening made it 21-0.

Pugliese was perfect in the passing department, going to the air only when he needed to. He completed all six of his passes for 99 yards. Walston hauled in four of those tosses for 51 yards and a touchdown.

"It' rained so much that we haven't been able to pass," said Ayres. "Now we have a complete offense."

The Schaumburg offense doggedly adhered to its running game, even late in the game when the Saxons trailed by three touchdowns. Saxon quarterback Scott Wright threw six times and completed two for a total of six yards. If Wright was reluctant to throw, it was because of the Conant "Sack Pack."

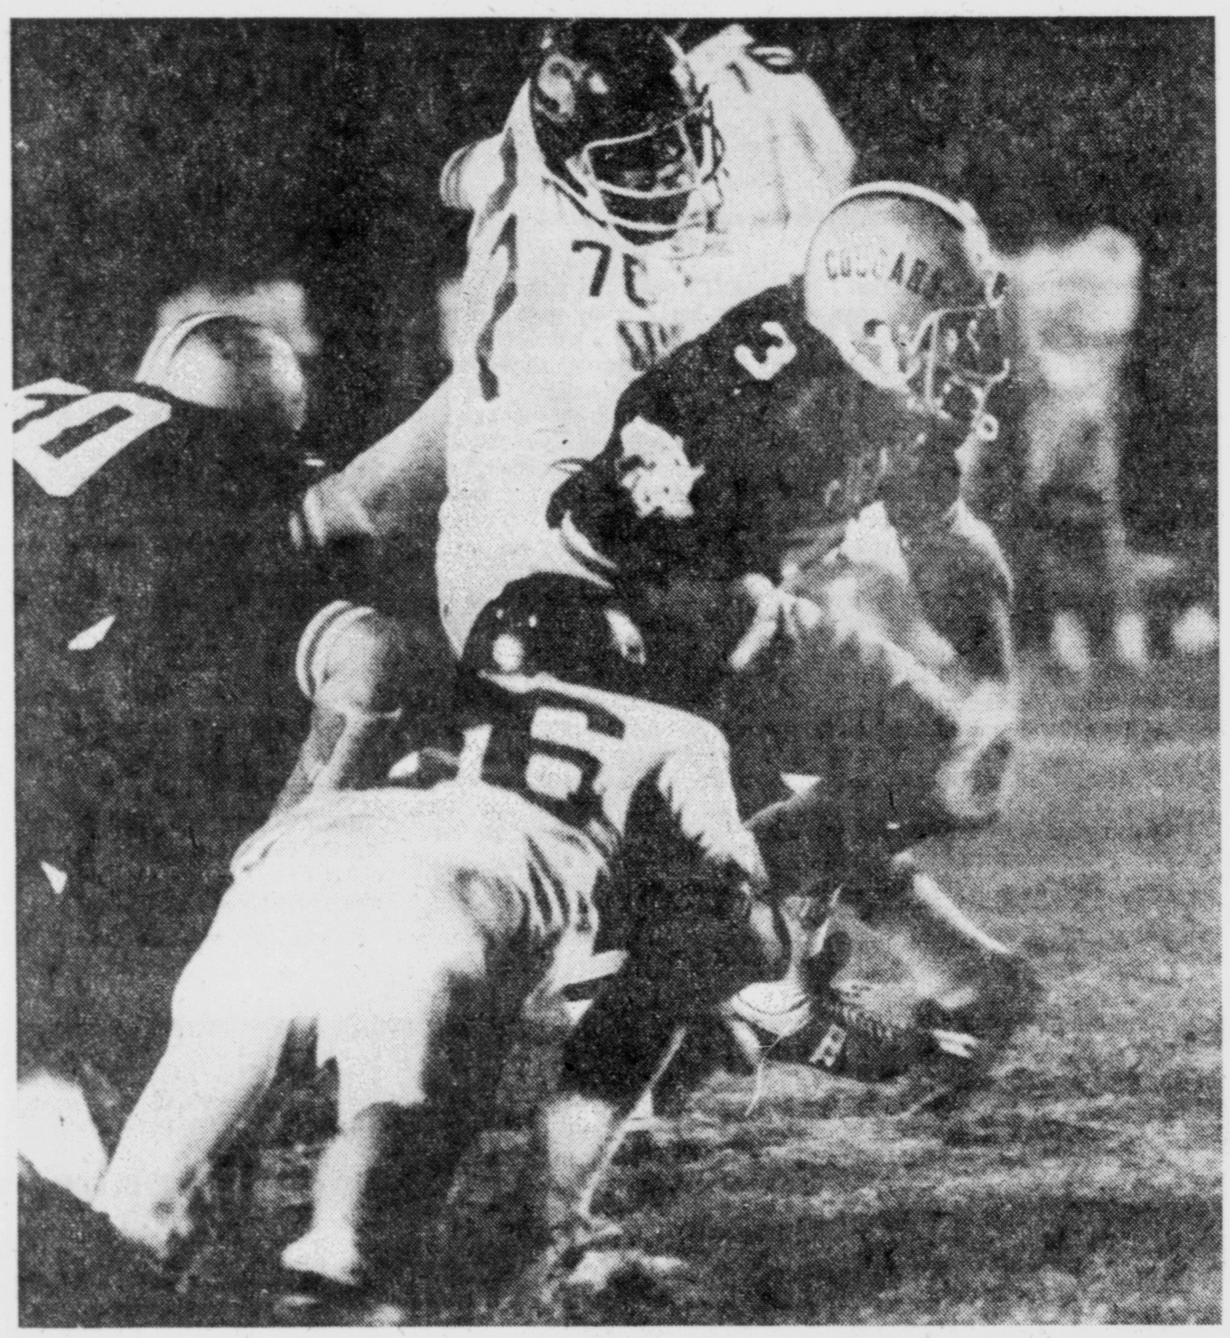
FIVE TIMES Wright was dropped for losses totalling 39 yards. Wright's net total offense running for the evening was an even zero after 15 carries.

The Conant defense kept the pressure on Wright whether he was dropping back to pass or running the option.

The shutout was the second of the season for Conant, which shut out Palatine earlier.

Schaumburg's frustration was probably typified on the final play of the game, when substitute Mark Thorson, on only his second run of the night, ran 53 yards for a touchdown after time had run out. But the play was nullified because of a clipping penalty.

The Saxons are now 1-5 over-all, 1-2 in the MSL South.



BRINGING DOWN Conant Cougar Al Barnhill (31) is Schaumburg's Brian Bock (66) during Friday night's game which was won by the host Cougars, 21-0. Barnhill gained 30 yards in 13 carries as the Cougars scored their second season shutout and won their homecoming game.

Maine West's coach to speak at cage clinic

Maine West High School Head Varsity Basketball Coach Gaston Freeman will be one of six coaches addressing the Illinois Basketball Coaches Assn. Sixth Annual Fall Clinic Oct. 29.

The clinic will be held at the Balmoral Woods Inn at Crete, Ill. from 8:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Other speakers include Norm Stewart, Missouri; Bob Ortegal, Drake; Don Laketa, Homewood-Flossmoor; Lowell Lucas, Proviso West; and George Bickett, Kaneland.

There is no cost to IBCA members. The fee for non-members is $20 for high school and college coaches and $10 for junior high and grade school coaches. Out-of-state coaches will also play $10.

The costs for women's coaches is the same as the men's.

Arlington Park has open house

Arlington Park Race Track will hold an open house, today, from 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. Between the hour, 2:30 and 3:30 p.m., qualifying races will be held.

Throughout the afternoon the activities will range from displays, interviews of the driver and trainer, movies on harness racing, and a tour of the building and back stretch.

Five thousand comic books on harness racing will be distributed. Those interested in attending can enter at Gate 5 on Euclid Ave.

Cagers' vision more likely to need help than gridders

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Tulsa, Okla., eye doctor who has examined college athletes for some 25 years believes basketabll players are more likely to need vision correction than football players by a margin of nearly two to one.

In a report to the Council on Sports Vision, Dr. John M. Donovan, vision consultant to Tulsa and Oral Roberts Universities, says 65 per cent of the basketball players he has worked with have required vision correction, compared with 35 per cent of the football players.

"It's due in part to the athletes' functions in each sport," he says. "Interior linemen don't have the strict need of a halfback, linebacker, end, or quarterback. They need to see only 20 to 30 feet in front of them, and they are looking more at people than the ball."

IN BASKETBALL, good vision is essential, Donovan says, because the players have to see through the constant flow of motion to make pinpoint passes and shots.

Donovan prefers soft contact lenses for most of his basketball and football players who need vision correction.

"Contact lenses don't distort sizes and distances. They also provide excellent peripheral vision, a must for all players. Soft contact lenses are unquestionably more comfortable than hard lenses, and they are not dislodged as easily during jarring action of football or the rapid head and eye movements required in most sports."

High court to get appeal on girls' basketball rules

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI) — A controversial rule stating junior high and high school girls must play a different game of basketball than boys in Tennessee will be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court by an Oak Ridge girl.

The issue concerns a case brought last year by Victoria Ann Cape, 16, disputing a Tennessee Secondary Schools Athletics Assn. rule that girls in those grades must play half-court basketball with six players per team, three each on offense and defense.

A senior basketball player at Oak Ridge High School, Miss Cape said because of the rule she was discriminated against in competing for college scholarships.

A RECENT RULING by the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati overturned U.S. District Judge Robert Taylor's ruling in Miss Cape's favor, saying her suit was not brought as a class action suit and "there is no indication that other members of her sex who play girl's basketball under present rules share in any way the plaintiff's views."

James Cape, the girl's father, said the appeals court ruling came as a shock to him.

"I received a copy of the decision last week and I saw nothing in it to rationalize what they did," Cape said. "We don't feel that the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals gave a valid reason for its ruling.

"And it ignored the fact that similar cases are pending in the courts in three other states with similar rules."

Ann Mosteller, Cape's attorney, said the appeals court decision "didn't address the constitutional questions involved" and that this would be the basis for the appeal.

She said the appeal would be filed in two or three weeks, as quickly as possible because this is Miss Cape's last chance to play basketball under rules similar for boys since she is a senior.

Decatur girls lead in golf

NORMAL, Ill. — Decatur MacArthur and Homewood Flossmoor tied for the lead with team scores of 367 Friday after the opening round of the Illinois High School Association's girls golf tournament.

Quincy Senior, the defending champion, was in third with 379, followed by Waukegan East, 384; Moline, 383; Oak Forest, 400; Mount Vernon 412; Quincy Notre Dame, 432; Belleville East, 451; Wheaton Warrenville, 477; Dixon, 524; Rockford West, 537; and Robinson, 582.

The final round is scheduled for Saturday.

Penny Hammel of Decatur MacArthur was the first-round individual leader with a 76 round over the par-72 course. She was followed by Mari McDougall of Oak Forest, 78; Leah Rosine, Galesburg, 82; Mary Ellen Murphy, Addison Driscoll, 83; Amy Read, Olney-East Richland, 83; and Cathy Hockin, Lake Park, 83.

Synthetic oil endorsed

SYNTHETIC MOTOR oils were given a big but little noted - endorsement in Detroit last week when a Ford Motor Co. vice president said tests of the lubricants proved they were everything the petroleum companies said they were.

But Ford stopped short of recommending that motorists use the oils in their cars during the 12-month-12,000 mile warranty period.

At last week's press preview of Ford's 1978 model cars, Robert B. Alexander, vice president-car development group, said the company tested the claim of Mobil Corp. that its Mobil One oil can go 30,000 miles without change "and verified it as right."

Alexander was answering a question about extended oil change intervals recommended by Detroit. Changes, recommended every 2,000 miles not too many years ago, are now recommended every 7,500 to 10,000 miles, so Alexander was asked whether it was possible to use a synthetic and not change at all the first year.

But Howard Freers, Ford's vice president in charge of engine and chassis development, quickly added that to keep a warranty valid, Ford still recommended changing oil at 10,000 miles on subcompacts and 7,500 miles on large cars.

Majkowski is majestic as Wheeling tops Hersey

by KEITH REINHARD

Welcome back Steve.

Wheeling's homecoming crowd didn't have a banner stating such. After all quarterback Steve Majkowski was never gone.

But his return to the lineup Friday, after being sidelined by injury the past two weeks, obviously made some kind of difference. All he did was pass for a pair of touchdowns and run for two more while inspiring a 33-21 Wildcat victory over a feisty Hersey team.

Steve Majkowski

IT WAS THE first win ever posted by the 'Cats over their neighbors to the South and in piling up five TDs, Wheeling also came up with their best offensive performance since 1971. "It looks like we've got that winning season now," smiled coach Gerry Clinnin, while fans and team members hoisted him in the air to cart him off the field.

Needless to say, there was no cause for celebration on the other side of the field, even though the Huskies had turned in an impressive — even heroic — effort in defeat.

Wheeling had jumped on their guests for a pair of first half scores and momentarily appeared on their way to rout of a win. It was to the credit of the Hersey club that, rather than yield as their winless record might indicate, they battled the Wildcats right down to the wire before finally succumbing to their sixth straight defeat.

And it was Majkowski wielding the fatal blow.

HERSEY COUNTERED Wheeling's two scores with a pair of their own to lock up the count at 14-all by halftime.

Indeed, if there were any tails dragging during the intermission, they were of the feline rather than of the canine variety.

"We didn't get very emotional at halftime," Clinnin recalled. "We just laid it out on the line very systematically to the kids, telling them not to get down on themselves and explaining how we could come back."

It obviously worked, although the game's verdict was very much in doubt even down to the final waning moments of play. Wheeling scored on a Majkowski 20-yard pass to Tim Miller, going up 20-14, and then scored again to take a 26-14 advantage on a seven-yard scamper by Majkowski.

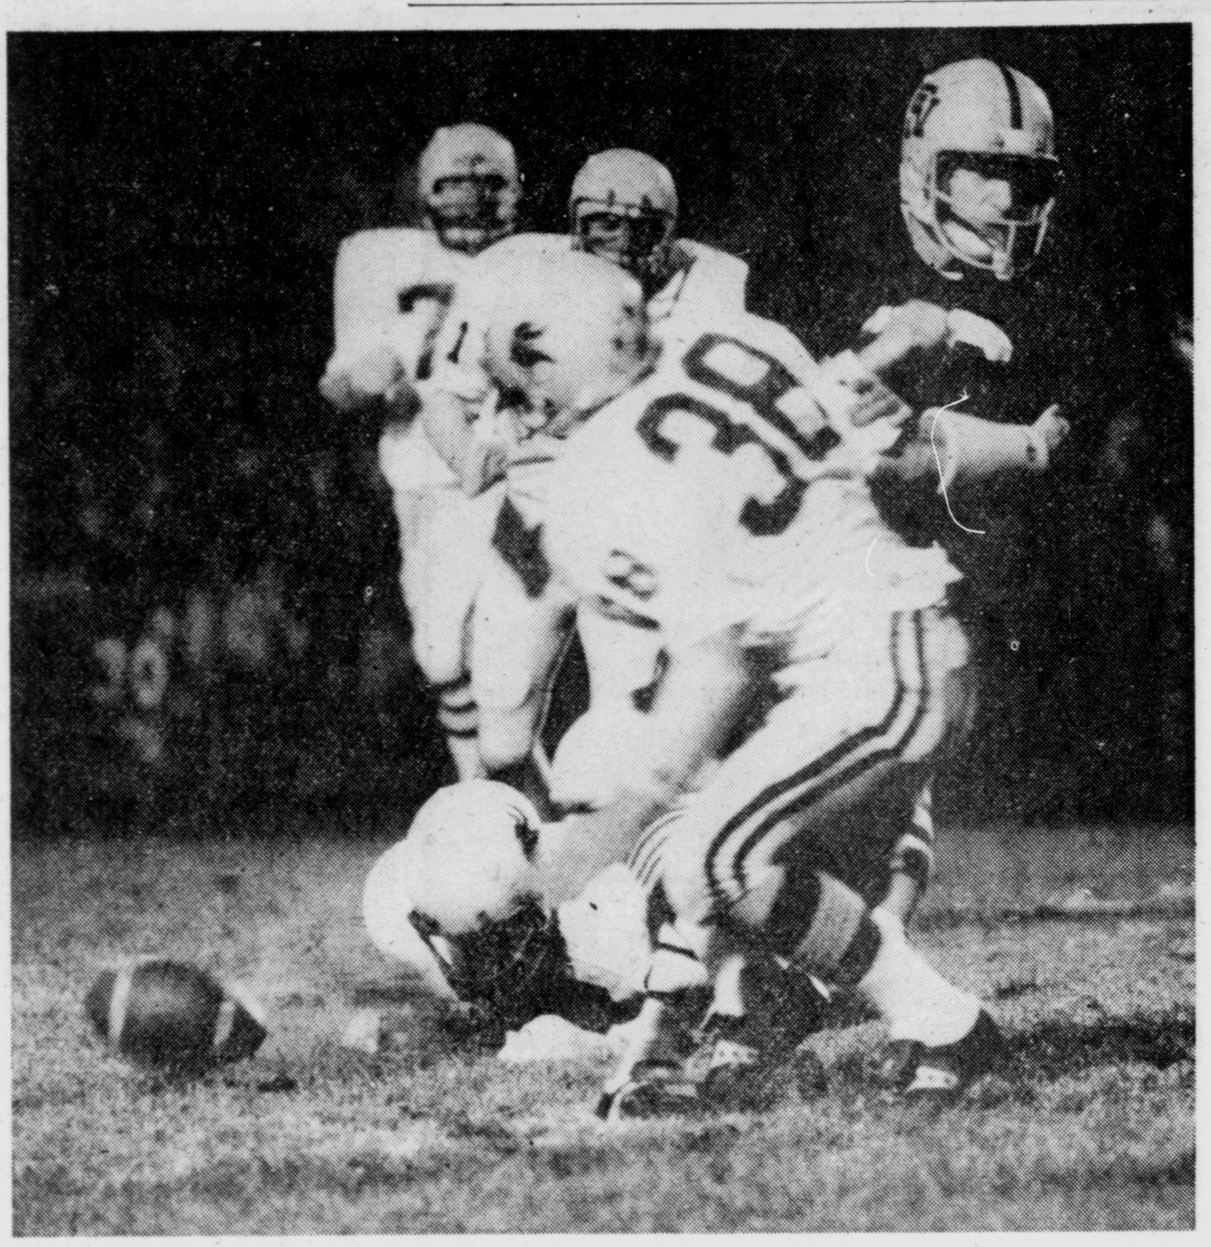
THE DAN Vucovich-led visitors charged right back as play moved through the fourth quarter. A 25-yard run by sophomore John Lesniak keyed the drive and Vucovich eventually went over from the one to pull his team within five points, 26-21.

Hersey's defense held after that and they regained possession with more than three minutes left on the clock. Miller intercepted a Vucovich pass moments later after it was deflected by Wildcat Ed Joas.

Again Hersey stood fast. It was fourth and one for the Wildcats near midfield and there was still nearly a minute remaining. After a timeout, the 'Cats went for broke and Majkowski broke off a 52-yard touchdown scamper that put their fourth win in six tries on ice.

"We debated long and hard on whether or not to go for it, knowing they had blocked a punt in the first half to set up one of their scores," Clinnin sighed. "I told Steve to fake a handoff and go for it."

He did.



FALCON ball carrier John Miscevich keeps moving, but leaves the ball behind during Forest View's 14-10 loss to Fremd Friday night. The Vikings' Bruce Messner (38) is fixing to pounce on the loose ball.

Badger glad exhibition season over

by DON FRISKE

Coach Ed Badger probably was the happiest man in the world to see his Bulls return to Chicago Friday night. The victory they achieved just made things even more pleasant for the second-year coach.

The Bulls defeated the Milwaukee Bucks, 107-101 to close an exhibition season Badger would like to forget.

It was only the Bulls' second win against six defeats and Badger showed signs of fatigue, tinged with relief, after the contest.

"HEY, I'M GLAD this is over," he said. "There have been too many games, too many injuries, too much travel. Just too much."

Badger and his Bulls won't have much time to dwell on their misfortunes of the eight games that really meant nothing more than a practice session. They open the regular season in Cleveland Tuesday night and then play in Houston 24 hours later.

As an indication of his interest in the games that will count, Badger spent most of Friday doing homework on those two teams. The bucks were of minor importance.

When it finally came time to play Milwaukee, Badger saw his players make the same mistakes that have hurt them during the entire preseason. His biggest concern was the team's inability to take advantage of a sizable lead.

IT HAPPENED again Friday night when the Bulls put together a brief surge midway through the third quarter. Two free throws by Wilbur Holland gave Chicago a 70-61 lead with 6:43 on the clock.

The offense then collapsed along with the defense as the Bucks marched right back with three straight feild goals to make it a close game again.

"We just have to get that killer instinct," Badger said, with added emphasis on the last two words.

Forward Mickey Johnson showed a little of what his coach was talking about when he excited the crowd of 6,723 by slam-dunking a rebound late in the third period. That helped him end the game as the leading scorer with 23 points, followed on the Bulls by Holland, who finished with 18.

"Some of the guys are playing like they should," Badger said. "If you are going to win any preseason games, it's best to win that last one."

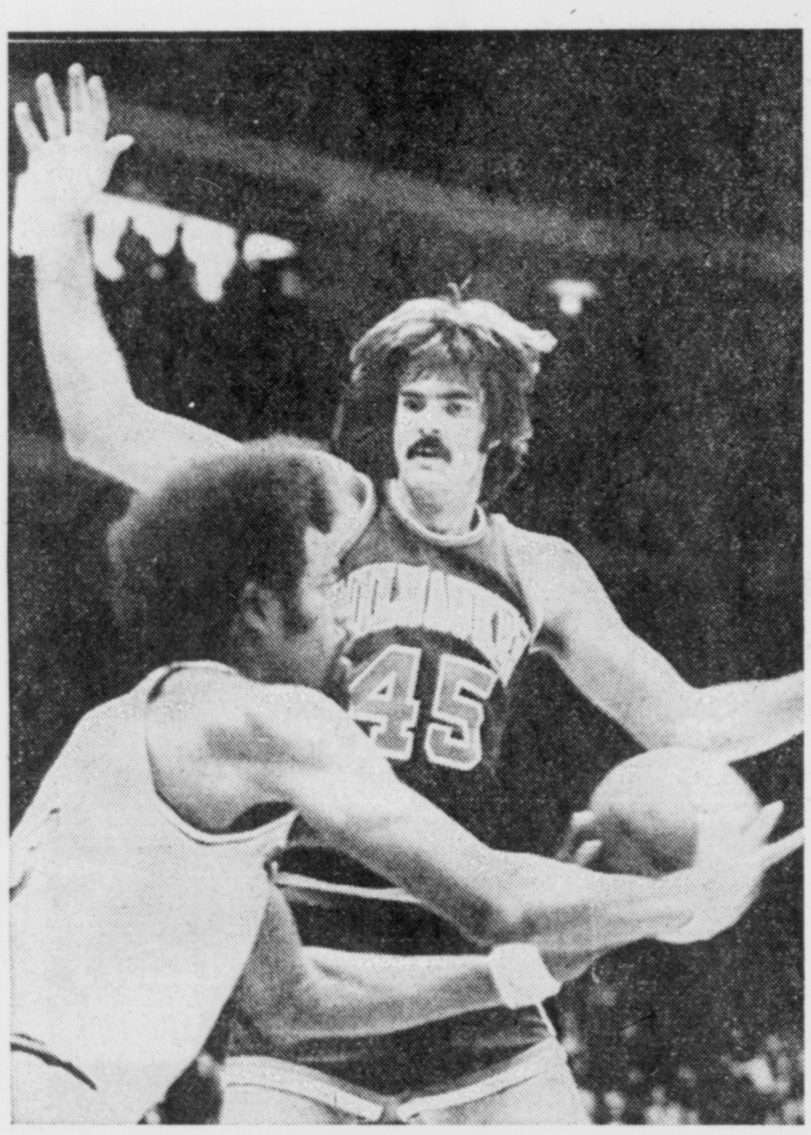
BADGER SINGLED out the aggressive play of guards Norm Van Lier and John Mengelt. He also had praise for recently-acquired Nick Weatherspoon, who came off the bench to score 10 points.

"I was encouraged by Weatherspoon," the coach said. "He showed me what I like to get out of a third forward."

Center Artis Gilmore looked sluggish throughout the game. He has been averaging 35 minutes during the exhibition schedule, which prompted his coach to excuse the tired appearance. But Badger added that the Bulls have four games in five days next week, each one counting.

Milwaukee had the most impressive rookies on the floor Friday night. Marques Johnson from UCLA and tiny Lloyd Walton from Marquette led the Bucks with 18 and 15 points, respectively. Alex English, a rookie out of South Carolina, also had 15.

Heralded Buck rookie Kent Benson spent the game in street clothes on the bench with a bruised rib cage.



BULLS' ARTIS Gilmore, left, seems to have a problem getting past Milwaukee's Scott Lloyd in action Friday night at the Chicago Stadium. The Bulles pulled out a 107-101 evhibition victory.

Washington sets 2-1 victory in hockey opener

Bob Sirois and Guy Charron each had a goal and an assist Friday night in pacing Washington to a 2-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins in the Capitals' National Hockey League opener in Maryland.

Charron, the Caps' leading scorer last season, provided the game-winner when he deflected Gord Smith's slapshot past Penguin goalie Dunc Wilson midway through the second period.

Linemate Siolis had tied the game 1-1 at 1:11 into the second period by slipping in a loose puck at the edge of the Pittsburgh goal crease.

Greg Malone gave Pittsburgh the lead in the first period with his second goal of the season.

Each goaltender faced 23 shots. Wilson turned aside 11 shots in the final period to keep his team close while Cap goalie Bernie Wolfe stopped 12 Penguin shots in the critical second period.

Hilliard Graves and Mike Walton scored third period goals to rally the Vancouver Canucks to a 4-4 tie with the Colorado Rockies in the season opener for both teams.

The Rockies carried a 4-2 lead into the final period but Walton scored at 5:27 and Graves tied the game with just over six minutes left in the game.

Ron Andruff had scored to put Colorado ahead 3-2 in the second period. Andruff then assisted on Ron Delormes' goal to give Colorado a two-goal lead but the Rockies saw the lead slip away in the final period.

Barnes trades jail for Pistons' lineup

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Detroit Pistons forward Marvin Barnes, who said he had a lot of time "to check myself out," rejoined his teammates in Buffalo Friday after serving five months of a one year prison sentence for a probation violation.

Barnes was released from the Rhode Island Adult Correctional Institutions just after midnight Friday after he was granted parole last month. He was picked up in a Rolls Royce by his attorney, Raul Lovett, at 12:15 a.m. and had a chance to visit his mother, Lula, who he said was "right there with me in my corner.

"I had a chance to check myself out," Barnes told a news conference just hours before he was scheduled to join the Pistons on the basketball court in a preseason game against the Buffalo Braves. "I've paid my debt to society. I wanted to just come out and be a basketball player again."

Archer leads Texas Open by stroke

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — George Archer shot a 67 Friday to go 9-under-par and take a one-stroke lead over Miller Barber after 36 holes of the $150,000 Texas Open golf tournament.

Coupled with his opening-round 64, Archer came from second place to take the lead on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course which drew 14,500 spectators, the second record gallery in as many days.

Barber came in with the day's low score of 64 Friday after posting a 68 on the first 18 holes and stood alone at 8-under-par.

Charles Coody, who was the first-round leader with a sizzling 63, managed an even par 70 Friday for a total 133 and third place in the standings along with Carlton White, who had rounds of 67-66.

Renee triumphs as Reid walks out

PHOENIX, Ariz — Transsexual Renee Richards, accustomed to controversy, reached the semifinals of the $75,000 Phoenix women's tennis tournament Friday and carried trouble with her.

Fifth-seeded Kerry Reid walked off the court when she was trailing Richards 7-6, 4-1. Reid and her husband, Raz a player on the international men's circuit, threw a towel in anger as she was leaving the court, which narrowly missed hitting Richards.

They hastily left the center court and gave "personal reasons" for defaulting. However, Reid's husband declared, "Kerry will never play Renee again." Reid was playing without any physical problem and their walkoff apparently was personally directed at Richards. Richards said, "Frankly I'm floored she did that. I can't see someone coming very close to winning and then walking off."

NBA roster battle before mediator

NEW YORK — The dispute between the National Basketball Assn. and the NBA Player's Assn. over the number of players assigned to NBA rosters will be submitted to arbitrator Peter Seitz, it was announced Friday.

"The action by both the league and the Player's Association was taken at the suggestion of the National Labor Relations Board," said NBA Deputy Commissioner Simon Gourdine.

The Player's Assn. had charged the NBA with unfair labor practice after the League ruled that NBA rosters would be trimmed from 12 to 11 beginning this season, resulting in 22 players losing their jobs in the 22-team league.

Orantes upset in Grand Prix tennis

MADRID — Seventh-seeded Paolo Bertolucci of Italy beat fourth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain in the only upset Friday's in quarter-final matches of the Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Orantes played near-perfect tennis in the first set, but then lost his concentration. Bertolucci, hurt by numerous unforced errors in the first set, started to gain confidence and played more aggressively as the match progressed.

The only one of Friday's winners who had an easy match was Bjorn Borg.

Palatine hosts girls run today

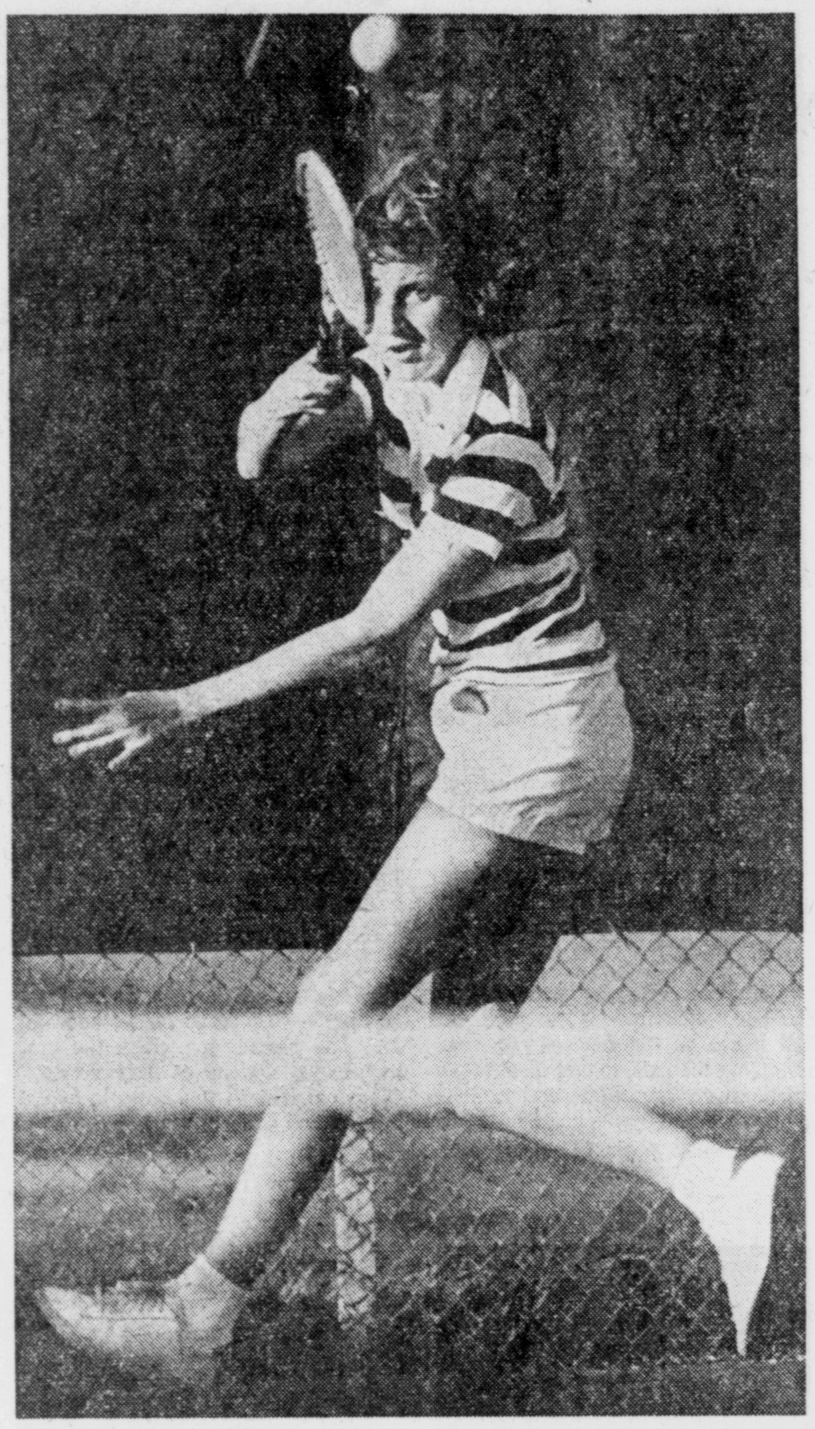
Four teams are expected to dominate Palatine High School's first ever girls cross country invitational today.

The event will be held at the Union '76 Field in Schaumburg. The Open race begins at 11 a.m. followed by the varsity competition one-half hour later.

Meet favorites besides the host school are Hoffman Estates, Rich South, and Downers Grove North. York Community and Glenbrook South are regarded as darkhorse threats.

Other entrants include Lake Forest, Naperville Central, Naperville North, Crown Point (Ind.) and Munster (Ind.)

Scoreboard



RETURNING A SHOT in tennis action against Hoffman Estates is Rose Kraft of Sacred Heart High School. Rose dropped her singles match to Kate Swaya of Hoffman.

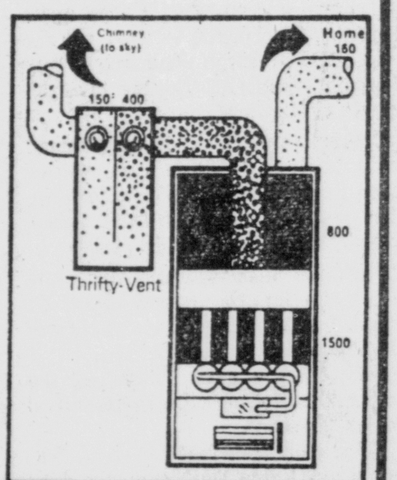
Thrifty-Vent
CUTS YOUR GAS BILL!

Unique patented device guarantees to reduce your furnace's heat loss by at least 30%.

CBS 60 Minutes reports on heat saving devices to the public.

Your furnace is supposed to heat your home, not the great outdoors, but that is exactly what it is doing right now and you are paying for it. Through the installation of THRIFTY-VENT you can cut your heat loss (the heat that escapes out your chimney) by at least 100 degrees or 30%, some savings can be as much as 50%. While heating your home more evenly and consistently, THRIFTY-VENT allows you to turn down your gas pressure by 20%, traps the heat that would normally be lost to the sky, and transforms your wasteful LP or natural gas furnace into an efficient, longer lasting power plant.

Small and neat in appearance, this remarkable device is quickly and easily installed by a trained and licensed THRIFTY-VENT dealer. There is no need to purchase a completely new system - THRIFTY-VENT attaches directly to your present system. The life and efficiency of your furnace is actually increased by reduced wear and tear, since after installation of THRIFTY-VENT the unit operates about one-third less often while providing your family with more even, comfortable heat. This money-saving device is simply designed, completely safe, no moving parts, no expensive service calls to keep the system functioning and guaranteed for 5 years, saving you



Average gas furnace after installation of THRIFTY-VENT

THRIFTY-VENT guarantees to reduce wasted heat by 100° or 30% or your money back and keep the unit!!!

- Guaranteed to reduce heat loss by 100° or 30%
- Lowers your gas bill by estimated 20% to 50%
- Gas pressure lowered by 20%
- Saves money
- Saves energy

Bing Crosby

Love for song, love for sport

by IRA KAUFMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bing Crosby's love for song was perhaps rivaled only by his love for sport.

The pipe-smoking crooner, who died Friday at 73 while playing golf in Spain, strolled down golf fairways with some of the greatest names in the game's history, as well as several U.S. presidents, was a part owner and vice president of baseball's Pittsburgh Pirates and was an ardent enthusiast of fishing and hunting.

It was Crosby's interest in the pleasures of golf and his friendship with pro golfers which led him in 1937 to undertake sponsorship of a small annual tournament on the winter tour — "Crosby's Clambake" — which has since evolved into the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, one of the highlights of the pro golf tour.

Starting out as just a "get-together" at the Rancho Santa Fe course in Southern California, the Crosby Clambake has developed into perhaps the most entertaining event on the PGA tour. Since 1947 it has been held on the Monterey Peninsula as a three-day, 54-hole affair with the first eighteen holes shot over the Cypress Point course, the second 18 over the Monterey Peninsula Country Club and the final round shot over Pebble Beach.

Crosby footed the bill for all of the tournament's expenses, enabling the total proceeds from admissions and the program to go to local charities.

Crosby was never content to orchestrate his Pro-Am from backstage: whenever their schedules permitted, Crosby and his longtime friend, Bob Hope, participated in the tournament. Crosby was an authentic low-70's player, good enough to qualify for the National Amateur in 1940.

Ted Durein, press director of the Crosby National Pro-Am, said a decision would be made over the weekend on whether the popular celebrity golf tournament would be continued.

The next "Crosby Clambake," which has raised thousands of dollars for various charities, is scheduled for Jan. 19-22 — the third stop on next year's Professional Golf Association's winter tour.

"We're all in a state of shock," Durein, who has been affiliated with the tournament since 1946, said after learning of Crosby's death in Spain. "The only thing we can say now about the Pro-Am is that it has not yet been determined if it will be continued. We will know by Monday.

"We have to contact the family and a final determination will be made then."

PROUD WINNERS. Palatine's Tom Johnson (right) receives congratulations from some of his Pirate teammates after individual victory in cross country race against Fremd. Johnson's winning time was 15:08 as Pirates broke Fremd's 64-meet win streak, 27-29.

Bears aiming to beat Vikings and tie for division lead

by BOB GALLAS

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Fresh from a physcially draining but emotionally uplifting upset win over the Rams on national television Monday, the Bears arrive here today with an eye on first place in the National Football Conference Central Division.

The Vikings, who have won eight of the last nine division titles, bring a 3-1 mark into Sunday's game, which has been a sellout since training camp. The Bears, meanwhile, are 2-2. A Chicago win would put them in a tie for the lead.

While most of the Vikings' key players are in their 30s, the Bears' average age is 24 and most have less than four years of National Football League combat. But Minnesota coach Bud Grant knows the Bears will be tough.

"EVERY TEAM we've seen in our division, and we've played three in a row, has been improved," Grant said this week. "We certainly have to assume the Bears are improved too."

Grant doesn't have to asssme. All he had to do was watch Monday night along with millions of others across the country as the Bears combined defensive play with three touchdown passes from quarterback Bob Avellini to humble the Rams, 24-23.

The rivalry between the two teams is fierce so most of the Bears aren't worried about a letdown after Monday's win. Last year,the Bears lost a 20-19 decision to the Vikings at Bloomington in a game that featured two missed Chicago extra points. The Bears won the return engagement in an equally exciting cliffhanger, 14-13.

What the Bears are worried about is the field. Heavy rain last week produced a sea of mud for the Vikings 14-7 win over Detroit. It has snowed since then in Bloomington and there is a chance of rain this weekend.

"I DON'T KNOW how bad it will be but it must be bad because the Viking were doing the most complaining," said Bears coach Jack Pardee. "And it's their field."

But Pardee believes if the field is wet, it will be more of a handicap to Viking running backs, than tonthe Bears.

"Chuck Foreman (Minnesota running back) fell two or three times," Pardee said. "He's a spinner. He hits the line and then spins around and a wet field will bother him."

Though the Bears, too, rely heavily on a big runner, namely Walter Payton, Pardee thinks Payton would have a better chance running through the slop.

"WHEN HE changes direction, he plants his foot pretty good," Pardee said. "The mud would affect sweeps, tosses and going to the side because you can't cut back upfield. But I think we'll be able to run straight ahead pretty good."

Last week, the Vikings and the Lions had to rely on passing, rather than running. Both clubs threw for more than 200 yards but the Lions ran for only 59 yards, while Minnesota netted only 58 yards on the ground.

Both clubs appear healthy for the contest. The Vikings listed no one on their injured list this week, while the Bears' maladies were generally minor. Everyone is expected to be ready for Sunday.

Both defensive tackle Wally Chambers and Doug Plank came through their debuts OK physically. Both had been sidelined with knee problems but now appear to be alright, though Chambers probably will play part time to a maximum of three quarters, which is what he played against the Rams.

"HE COULD probably go three quarters but I don't intend to play him that much," Pardee said. "If he's feeling well he'll be in there, though."

The Vikings haven't exactly rolled over the opposition this year though they have beaten three division rivals already, following a 16-10 loss to Dallas in overtime to start the season.

The Vikings had their hands full in Tampa but escaped with a 9-3 win over the Buccaneers. The Vikings then topped Green Bay 19-7.

Their 14-7 win over the Lions last week was because of a little help from Lady Luck.

The final Vikings touchdown came when quaretrback Fran Tarkenton passed to Ahmad Rashad, who lateraled to Sammy White before running out of bounds. White took the lateral and ran 59 yards for the clinching touchdown.

Michigan-Wisconsin tilt biggest of the big games

College football

by IRA KAUFMAN

Can a bunch of feisty Badgers invade a snarling pack of Wolverines and do any real damage?

An overflow Michigan Stadium crowd will find out today when 15th-ranked Wisconsin comes into Ann Arbor for a "big" Big 10 Battle with top-rated Michigan.

The Badgers sport a 3-0 record within the Big 10 and are 5-0 overall although Coach John Jardine has been forced to flop between quarterbacks Anthony Dudley and Charles Green due to injuries. Wisconsin's defense, though, has been steady throughout — allowing only 34 points in five games.

MICHIGAN MOVED from second place into the top spot of UPI's ratings last week, despite a lethargic effort (24-14 victory) against state rival Michigan State. When Alabama upset top-ranked Southern Cal 21-20, the Wolverines vaulted into first place and tomorrow's game with Wisconsin will indicate whether Michigan's rating is due to performance or fortune.

Coach Bo Schembechler, who has compiled a glittering 81-11-3 record at Michigan, wouldn't discriminate between the men who operate the Badger offense: "They're both pretty much the same, so it won't make much difference." Schembechler said they're both niftier than last years' Badger quarterback, Mike Carroll, whom he said was "a better passer."

Dudley was on the sidelines, able to play, as Green guided Wisconsin to a 26-0 mauling of the same Illinois team Michigan mashed 37-9 in its opening game of the season.

Green hit his first six passes and wound up completing 11 of 16 for 148 yards and a touchdown. He also has sprinter speed, rushing for 33 yards in the game.

Dudley has completed 31 of 57 passes for 450 yards and two touchdowns in his starts.

MICHIGAN HAS only one tested quarterback — but he's sufficient.

All-American candidate Rick Leach, only a junior, is already within the grasp of the all-time Michigan record for total offense.

Badger Coach John Jardine is more concerned,however, with the Wolverine's running game: "What we better come up with is a way to stop Michigan's speedsters, junior tailback Harlan Huckleby and sophomore wingback Ralph Clayton."

Elsewhere in the top 10, second-ranked Texas plays at eighth-rated Arkansas, third-rated Colorado visits Kansas, number four Alabama hosts Tennessee, fifth-ranked Ohio St. travels to Iowa, sixth-rated Oklahoma plays at Missouri, number seven Southern California hosts Oregon, ninth-rated Nebraska plays Iowa St. at home and 10th-ranked Penn State visits Syracuse.

THE RAZORBACKS host the Longhorns in the 59th renewal of a fierce annual rivalry which Texas has dominated with 44 victories. New coach Lou Holtz has gotten the Razorbacks off winging to a 4-0 start with quarterback Ron Calcagni and runner Ben Cowins the early standouts. The Arkansas defense has allowed only 25 points so far, but they will be challenged by an explosive Texas offense.

Two team race in MSL tennis meet

by VIC NOVAK

Favorites Arlington and Barrington dominated Friday's preliminary and quarterfinal rounds of the Mid-Suburban League Girls tennis tournament.

Action at Forest View and Rolling Meadows high schools showed the perennial powers with 13 points each. Their closest pursuers were Prospect and Fremd with eight points each.

The scoring was rounded out with six for Rolling Meadows, five each for Wheeling, Hersey, Buffalo Grove and Forest View, three each for Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Hersey and Elk Grove, two for Conant, and one for Schaumburg.

THE THIRD singles and second doubles competitions claimed the only major upsets.

In third singles, fourth-seeded Lisa Benson of Schaumburg was upset by Wheeling's Bonnie Halvorsen 6-3, 6-1.

Second doubles saw the third-seeded team of Laura Riforgiato and Rhonda Welch fall to Fremd's Donelda Danz and Mary Gross 6-2, 7-6.

All other top seeded players advanced to today's semifinal round. They are slated for Rolling Meadows at 9 a.m. The finals are tentatively scheduled for 11 a.m.

The fourth doubles competition was curtailed by darkness Friday, before the preliminary round was finished.

HERE ARE THE semifinal pairings:

First Singles — Lisa Smart, Buffalo Grove, vs. Sarah Olson, Barrington; Janet Haberkorn, Arlington, vs. Kate Swaya, Hoffman Estates.

Second Singles — Deborah Sampson, Hersey, vs. Ann Huber, Barrington; Kris Richey, Arlington, vs. Carla Rub, Prospect.

Third Singles — Vicki Moore, Prospect, vs. Nancy Russell, Barrington; Bonnie Halvorsen, Wheeling, vs. Sherry Weber, Arlington.

First Doubles — Laura Sanders and Kim Broderick, Arlington, vs. Cindy Keagle and Candie Kastning, Rolling Meadows; Sue Stephan and Tina Gregory, Barrington, vs. Lisa Young and Anne Hoffman, Prospect.

Second Doubles — Diane Owen and Jana Pope, Barrington vs. Donelda Danz and Mary Gross, Fremd; Debbie Kuhn and Dawn Wiebe, Rolling Meadows vs. Beth Klawitter and Nancy DiCola, Arlington.

Third Doubles — Nancy Carter and Mary Weber, Arlington, vs. Alison Hodge and Tracy Marconi, Fremd; Jacquie Anderson and Kim Langowski, Forest View vs. Lisa Thompson and Julie Paul, Barrington.

At the Central Suburban League South Division meet held at Glenbrook South and North, Maine West's Nancy Weber and Denise Jenderzak qualified for the semis but advanced no further. Nancy lost to the top first singles seed Randy Rosen of Maine East, 7-5, 6-3. Denise was beaten by Glenbrook North's Ellyn Sonneberg 6-1, 7-6.

Don't duck getting ready for fowl hunt

When it comes time to squeeze the trigger for the first time this year next Saturday, many waterfowl hunters will discover:

- There is rust on the muzzle of their shotgun.
- There is a hole in their waders.
- Their timing and execution are unsynchronized.
- All of the above.

Duck and goose hunters are among the greatest procrastinators in the world and I say that from experience. I'm one of the biggest offenders of putting off until the day before the opening of the season what should have been done weeks in advance.

I've been turned away from four post offices while attempting to purchase the federal duck stamp on the eve of past seasons.

SPORTING GOODS store managers shake their heads and show me empty pads where stacks of hunting licenses used to be. There are displays with three tons of upland game and shooting range shells, but the shelves where the duck and goose loads should be are desolate.

Now's the time to take the waders off the hanger and check for leaks, not when you'll be tramping through the half-frozen marsh at the start of a 10-hour shooting day.

It also would be a shot in the arm to take the gun out of moth balls and out of the shooting range where a few clay pigeons might restore a touch of marksmanship.

A veil of light oil on the barrel and stock will protect the firearm against fall's moisture and prevent the formation of rust.

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

"IT'S ALSO THE time for the waterfowler to return to the classroom now that the entire Illinois duck program is based on zones, the point system and bird identification.

Waterfowl hunters again will be allowed 100 points worth of ducks per day. The point values of species are:

100 points — canvasback and redhead; 70 points — mallard hen, wood duck, black duck, hooded merganser; 25 points — mallard drake wigeon, ringneck, holdeye, bufflehead, old squaw, ruddy, all scoters and all other species not covered.

10 points — pintail, blue-winged teal, green-winged teal, cinnamon teal, gadwell, shoveler, scaup and mergansers. Coots are not included in the point system and hunters will be allowed 15 birds per day and 30 in possession.

ANOTHER CLASSROOM-related activity is duck calling. There are several excellent record albums that will teach the novice or refresh the veteran on the various quacks and honks that will entice birds over decoys and in front of the blind.

The experimental duck hunting zones (the state is divided by U.S. Hwy. 50 through St. Clair, Clinton, Marion, Clay, Richland and Lawrence counties) enable hunters in the northern segment of the state to begin next Saturday, and continue through Dec. 5 while southern zone shooters begin Nov. 5 and conclude Dec. 19. Hours are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

The experimental zones will allow the state to set seasons hopefully at times when the duck populations are at peak levels.

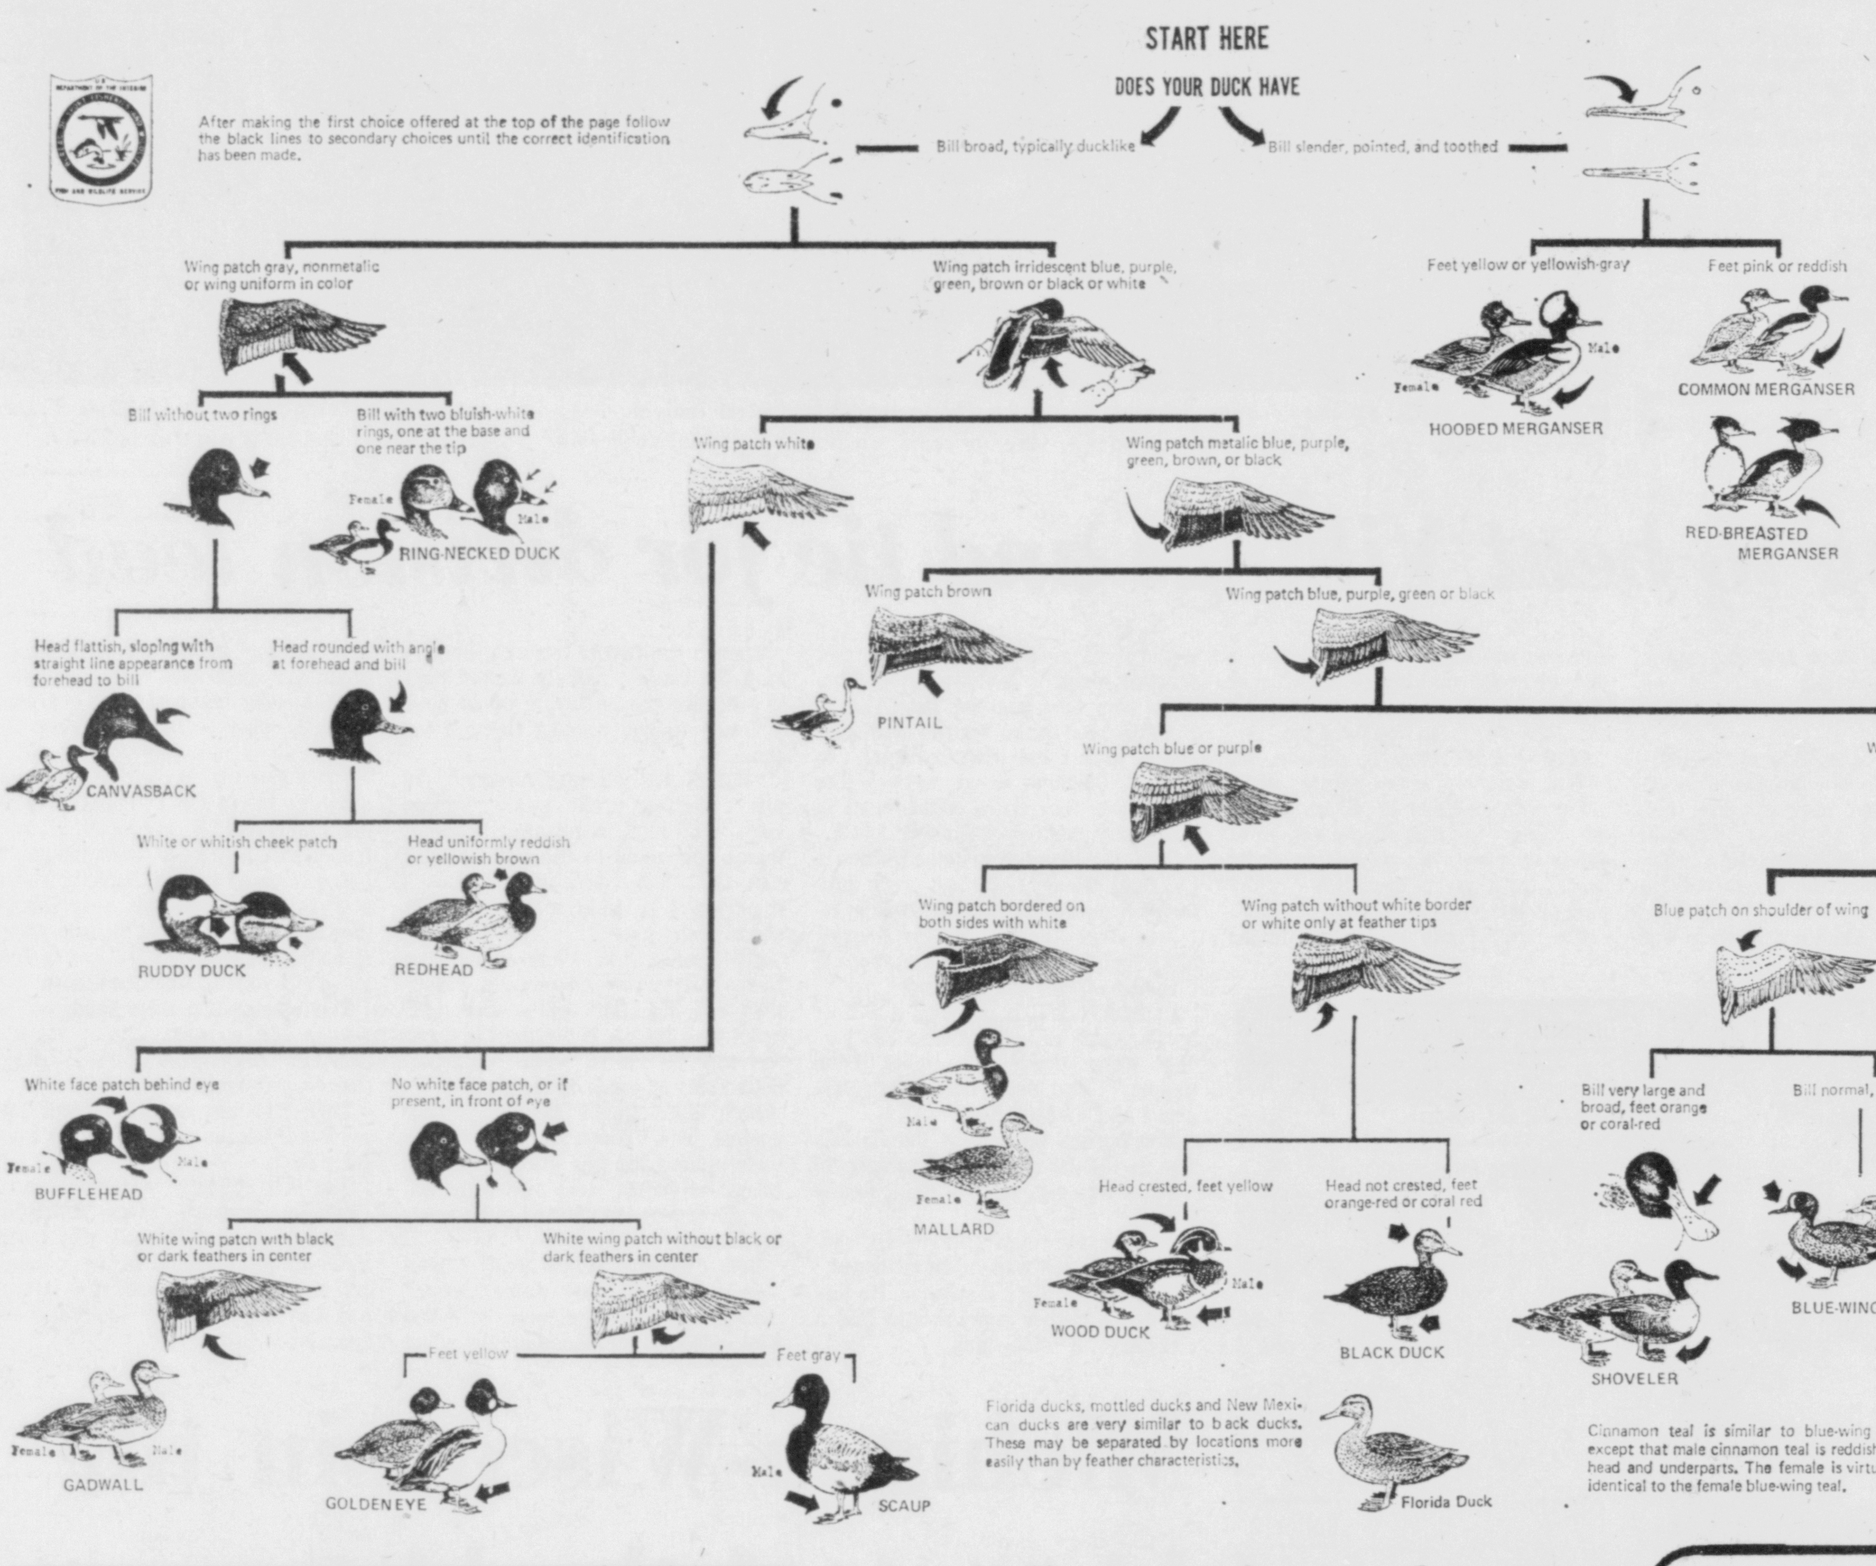
This spring's Canadian duck breeding population was down about four per cent from last year because of the lack of water in breeding grounds.

THE BREEDING population of mallards, traditionally the most numerous species, decreased 5 per cent from 1976. Decrease and increase percentages of other species were gadwall up five, wigeon down one, green-winged teal down eight, shoveler down 11, pintail down 13, redhead down 27, canvasback up two and scaup up seven.

The goose season, which also opens Saturday and extends through Dec. 30 allows for the hunter that the daily bag limit of up to five geese may not include more than two Canada geese or their sub-species, or two white-fronted geese or one of each, plus three geese of another species.

The hunting season in the four-county goose zone in Southern Illinois is Nov. 21 through Jan. 20 or until 29,000 geese have been harvested. Shooting hours in the quota area are sunrise to 3 p.m.

Duck Identification-Guide For Hunters



This pictorial aid is designed to assist in recognizing ducks in the hand after they have been bagged.

The shape of the bill, wing markings, color of feet or head crest are some of the typical characteristics used to identify ducks in the hand. This is quite different from identification of ducks in flight or sitting on water. When flying or on water other identifying features are used such as silhouettes, mannerisms of flight, wing beat, speed of flight or color patterns on body and wings. Every effort should be made to learn to recognize ducks before they are shot. By doing this the hunter is able to take much greater advantage of his sport.

Although occasionally seen inland, sea ducks are not included in this key. They are most frequently found in open salt water areas.

Free shells part of goose hunt test

Many of the waterfowl hunters who will use the Union County public hunting area this fall will be in for a pleasant surprise — free shotgun shells.

However, they won't know what type shell they have until they complete their hunt. The free shells are part of an Illinois Department of Conservation experiment to determine the effectiveness of different types of steel and lead shot for hunting geese.

"Extensive tests have been conducted on the effectiveness of steel shot for the duck hunter, but tests on hunting geese with steel shot have been limited," said Jack Ellis, supervisor of the Division of Wildlife Resources. "Hopefully, the tests we conduct at Union County this hunting season will be able to help correct this deficiency."

FOUR BLINDS will be involved in the test each hunting day at Union County, and two hunters per blind will be provided with the unmarked shells. An observer will be stationed at the blinds to record the performance of the hunters using the free shells.

At the conclusion of the hunt, the sportsmen will be asked how they felt the shells they used performed, and what type shotgun shell they thought they were using during the hunt.

Shells are provided by the Federal government and include four types: 1 ½ ounce No. 2 lead shot, 1 ½ ounce BB lead shot, 1 1/8 ounce No. 1 steel shot, and 1 1/8 ounce BB steel shot.

The latter is a newly developed, untested shell. Biologists indicate that 1 1/8 ounce of steel has about the same number of pellets as 1¼ ounce of lead shot.

Proposal Notice

The Village of Schaumburg will accept proposals for professional engineering services relative to a proposed F.A.U.S project in the village, consisting of the construction of a commuter rail station parking lot located at the Milwaukee Road tracks and Springinsguth Road Extension.

Proposals should be in the engineering department office by 5 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, 1977 at 101 Schaumburg Court.

All proposals must be accompanied by a list of representative projects and fee schedule for the proposed improvements.

Detailed specifications concerning the requested engineering services and scope of the work to be provided can be picked up in the engineering department of the Village of Schaumburg.

The Village Board of Trustees reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals and to make the award it deems necessary in the best interest of the village. All proposals must be in compliance with the Equal Employment Opportunity clause required by the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission as a material term of all public contracts.

Cost of phone service to rise 6.1% as result of AT&T pact: U.S. study

The cost of providing telephone service across the nation will increase 6.1 per cent over the next three years as a result of a new contract between American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and its employe unions a government study estimated Friday.

The cost of the contracts to Illinois Bell Telephone Co. will be approximately $220 million during the next three years, said an Illinois Bell spokesman.

"It's an increase in costs. We're facing increases like everyone else," said spokesman Paul Newton of the new contracts. Newton said figures are not available on Illinois Bell's current yearly labor expenditures.

THE COUNCIL ON Wage and Price Stability said terms of the collective bargaining agreement, which covers 650,000 AT&T workers, would result in wage increases of 8.3 per cent in the first year and 25 per cent over the three year life of the contract, an average annual increase of 7.7 per cent.

That figure, the study said, takes into account provisions for cost-of-living increases and is based on the assumption that inflation will rise at a 6 per cent annual rate.

"The new agreement emphasizes greater income security for telephone workers and improves pension and health insurance benefits," the council said.

The council, which is responsible for monitoring inflationary trends for the White House, indicated that the American consumer would be affected by the wage boost.

"Assuming a 6 per cent annual growth in productivity over the next three years," the council said, "the settlement will raise the unit cost of providing telephone service by 2.7 per cent in the first year and about 6.1 per cent over the three-year life of the contract."

THE COUNCIL study said the average hourly wage on telephone workers over the past decade has risen considerably faster than the earnings of private, nonfarm workers in general.

Beween 1967 and this year, the council said, telephone employe hourly wages have gone up from $2.89 to $6.77, a 134 per cent increase.

In contrast, private, nonfarm workers hourly wages have increased from $2.67 in 1967 to $5.22 this year, a 95.5 per cent increase.

"Telephone workers' earnings have grown considerably more than those of workers generally," the council said.

The new wage pact covers AT T employes who are members of the Communications workers of America, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and the Indenational Uuion.

Local role urged in subsidy housing

The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has called on federal housing authorities to allow increased participation by local governments in deciding where federally - assisted housing should be built.

In response, the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development gave NIPC the go-ahead to put its demands and proposals into writing.

However, HUD Sec. Patricia Harris told NIPC her agency would not be bound by any recommendation from local officials

NIPC SERVES as a regional conduit through which federal funds flow to six counties in the Chicago area. NIPC representatives met recently with Mrs. Harris in Washington, D.C., to discuss their proposals.

James J. McClure Jr., NIPC president, told Mrs. Harris HUD should change its allocation procedures, and allow more participation by local officials, because they were perceived by Chicago-area officials and residents as "haphazard and unpredictable."

McClure also cited a recent out-of-court agreement in a lawsuit against HUD by the late Dorothy Gautreaux, in which HUD allocated several hundred units of assisted housing to the suburbs without consulting regional or local government officials about their own housing plans.

McCLURE SAID the agreement ignored another branch of HUD, which for the past two years has financed drafting of a regional housing plan by the NIPC and local officials.

Unlike the Gautreaux agreement, the plan will consider housing assisment of transportation, McClure said. prehensive plan covering economic development, housing rehabilitation, control of housing costs and improvement of transportation, McClure said.

NIPC Commissioner Wilson Frost, a Chicago alderman, said the Gautreaux agreement also neglected the need for assisted housing in primarily black areas of Chicago.

2 economists share Nobel Prize

SWEDEN (UPI) — The 1977 Nobel Prize for economics was awarded Friday to a former Swedish Minister of Commerce and one of Britain's top economists for their "path-breaking" theories on the effects of World trade.

The Royal Academy of Sciences split the $145,000 prize between professor Bertil Ohlin, 78, professor emeritus of the Stockholm School of Economics, and professor James Meade, 70, of Cambridge University, England.

The award cited "their path-breaking contributions to the theory of international trade and international capital movements."

"IT'S STUPEFYING and gratifying," Meade said when he heard the news upon his arrival at University College in Buckingham to lecture.

Contacted at his Stockholm home, Ohlen said, "It is a great encouragement to me that the scientific work I interrupted to go into politics has been rewarded this way."

Though Ohlin's major work appeared in 1933 and Meade's in 1950-55, the Academy said, "The breadth and importance of (their) contributions have, however, not become obvious until the 1960s and 1970s" — a time when the World's economies have become increasingly internationalized and interdependent.

Prof. Assar Lindbeck, a member of the Academy, said that Ohlin could be considered the man who developed the theory and Meade was the man who put it into practice.

HE SAID THAT Ohlin's theory "is one of the oldest in economic analysis."

Ohlin, a former leader of Sweden's Liberal Party from 1944 to 1967, served as Minister of Commerce in 1944-45.

The Academy said Meade was "the leading pioneer in the field of international macrotheory and international economic policy" and "has demonstrated the effects of economic policy on foreign trade and penetrated the problems of stabilization policies in 'open' economies."

Open economies are those that are greatly dependent on foreign trade.

Subsidies for commuter airlines?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time was when you could fly to Battle Creek, Mich., on American Airlines. Later North Central Airlines served the Michigan city and today Air Wisconsin provides the only scheduled air service.

The progression from American, now a major trunk carrier that dropped Battle Creek from its system in the 1950s, to North Central, a "regional" carrier, to Air Wisconsin illustrates how airlines outgrow cities, opening the way to the small commuter lines.

Commuters now operate in well over 600 U.S. cities and carry more than 7.5 million passengers a year, equivalent to the population of New York City. The average commuter trip is 75 miles (compared with 582 miles for the trunk carriers) and provides the link from small cities to the major air hubs.

FREE FROM regulation in setting their routes and fares, commuters in the last 20 years have developed into the third tier of scheduled air service — a key part of the nation's air network.

But commuters do not have certificates of "convenience and necessity" from the Civil Aeronautics Board. That excludes them from federal subsidy and aircraft purchase loan guarantees. It also limits their workings with the certificated carriers and gives them little voice in CAB proceedings.

In addition, commuters generally cannot operate aircraft carrying more than 30 passengers. Small, efficient aircraft are fine for many cities and explain much of the commuters' success but are too small, the commuters say, for other markets where several closely scheduled flights are needed to meet demand.

"It's pure and simple as far as we are concerned," says Preston H. Wilbourne, president of Air Wisconsin. "The law of the air transportation system is written for the certificated carriers."

AS A RESULT, Air Wisconsin decided to apply for certification. It calculates the move will both profit the airline and save passengers some $600,000 a year because of joint fare agreements among certificated carriers that result in discounts.

But many of the 160 commuter airlines that carry passengers and publish schedules do not want to come under the regulatory thumb of the CAB. They believe it will limit the independence they hold key to their success.

Commuters, however, must meet all the safety and training requirements of the Federal Aviation Administration. They hope Congress, in drafting airline "deregulation" legislation applying to the bigger carriers, will include provisions for commuters without heaping on restrictions.

Providing subsidies to commuters (not all of which want or need them) is part of a larger debate over the subsidy program itself. Since the 1940s, this program has dispensed about $2 billion to cover airline losses. The subsidies mostly have gone to regional airlines, still technically called "local service" carriers by the CAB although the term today describes commuters.

OVER 200 SMALL cities received subsidized air service at a cost of $72 million in fiscal 1976 in the name of furthering commerce, carrying the mail or for "national defense."

In August, however, the general accounting office told Congress the CAB subsidy program is misdirected; instead of determining what air service small communities need and providing government aid, the subsidies are aimed at covering whatever losses the carriers have in local service, regardless what the service is.

With little oversight, subsidized service can end up competing against unaided profitable flights provided by commuters between the same two cities. The accounting office also found five cases where two airlines were subsidized to serve the same route.

Even the CAB is critical of the subsidy program. In March, the board proposed to Congress a major overhaul. It would include CAB planning of routes and type of service. It would base subsidies on representative costs rather than actual losses to spur efficiency. Later subsidies would be based on actual costs.

Such talk scares some communities which like jet service, however uneconomical, and want continued subsidies to support it.

"They may lose some of their fancy service," said Richard J. Sterne, airline analyst for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith. They may have jet service when they should have turbo-prop and they may have a 100-seat plane when they should have a 30-seater."

Skyjackings drop dramatically

NEW YORK (UPI) — When it comes to airliner security, no news is good news.

Only a few years ago travelers would joke about "Flight 0001, leaving New York for Miami — via Havana, Cuba."

In 1969, several hundred unwilling travelers had their flights diverted. In that year, the worst on record for airline security, there were 87 hijackings worldwide, 40 of them in the United States and 33 of those successful.

SO FAR THIS year there have been 25 hijacking attempts worldwide, two of them in the United States and both of them unsuccessful.

The last successful diversion of an aircraft taking off from an American airport was Sept. 10, 1976, when a group of Croation nationalists hijacked an airliner out of New York.

Hijackings have not been completely stamped out, but the number has dropped dramatically since industrywide safety measures were introduced five years ago.

That was when airlines and airports started running passengers through metal detectors to check for guns and other weapons and made the hand baggage search standard practice.

"There's no way in the world you can protect yourself 100 per cent," according to American Airlines spokesman David Fraley. "It's a fragile system but it has worked very well."

FOR THOSE PASSENGERS who become irate when submitted to a body search or delay by a magnetometer check, the airlines have an answer — from the presidents on down, all airline executives go through security precautions.

The situation is not quite so rosy overseas, as shown by the recent hijacking of a Japanese airliner on a flight over India.

Most airliners have a push-button automatic warning signal that alerts airports a hijacking is under way. There have been several false alarms because of malfunctions or mistakes.

Asbestos controls topic Oct. 25

Tough new controls proposed to regulate the manufacture and use of asbestos will be presented to the public service committee of the Cook County Board Oct. 25.

Philip J. Mole, director of the county's department of environmental control, said as many as 40 major industries would be affected by the proposed ordinance, including asbestos manufacturers, insulation contractors, roofing companies, brake shoe makers, and wrecking companies.

The principal thrust of the ordinance is to monitor air quality in asbestos plants and other places where workers are likely to come in contact with asbestos, he said.

"Several years ago, the federal government identified asbestos as the third most hazardous material in the ambient air," said Mole, "the other two being mercury and beryllium."

Asbestos monitoring would require use of the department's 30 patrol cars an a special laboratory. "It's a tremendous job but one we think is very necessary," Mole said.

In addition to monitoring asbestos in the air at manufacturing sites, county environmental officers would be concerned with asbestos encountered in the demolition of buildings and of ways to dispose of the substance, he said.

The meeting on the proposed ordinance will begin at 10 a.m., Room 569, County Building, 118 N. Clark St., Chicago.

Kreps urges quick OK of tax cut

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Commerce Sec. Juanita Kreps said Friday that she was concerned about the administration and Congress completing work on a proposed income tax reduction in time to provide stimulus in an economy that may be sagging in late 1978.

Mrs. Kreps made her comments at a news conference after she addressed the business council in a closed meeting.

DuPont Chairman Irving Shapiro said he business community did not favor a tax cut or federal jobs program next year because the economy will be growing, although slowly.

SHAPIRO ALSO defended the rate of business spending for plant and equipment that the Carter administration has criticized for inhibiting stronger expansion of the national economy.

Shapiro expressed the common beliefs of the business council at the opening of its annual fall meeting. The council is an organization of corporate executives who informally advise the White House on business trends.

Mrs. Kreps, in remarks before the corporate executives as the first government speaker, said the Carter administration is dedicated to ending business regulation in areas where it is unneeded.

Mrs. Kreps said regulation has become excessive in some cases because "we Americans have had bred an inordinant faith in government as our problem-solver."

SHE SAID SHE thought the economy would be in good shape over the next nine months but that she was concerned about a possible slowdown in the second half of 1978.

Because of the complexity of the tax reform package that President Carter will soon send to Congress, she said it is "difficult to envision a tax cut that could stimulate the economy in 1978."

And Shapiro laid out a gloomy forecast of the national economy for 1978 — high unemployment, high inflation, an end to the housing boom and a declining rate of economic growth.

But Shapiro said the economy would continue to grow. He said the business council economists "are concerned that the slower rate of growth they anticipate may trigger new and unneeded measures of economic stimulation from Washington."

SHAPIRO SAID the economists projected economic growth of 4.3 per cent in 1978, down from the expected 5 per cent this year.

Many administration and academic economists believe an expansion of 4.3 per cent will have little if any effect on reducing the unemployment rate from the average 7 per cent of the past 10 months.

Shapiro said unemployment would decline to 6.6 per cent by the end of 1978, which implies jobs for only a few hundred thousand of the approximately 7 million of those currently out of work.

In an estimate, Shapiro said consumer prices would rise 6.2 per cent in 1978, high by traditional standards but an improvement from the 8 per cent rate during the first six months of this year.

Poor nations getting rich too fast?

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — Are the poorer nations of the world, encouraged by the large multi-national banks, piling up a debt so fast that as a committee headed by Sen. Frank Church warns, "an international debt crisis is coming to a head"?

Or, as West German Central Bank President Otmar Emminger said in an interview last week, have the less developed countries (LDCs) improved their financial position so dramatically that "they are scheduled to become a mainstay of world trade"?

The Church analysis starts from the premise that the banks have been flooding money, often indiscreetly, into the poor nations, which clearly needed help after the oil cartel whipsawed them with a 400 per cent increase in the price of oil after 1973.

NOW, AS THE senator's subcommittee on foreign economic policy sees it, the banks, with $170 billion in loans outstanding to the LDCs, are pressing the International Monetary Fund to bail them out.

Emminger, and most other bankers at the recent annual meeting of the IMF and the World Bank, concede trouble spots among the LDCs, notably Zaire, Peru, Turkey, Portugal and some others in the Mediterranean.

But the consensus among financial men is that the crisis for the poor nations peaked about a year ago, and is now largely resolved. There have been no massive reschedulings or defaults.

Emminger observed that the LDCs, as a group, are heading for a 6 percent gain in growth of real Gross National Product this year. That compares to a 4 percent gain for industrial countries, and only 2.5 percent in Europe.

THE VERY POOREST of the countries, such as Bangladesh, have not participated in this upsurge. But the problems of Bangladesh and others in similar straits are met by official loans and gifts, not by the private banks.

The "bail-out" charge is based on a misconception of the function of the so-called "Witteveen Facility." This is a new $10.1 billion IMF line of credit to be spooned out to hard-pressed small countries on the strictest test of "conditionality." A borrowing country would have to show how the money would be used to improve the economy. A payoff to the banks wouldn't qualify.

"What Church doesn't understand," says a New York banker, "is that the banks would get their money back, even from the worst risks, with or without the IMF. Without the IMF, they'd get their money back at the expense of the local consumer and at the cost of higher unemployment. But the existence of IMF 'seal of approval' promotes a new flow (of private loans)."

Some nagging questions remain. Although bankers are not noted for confessing errors, it is clear that they shoveled money into some countries faster than the countries could reasonably absorb the funds.

Sir Arthur Moore, political economy expert at Princeton, says, "What is wrong in the current situation is not that debt ratios are high — they are low by historical standards. What is wrong is the structure of the debt: too short, and too much tied to projects."

Economist Peter Kenen believes that the smaller nations can continue borrowing for a long time "if their economies grow with their indebtedness." That would make the bankers happy. After all, they aren't anxious to get the capital back. They just want an element of security, and regular interest on the debt.

That focuses the issue: The big hazard in the world economy today is not the size of LDC debt, but the prospect that world trade will be shrunk throughout rising protectionism. Emminger, an optimist, thinks the LDCs' trade potential is rising. But if trade fails to expand, the LDCs, as a group, will have a tough time earning enough money to service their debts. In the long run, that could prove Frank Church more right than wrong.

Many problems plaguing the nation's businessmen

by LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

An ongoing battle between the president and big oil firms, a 22-month low in the stock market, continuing crisis in the steel industry and the continuing dockworkers' strike were all a part of this week in business.

The Presidedent attacked big oil in a televised speech to the nation on behalf of his energy program, which has been all but gutted in Congress and transformed from a taxing measure to curb consumption to a production incentive plan for the oil companies. The two Houses still are far apart in their views on an ultimate program.

The oil companies reacted with equal anger to the President's charges, accusing him of intemperate langauage and gross exaggeration.

CORPORATIONS REPORTING third quarter earnings showed good gains for the most part and introduced a strong note of paradox in the week's business news.

The stock market dropped to a 22-month low as reflected by the Dow Jones industrial average, and overall September retail sales fell 1.2 per cent in September from August in spite of good year-to-year sales gains in September for nearly all major store chains.

Retail sales of new automobiles were up a gratifying 15.1 per cent from a year ago in the first third of October.

But the crisis in the steel industry, which led the steel companies and union leaders to appeal to the White House for emergency action, drew more attention in Wall Street and from the public than rising industrial corporate profits.

ALL THE MAJOR steel companies have had sharp third quarter profit declines. Most haven't reported the quarter's results yet but U.S. Steel's earnings are expected to be off 70 per cent, Bethlehem's 60 per cent, Republic's 36 per cent and Inland 30 per cent, for example.

Meanwhile, the Carter administration was reported preparing to seek an amergency 30-day back-to-work order under the Taft-Hartley Act to end the Atlantic and Gulf Dockworkers' strike unless the walkout ends soon.

Dockworkers in New Orleans attempted to call a regional general strike in support of their protest strike against what they consider abuses in the handling of containerized freight but were rebuffed when the teamsters union refused to cooperate.

The machinists' union followed up its crippling strike against Boeing in Seattle by calling out 15,000 Lockheed workers in Southern California.

Washington reports said President Carter's expected tax program may contain cuts totaling $22 billion. These reports drew mixed reaction, ranging from expressed fears of higher inflation rates to the hope that the tax cuts would stimulate the economy.

Dow rebounds, gains 3.47 points

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market closed out one of 1977's worst weeks Friday with a modest gain as bargain hunters found blue-chips attractively priced following a five-session battering. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up and down in a narrow range after Thursday's 5.81-point setback took it to a two-year low, finished with a gain of 3.47 points at 821.64. That trimmed the week's loss to 18.71 points.

The rebound was normal in the wake of the week's drubbing. The Dow has lost more than 183 points so far this year and many blue-chip issues were selling at bargain prices Also, some traders covered short sales, or replaced borrowed shares they sold earlier hoping for the market to slide.

INVESTORS STILL were disturbed by the Federal Reserve Board's report late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply climbed $4.9 billion in the latest week, presaging even tighter credit and higher interest rates.

The climb in interest rates has been so steep that investors now can get a better return on their dollar by investing in short-term money instruments than on stocks or savings accounts.

Some traders were disturbed by business council prediction that the economy's growth rate next year will be lower than this year's and may bring on "new and unneeded" stimulus from the Carter administration.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index rose 0.02 to 51.24 and the average price of a share increased by 1 cent.

DECLINES TOPPED advances, 701 to 633, among the 1,834 issues crossing the composite tape at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big board volume totaled 20,410,000 shares, down from the 23,870,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. EDT totaled 21,995,528 shares, compared with 26,354,968 Thursday.

Prices were mixed in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter issues.

Long hours at work earn man millions

HOWARD E. COLLINS started working for another company, but decided in 1947 he had a better way to manufacture duplicating materials. He and a partner founded Colonial Carbon Co. which today is doing between $8 million and $10 million of business annually.

Ask Howard Collins what advice he has for someone trying to start a multi-million dollar-a-year business like his and he'll answer: "You'll have to his and he'll answer: "You have to

In 1947, Collins and a partner believed they had the know how to start Colonia Carbon Co., 2020 Mannheim Rd., Des Plaines. The two men were then working for another firm that manufactured the purple spirit copy masters. Such masters are widely used nationwide in schools and businesses. Colonial is now one of only three firms manufacturing the ditto masters.

"They didn't do what we wanted to do," Collins says of his former employer, and I think we proved right, because we're still in business and they're not."

He and his partner, the now retired Earl Zltzier, worked 80 and 90 hours a week in the early years, making dittos in a Skokie garage and then selling them.

"Earl and I used to run the machines, pack the boxes get it all ready to go and take it out and sell it," Collins says.

IF THEY FOUND themselves working late, Collins says, "We just slept on top of the desks. Then when we woke up we went back to work. At least we weren't afraid to work."

The new company hired two employes its first year when sales totaled $150,000. Today Colonial's sales total between $8 million and $10 million a year worldwide and 77 persons are employed at its Mannheim Road plant. Sales volume has tripled every five years, he says.

Collins says he never imagined such growth when the company began. Competition was tough then with six firms manufacturing the same product.

"WE HAD TO BREAK down that competition and get our foot in the door," Collins says. "After three or four years we questioned very much if we would ever survive or not. If you get over the hump you're fine, if you don't get over the hump they have a little thing called bankruptcy."

Collins says he made it over that hump by reorganizing and constantly watching for new technologies that would put him a step ahead of the competition.

Colonial sold only at the wholesale level, to such companies as 3M, rather than on a retail level, carving out its own niche in the then extremely competitive market for inexpensive spirit copies.

"We tried things competitors didn't, and now it's a little too late for them to go into them," Collins says.

AFTER 10 YEARS the company needed more space and moved to another Skokie location.

By 1967, another move was needed, but land and buildings in Skokie had become too expensive, Collins says, so he moved his firm to Des Plaines.

"We were out in the boonies then," but the location near O'Hare Airport and on a major road, was just what he was looking for.

Ten more years have passed and the company is now utilizing all its approximately 70,000 square feet, Collins says.

By using a four day, 10-hour-a-day, work week since 1971, the company has gotten the maximum use of its facilities, Collins says. Employes, who earn an average of $5 per hour, enjoy the shorter week, Collins says.

HE TRIES to keep in close touch with his employes.

"I try to get into the shop at least once a day to see how people are doing and also let them know I'm still around," says the 65-year-old Collins.

Retirement hasn't entered his mind. He still does some selling for the firm, although he no longer works 80-or 90-hour weeks.

"Now I come in 9:30 a.m. and go to 3 or 3:30 p.m. Then once in a while I take a day off."

Interest rate levels pose puzzle to their analysts

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Interest rates naturally concern many people — and unnaturally concern others.

In 1977 we've had ample evidence of both phenomena at work. A preoccupation with the level of interest rates is to be expected among those who are about to borrow some money and those who are thinking about lending it. On the other hand, those who try to use the level of interest rates for more esoteric purposes, as in predicting the future of the economy or the stock market, have been having a more difficult year.

The problem is in finding the single right answer to even the simplest of questions, such as whether interest rates this year have been moving up or down. The answer is yes and no.

SHORT-TERM INTEREST rates, which capture most of the headlines, have been moving upward quarter by quarter. The prime lending rate of major banks has surged above 7 per cent; three-month Treasury bills yielded just over 4½ per cent in the first quarter, about 5½ per cent in the third; the rate on so-called federal funds transactions between the banks themselves showed an even larger increase.

That's been the news that has made stock investors nervous. Rising interest rates traditionally signal falling stock prices, the theory being that (1) businesses find their profits squeezed by the higher borrowing costs, and (2) investors find stocks less tempting as compared with fixed-income investments that benefit from the rising interest levels.

But the picture in 1977 has not been nearly so clearcut as this suggests. Interest rates that normally would provide the most logical competition for stocks, long-term interest rates such as those on bonds, not only have failed to rise apace but have actually been falling.

THE AVERAGE yield on new issues of double-A-rated utility bonds, a rather typical high-quality benchmark, averaged 8.67 per cent in 1976, 8.34 per cent in this year's first quarter, 8.30 in the second quarter and about 8.21 in the third. Other recent long-term interest rates confirm the trend: top-rated corporate bonds, which yielded as high as 8.34 per cent earlier this year, were down around 8 per cent; the Bond Buyer's indexnof 20 tax-exempt issues was off from a 5.93 per cent yield in Februaryhto 5.51 per cent, nearly a three-year low.

How can this dichotomy continue? Easy. For short-term and long-term interest rates are two entirely different ballgames, and to understand this is the beginning of wisdom on the subject. It is also, alas, more than most of our politicians ever have grasped.

SHORT-TERM interest rates are quite vulnerable to the influence of the Federal Reserve Board. This year, Chairman Arthur Burns and his minions have tried to counteract their failure to control the growth of the money supply, which has been dangerously high, by tightening up on interest rates. That is supposed to reassure those who worry about inflation; in fact, its chief effect has been to agitate investors and enrage congressmen.

Long-term rates, on the other hand, are clearly beyond such convenient manipulation. Technical factors can play a role for a while: this year, for example, the government's continued inability to sepnd all the money it appropriated has lessened the pressure on this market and contributed to the temporary easing of rates. (The spending shortfall has totaled $16.5 billion in two years.) Eventually, however, what controls long-term interest rates is the rate of inflation; it's been subsiding lately, and that's been the real help.

The outlook for 1978 is for some increase in both sets of interest rates, though they should remain well below the peaks of earlier in the decade. Money growth this year sugegsts inflation growth next year, and that means some upward movement in long-term rates. Even this, however should be less than in short-term rates (which probably won't exceed the neighborhood of one percentage point). In short, and in long, interest rates next year are likely to be more stable than those who analyze them.

Coffee prices down to $3.41 a pound

General Foods Corp., the nation's largest roaster, Friday cut the wholesale price of ground coffee by 10 cents to 3.41 per pound.

The pricing action, effective immediately, should be reflected on supermarket shelves in about 60 days, the normal lag period before changes in wholesale prices are passed on to consumers.

Since mid-May General Foods, based in White Plains, N.Y., has reduced the wholesale list price for ground coffee by a total of $1.05 per pound. Its Maxwell House coffee is the leading U.S. brand.

Last Friday, Folger Coffee Co., a division of Procter & Gamble Co. in Cincinnati trimmed the wholesale price of its ground coffee by 20 cents to $3.18 per pound.

Folger, the No. 2 roaster, also lowered its instant coffee price by 3 cents per ounce.

General Foods, however, hold the price line on its instant brands.

Volkswagen price to increase

Volkswagen of America will raise the price of its 1978 models an average $145, the company announced Thursday, with the biggest jump adding $210 to the price of this year's Beetle convertible model.

A spokesman said the lowest increases will be on both the Rabbit two-door and four-door hatchback models, which will go up in price $120 each.

The Dasher two-door hatchback will increase $150, while the Scirocco will move up $200.

The Rabbit two-door sold for $3,749 this year while the four-door went for $4,396. Other 1977 prices included the Dasher two-door hatchback, $5,599; Scirocco, $5,495; Beetle convertible, $4,990; and seven passenger bus $5,949.

Laker Skytrain shows profit

The Laker Skytrain Service linking New York and London carried 8,599 passengers in its first 17 days for a net profit of $85,000. Laker officials said Friday.

The daily no-reservation flight to New York and back, for which passengers just turn up on the day of departure and buy a ticket for $135, has been 73 per cent full on average. On two occasions all 345 seats have been sold and passengers turned away, officials said.

Laker plans to add a second daily flight in each direction starting in April.

Steel layoff meetings set

State and local officials from dozens of communities hard hit by steel worker layoffs will attend a two-day conference next week to discuss available federal assistance programs, it was announced Friday.

Commerce Sec. Juanita Kreps and officials from the Departments of Labor, Transportation and Housing and Urban Development will conduct the meetings next Thursday and Friday.

The purpose of the conference, a Commerce Dept. statement said, is "to inform officials of steel-producing communities of available federal assistance to help offset the adverse effects caused by job layoffs and the closing of some steel facilities."

More than 100 state and local officials from 35 to 40 communities are expected to attend.

Halt inflation to aid industry: Nixon official

Lowering the annual inflation rate will do more to help American industry compete with foreign imports than will imposing trade barriers, Benjamin Stein, a former member of the Nixon administration, says.

Inflation rates of 6 or 7 per cent have driven the price of American goods higher than consumers are willing to pay and hence foreign products have taken a large share of many domestic markets, says Stein, who was in Chicago recently to promote a new novel he has written dealing with the inflation problem. The way to stop inflation is to balance the federal budget and to limit the growth of the nation's money supply to 2 to 3 percent a year, Stein says.

"All governments keep promising more and more things to their citizens and then won't tax for it," Stein says.

The result is a federal deficit approaching $70 billion, which must be financed by the government enlarging the money supply.

President Carter has pledged to balance the federal budget by 1981, but Stein says he puts little faith in that promise.

Oil industry, Simon strike back at Carter charges

While President Carter's energy program continued to get battered in Congress, Carter himself came in for some verbal battering from one oil industry official and a former cabinet official.

Atlantic Richfield Co. president Thornton Bradshaw says oil industry profits "are well within the average range for U.S. industry" and that President Carter's attack on the industry Thursday was not warranted.

Carter said the oil industry would benefit from a "potential war profiteering in the impending energy crisis" that could lead to "the biggest ripoff in energy history."

BRADSHAW SAID Thursday that ARCO also was concerned about the high price of fuel but he added that some source of money must be found to search for new energy sources.

"We understand concerns of the U.S. consumer and the White House over the possibility of higher gas prices under deregulation, but we do not share the President's view that gradual deregulation will have a massive impact on the consumer or that it will result in significantly higher profits for petroluem companies," he said.

He refuted Carter's claim that oil companies would reap huge profits by deregulation. He said government regulations were only hampering the discovery of new sources of energy.

"Present prices are simply inadequate to this task," Bradshaw said.

FORMER ENERGY czar and Tressury Sec. William E. Simon Friday accused President Carter of "sheer demagoguery" in accusing the oil industry of fighting his policies in order to enhance profits.

Simon said government, not industry, is to blame for the nation's energy shortage and that the free market system, not increased regulation, is the answer.

"I was frankly astonished at what I consider a disgraceful attack by President Carter," Simon told reporters.

Carter Thursday told a Washington news conference the oil and gas industry was trying to pull "the biggest ripoff in history" and urged the American people to help him push his energy plan through Congress.

Simon said the attack "was certainly beneath the dignity of the office that he holds and sheer demagoguery, which is a great disservice in enhancing the debate on one of the most critical issues facing our country today."

OTHER OIL industry spokesmen contacted by UPI voiced the following comments:

John H. Lichtblau, executive director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation:

"The plan is clearly overly ambitious in its expectations of a decline in the demand for oil. On the supply side the plan makes the highly questionable assumption that natural gas production cannot be significantly increased regardless of price. But perhaps the most puzzling shortcoming of the plan is its surprising lack of interest in shale oil and coal-based synthetic fuels. It permits private companies to spend their funds in this very risky and unchartered area.

"But there is virtually no active support from the Government beyond the research stage in the development of these potentially enormous resources. Where the previous administration may have gone too far with its proposed $100 billion energy independence authority, this administration is c early not going far enough in encouraging the speedy development of these resources."

Retirement plan uses investment, wise spending

My wife and I are both employed, with $25,000 in one-year certificates of deposit. I have been cashing enough CDs to invest $1,500 in an individual retirement account for my wife. I am not eligible. We also have been prepaying $1,500 annually on our house mortgage, interest at 8.5 per cent. We wish to retire early. We have not been able to add to our CDs from income. Should we continue to prepay on the house loan? Should we cash in the CDs and prepay a lump sum on the house or divert cash into other investments: — T.D.

Continue to invest the limit in your wife's IRA to defer income taxes while you are both earning. Although prepaying home-loan interest gains a small advantage in interest rates — in your case, 8.5 vs. 7.75 per cent — you are tying your cash up in one illiquid asset. Rather than continue paying into one house, why not buy another an an investment for rental? Such a move would gain two advantages: (1) Part of the income from the rental can be depreciation that shelters part of your income — something payments into your own house cannot do. (2) Probably appreciation on the rental would provide more dollars for income when you both retire. One concern you should think seriously about — if you can't set aside more than $1,500 each year when you are both working, how do you expect to live on interest from your CDs? You should get your spending under closed control.

Money Wise

Your column for July 27, 1977, indicated that GNMA certificates might be a good investment. Where can these be bought?

— J.P.

Government National Mortgage certificates yield about the same as mortgage loans, less a management charge, and are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. Interest income is subject to federal, state, and local taxes. The minimum purchase is $25,000. You may inquire of your broker about buying these, as they are sold as registered certificates. Prices vary, as with any other negotiable instrument, according to long-term interest rates.

You may have mentioned previously the advantages of taking pension funds in a lump-sum cash payment rather than as an annuity to retain assets for the estate at death. I understand that the current income might be less. What about tax payments on a lump sum withdrawal? — — D.H.

Comparing the current income from an annuity with income from an investment will generally show a higher income from the annuity. But as you state, at the death of a life annuitant the estate retains no assets. Other annuities are available — 10-year certain, 20-year certain, refund, dual beneficiary, etc. Electing one of these options reduces the monthly income. The one big advantage for an annuity is that it pays for life regardless of how long the annuitant lives. Sometimes, as in 1974 when bond interest rates were high (in the 10 to 12 per cent range), straight income exceeded annuity payouts. Too many variables prevent a single complete answer, as age, annuity program, and investment environment affect comparisons. As for taxes, many pension plans permit taking a lump sum and averaging the cost during 10 years. Keogh funds and individual retirement accounts can be averaged in this way to reduce taxes. Other pension plans in operation before 1974 permit payouts to be taken as capital gains with a resulting lower tax bite.

Arte Johnson is a 'Knockout' playing games and hosting

by Vernon Scott

Diminutive Arte Johnson has joined the ranks of game show hosts playing ringmaster for NBC-TV's new "Knockout" strip which debuted Oct. 3 and airs weekdays at 10:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

Arte is the antithesis of the tall, white-toothed, clean-cut encees who drip suavity with every utterance.

Johnson is apt to speak in Russian, Polish or Scandinavian accents, not to mention a variety of American argot. Unlike the smooth know-it-alls, he peers owlishly at the world as if storing away human folly for the many characters he plays.

Johnson is a familiar figure to game show fanatics, having repeatedly appeared as a panelist on almost every one of the shows which feature celebrities.

"This is a first for me" the little buy said. "I've never been a master of ceremonies before. But I'm going to be a different kind of host. I'll still be doing comedy while I talk to the contestants.

"Ralph Edwards, who owns the show, has given me latitude for comedy. I'm not tied down to hard and fast rules."

"Knockout" has a singular virtue among game shows. The rules are simple. Nor is there a panel of experts.

Contestants are shown three words such as Washington, Adams and California. A fourth word is not revealed. The contestant is then asked which of the three words doesn't belong.

As Johnson explained it, most people would assume that California would be discarded because the first two words represent presidents of the United States. But hold! Maybe Adams should be eliminated because Washington and California are both states.

The fourth word, in this case could be Idaho.

In another example, Times, Herald and Playboy are offered the contestants. Times and Herald are newspaper names while Playboy as a magazine should be thrown out. But Times and Herald are also the name of places.

"It's a game viewers can play easier than most other shows," Arte said enthusiastically. "People don't even have to watch because it's a good radio game, too. All they have to do is listen.

"I've appeared on an infinite number of game shows, so I know what I'm talking about. Personally, I'm as crazy about this kind of entertainment as the millions of people who tune in. I'll still be appearing as a panelist on other shows while I'm doing this."

Arte is convinced the tube has room for many more game shows. He says the networks are in a constant search for new and different varieties.

"A lot of the shows are in syndication," he said, "and some of them are getting into prime time access.

"There's a couple of psychological reasons why viewers love game shows. First, they enable viewers to participate instead of just sitting back and watching someone else have fun.

"On the panel shows the viewers have a chance to beat the stars. They want to prove their own intelligence.

"On 'Knockout' I'll have the answer cards in advance, of course. But I also have a lot of peripheral knowledge that will help me inject humor and fun without coming off like a smart alec."

Johnson is a bright, articulate man who emerged from obscurity a decade ago with "Rowan and Martin's Laughin," scoring every week with a variety of nutty characters.

He was the dirty old man, Tyronne Hornay, in sketches with Ruth Buzzi. He was also the lisping German soldier, Rosmenko, the strident Russian; Sir Osbert Beauchamp Place, the errant Englishman; and the Scandinavian cuckoo.

Arte is building a nightclub act around his characterizations and adding some daffy new personalities.

He sees his array of screwballs not so much as ethnic humor as cartoon characters. Tyronne, in fact, is the star of an animated Children's TV show, "The Nitwitx." Johnson also is featured in another kid show, "Think Pink."

One time "Laugh-in" star Arte Johnson has joined the ranks of game show hosts playing ringmaster for NBC's new "Knockout" strip which airs Monday through Friday at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

All of his current success is due to the original "Laugh-In" series.

"There's no question about it," he said. "The residual career benefits are why I'm still around today. That show kept me in the public eye.

"I don't know if the new 'Laugh-In' will do the same for the new batch of kids on the show. We were on every week. The current 'Laugh-In' is only on once a month. You've got to have constant exposure."

Would you please tell me what came first for Barbi Benton--"Playboy" or "Hee Haw"?

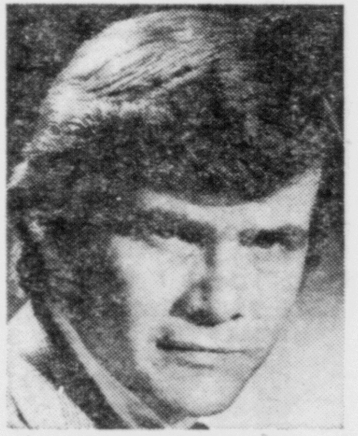
S.D.

Barbi Benton

Actually, commercials came first for "Barbi-Doll," plugging such products as Certs, Calgon and several automobiles. Soon she was discovered by Hugh Hefner, who chose her to be one of the beautiful girls who provided "atmosphere" on his series "Playboy After Dark." This affiliation with Hefner gave her more media exposure--she not only appeared in "Playboy" several times but also on "Laugh-In" and eventually "Hee-Haw," when she started her country-music career.

Does Tom Brokaw of "The Today Show" think up those great questions he asks during interviews, or does somebody write them for him? Anyway, I think he's great, and I'd like to know how he got to where he is today.

G.P.



Tom Brokaw

You bet he thinks up his own questions--that's part of the reason for his success. (If you want something done right, ya gotta do it yourself.)

Brokaw started his news career at the age of 15 as a newscaster for his hometown station KYNT in Yankton, S.D. Following his graduation from the University of South Dakota in 1962, he joined the NBC affiliate station in Omaha, Nebraska; in 1965 he moved to Atlanta, Ga. to do broadcasting there. For five years he was a newscaster for the Los Angeles NBC station before he got his big break: an assignment to be the NBC News White House Correspondent. He was also anchorman for the network news before he was chosen to be the host of "Today."

Could you give me some information on the show "Topper"? What was the name of the dog in it?

M.A.

"Topper," which made its TV debut in 1953, was an early "friendly spirits"-type show (like "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir"). The story revolved around a couple of ghosts (who just happened to be married) residing in the same house as Mr. Topper and his wife. Leo G. Carroll starred in the title role, with Lee Patrick as Mrs. Topper and Anne Jeffreys and Robert Sterling as the ghosts.

And I won't forget to mention the name of the dog who was killed in an avalanche with his owners: Neil.

Editor's note . . .

It's more than snob appeal pushing annual American sales figures of imported beers skyward. Taste is the big thing with foreign brews which are made with "classic" ingredients, aged with patience and bottled with pride. But just because it's imported does not mean it's good and a novice could spend big bucks checking each brand on the market. Before grabbing a bottle opener check out our guide to imports. Page 3.

Cynthia Ann Roses became a professional dancer at sixteen. At twenty she is considered the "old pro" of the Chicago Ballet. Daily Herald dance critic Lynn Asinof has followed Cynthia since her career began. She has watched her mature into a lovely young woman and a skilled dancer. Cynthia is now the soloist for the Chicago Ballet, where she is a respected member of the troupe. As for her future . . . Page 4.

Read about Morocco and see if it doesn't leave you with a "I want to go there . . . I would never go there" feeling. This exotic country is a land of contrasts: luxury hotels, centuries old buildings, chic well-dressed women, nomads bartering their wares. It's a land for the senses and a vacation spot for the adventurous. Page 8.

Why buy a beer that will cost twice as much as your favorite domestic brew? Taste, that's why. Imported beers are finding an expanding market in the U.S.A. — so much so American brewers are making changes to keep up.

A beer drinker's guide to the imports

by Ken Verderbeek

If you're a connoisseur of fine beers or even just eager to try new brands, experiment with imported varieties.

Every day countries as diverse as Germany, Mexico and Czechoslovakia export their quality brews into U.S. harbors. The popularity of foreign beers has risen to such an extent, American distributors predict their influence here will triple by 1980.

Although most dealers have to charge their customers $3 or $4 a six-pack (at least double the cost of domestic beers), last year Americans bought more than 30 million cases of beer from nearly 100 nations.

Import sales grew to about 40 per cent in 1976, while U.S. brewers saw sales of their product rise only 2 per cent. These statistics are incredible perhaps, but not when you consider all the chug-a-lugging Americans do.

It is surprising that foreign beers, which on the average are better quality than the domestic products, make the ports at all. Despite the increase in foreign beef consumption in recent years, many bottles never make it to store shelves because they break or their contents spoil during the passage on the high seas. To make matters worse, shipping costs are tremendous.

But economically, imports continue to bring in a buck, causing an improbable business to prosper.

Why do Americans bother to buy beers like Heineken and Beck's when they can get twice as much for their money from a Schlitz or Budweiser? There are several reasons: curiosity, taste and, believe it or not, a bit of snobbishness, probably head the list.

You may think the later reason unfair, but ask yourself, "Would I feel important offering a case of Germany's hearty, heavy Henninger beer at a party rather than the usual domestic brand?" and you may reconsider. You probably would, even if it's just for the sake of prompting conversation.

And your guests would probably say the foreign beer tastes good.

Robert C. Morgen of Chicago, a veteran of nearly thirty years in the beer industry and currently vice president of the city's Foremost Sales Promotions, thinks Americans look for taste more than any other quality in a beer.

Foreign beers generally taste good, said Morgen, because their brew masters use only "classic ingredients" to coin a familiar brewing phrase. Only barley, malt, hops, yeast, water and a side of sugar go into foreign beers — no additives such as corn and rice which are used by many large American breweries to cut expenses.

U.S. firms also use only a small percentage of imported hops such as Bohemian and German hops which nurture a unique sharp taste and rich aroma in the brew.

But, although hops provide a crispness in taste, aging or "lagering," as Europeans call it, rounds out the flavor. The aging process allows beer to grow to a full flavor.

One beer which has established itself because of its world-renowned process of aging is Pilsner Urquell, brewed in Plzen, Czechoslovakia since 1292. While most U.S. beers age less than a month, this beer, translated "original pilsner," lagers six months in the brewery's damp caves. The beer possesses a tangy aroma and a heavy body that leaves a light aftertaste.

However, according to Morgen, the sales trend in foreign beers is not toward heavy beer, but toward light. Because of this, he says, imported beer has its biggest following among the young.

"We Americans are drinking light everything — light wines, light whiskies, light beers," Morgen said. "We associate lightness with youthfulness. With everyone on the youth kick nowadays, foreign beers really have a place here."

Morgen said beer consumption began to fall during the post-Prohibition years, but steadily rose again when U.S. brewers offered lighter beers.

"People became conditioned to bottlegged beer during Prohibition," he said. "This beer had a light taste with small quantities of alcohol added to give it a tarty crispness."

Foster's Lager is the fastest growing of the more than 100 foreign labels that enter the U.S., but the biggest selling imported stock is Holland's Heineken. Canada follows a close second in beer exported to the U.S., then Germany, Mexico, Australia, the United Kingdom, Ireland and Norway.

Germany, third on the list, offers at least twelve brands in most stores. It's biggest export, Beck's, is a slightly bitter-tasting, medium-brewed beer. Henninger is perhaps tarter than Beck's, but worth trying. Hofbrau, DAB, Wurzburger, St. Pauli Girl and Dortmunder Ritter are other German brews you'll want to sample.

Mexican beers generally have a tarter, drier flavor than their German competition. Try Carte Blanca, Tecate Cervaza and Dos Equis to see just why. If you really want to raise some spirits, drink Tecate the way its countrymen do — with some lime juice and a touch of salt.

The United Kingdom is probably known more for its ales than its lagers and beers. England's Bass Pale Ale, one of the world's finest, and Whitebread Pale Ale, characterize renowned ales with their heavy tartly bitter, dry taste. However, Tartan Ale is also heavy, creamy and strong.

If you're a dark beer nut you'll have to sample the world's finest, Mackeson Stout from England. Beck's, Heineken, Wurzburger and San Miguel are also good labels to look for. Wurzburger, made from toasted grains, is the heaviest with a creamy flavor. If you have a sweet tooth, try Ireland's rich Guinnes Stout.

Lighter beers like Germany's Lowenbrau (not to be confused with Miller's Lowenbrau) and Wurzburger Light, and Canada's Molsen (Golden) Export and Cinci are all comparable to most big-name U.S. light beers.

When purchasing any imported beer, however, care must be taken for they spoil easily. Shop at larger liquor stores that specialize in the best labels. The more the store sells, the fresher the beer. Also, buy only bottled or draft beer. Foreign beer in cans is usually shipped here for collectors, not drinkers. Too often imports in cans taste stale, with the exception of Australia's Foster's Lager.

If all these foreign nations can produce good beer, why doesn't the U.S.? The answer lies in the big beer companies according to Morgen.

Although American breweries were started by German experts, their traditional formulas have been lost or discarded because of competition and because many of these beer masters sold out to beer magnates who concentrate more on mass production techniques than producing fine beer.

Despite the lesser quality of U.S. beer in comparison to its foreign rivalries, some domestic breweries have started doing some-

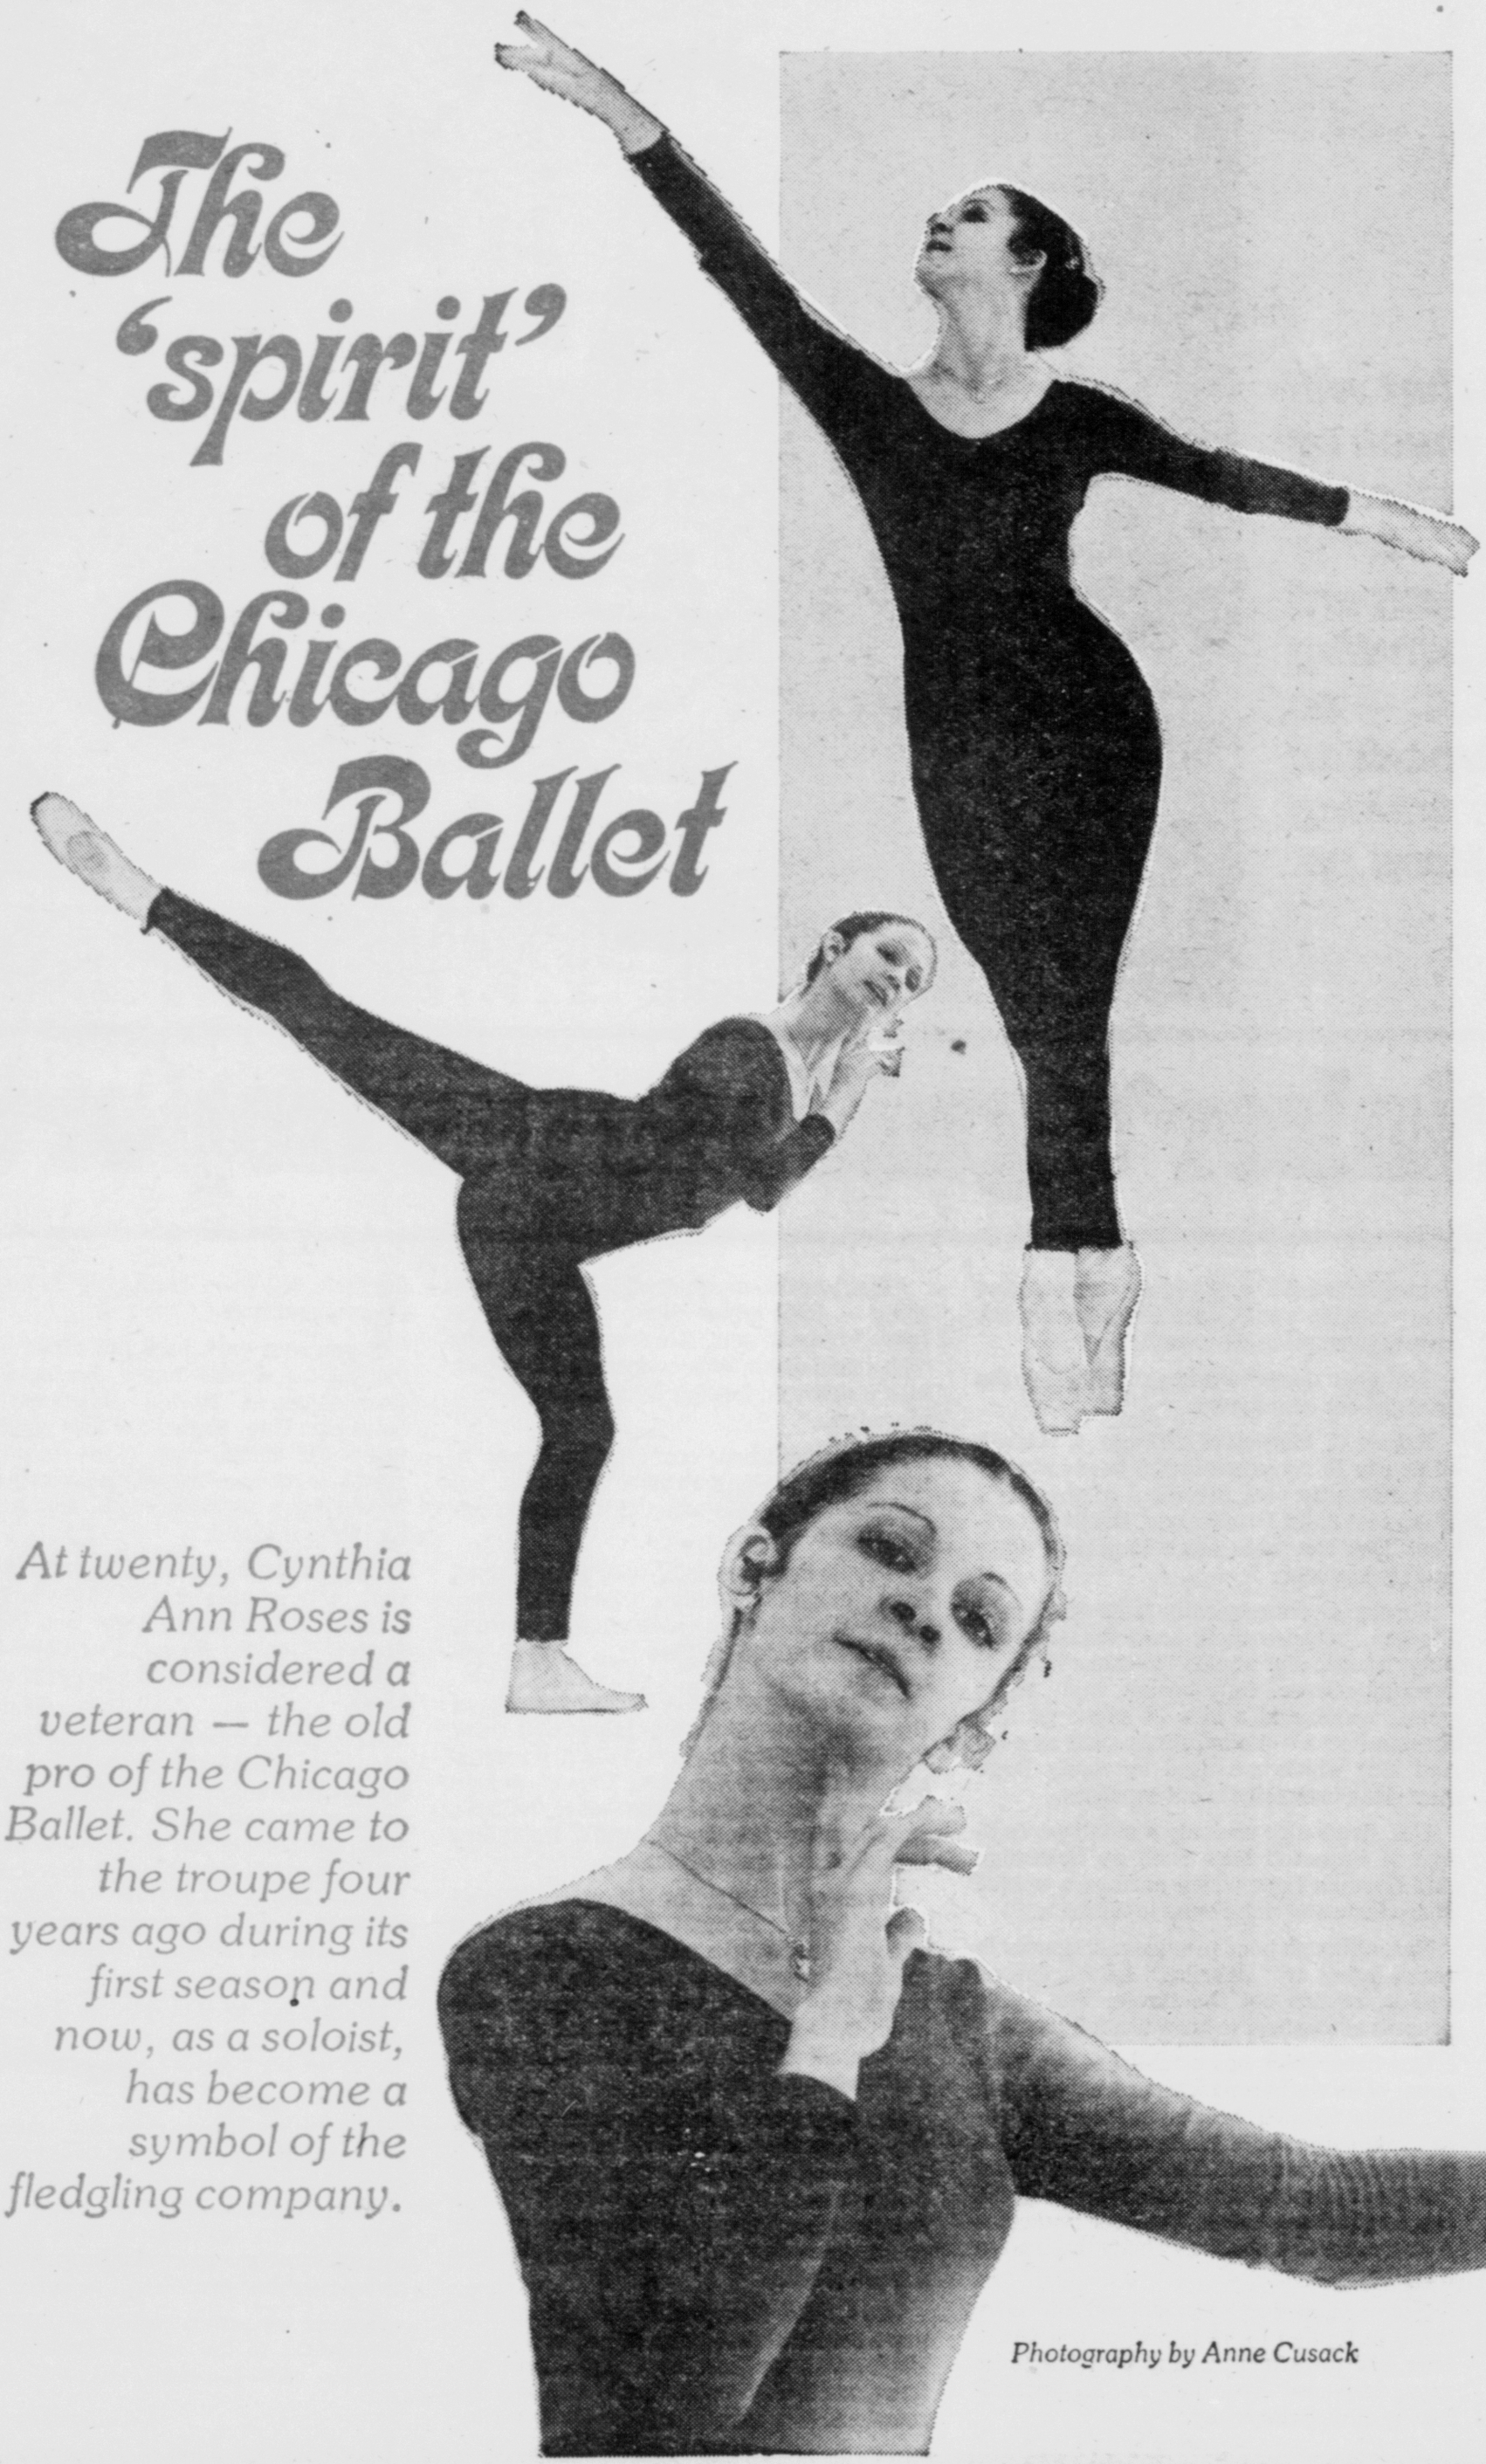
by Lynn Asinof

At twenty, Cynthia Ann Roses is considered a veteran — the old pro of the Chicago Ballet. She came to the troupe four years ago during its first season and now, as a soloist, has become a symbol of the fledgling company.



"If you eat too much, you can't dance the next day. If you drink too much, you can't dance the next day."

Those are the cold, hard facts of being a dancer. And it doesn't sound like much fun.

But when Cynthia Ann Roses talks about her work, her face shows that dancing has rewards few people can imagine.

"I dance because I want to make people happy and make them feel richer," said the twenty-year-old soloist with the Chicago Ballet.

Cynthia and the Chicago Ballet started together back in 1974. She was only sixteen and the company was brand new. This week, the troupe opened its fourth season, and Cynthia was the only dancer from the original group still with the company.

Although the Chicago Ballet has had more ups and downs than a roller coaster, Cynthia Ann Roses has found solid ground among the turmoil. Her dancing has matured, her confidence has grown and her enthusiasm is undimmed.

She has become a symbol of the spunky young company, which few figured would last the first season.

Cynthia has stayed with the Chicago troupe because she believes a dancer needs roots. "It's like a flower — a seed. You plant it in one place and it grows."

Two years ago she stayed in Chicago while most of the company followed former artistic director Ben Stevenson to Houston. It wasn't easy.

"We've done that so many times — started over," she said, remembering the beginning of last season when all the dancers were new.

Cynthia, however, said she just decided, "it would be better for my career to stay here." And in retrospect, she feels she made the right decision.

This year things are "starting to gel." Artistic director Frederic Franklin has joined the company full-time, the company has expanded, the dancers know each other and the Chicago Ballet gained national recognition as part of the North American International Dance Festival this past June.

"How would I be able to do this with you if I hadn't been here for four years," Cynthia said, noting that interviews and recognition come slowly.

Cynthia decided she wanted to be a dancer when she was ten. "It is really odd when I think about it," she said. "I'd never had any lessons or anything. It just hit me one day."

So she studied in Miami with the sister of the famed Cuban ballerina Alicia Alonso, and then went to New York to dance on scholarship with the Harkness Ballet School. She performed with the Miami Ballet and the Eglevsky Ballet on Long Island, but when she came to Chicago it was the first time she was "finally in a company."

Cynthia dreamed about dancing when she was a girl, and her feelings about it haven't changed since she was ten. "I've always thought of it with love and that is how I think of it now."

Photography by Anne Cusack

Why did she pick ballet?

"My mother is sure it is to spite her," Cynthia said, explaining that she is the fourth generation of show business in her family. "My mother was a tap dancer — a hoofer she likes to call it."

Cynthia says she sacrificed other interests when she decided to be a dancer. With class every day, rehearsals and performances, there just isn't any time.

"What social life," she laughed. "It's me and 'Little House on the Prairie.' That's it."

But Cynthia does have a home life. She lives with her mother and grandmother who both moved out to Chicago after Cynthia had been with the company for a year.

"It is fantastic to go home to someone and know you can cry or laugh," she said, all too aware that many dancers don't have that luxury. "It is fantastic to know there is someone who cares."

That is one way Cynthia blunts the emotional demands of her work — the ones that come from dancing when she has the stomach flu or giving her all to a performance when the house is only half full.

The hardest part for her is the rigid discipline — the fact that there are no days off. "You have those days when you say 'I really don't want to do it,' " she said remembering last winter when it was 20 degrees below zero and all the dancers were practicing in mufflers.

And then there is the problem of finding the right interpretation of a role, which Cynthia says can really get to you "if you let it."

With a perpetually sunny disposition, Cynthia has had problems learning to control her enthusiasm for dancing. Remembering some early reviews that accused her of having a cheerleader's attack, she said "the problem is to know when enough is enough."

"I know what I feel, but I don't know how I look," she said, explaining the need for a dancer to work through a director. "You kind of have to place it in his hands."

That is where a dancer learns to develop the fine edge that separates an artist from a technician. And Cynthia couldn't be happier with her persent director.

"Mr. Franklin is an absolute angel. You really kill yourself for him," she said.

In the past four years, Cynthia has tackled roles as diverse as the Sugar Plum Fairy, the Goddess of the Rainbow and a jive cat from the 1950s.

Given the choice, she'd prefer to dance lyrical roles like the Sugar Plum Fairy. "I tend to be more of a soft person. I'm an angel," she said with a laugh.

Cynthia says angry roles or somber roles are harder for her, requiring a bit more thought. "I don't want to be someone who can just do one thing," she said, explaining why these roles are important. "You can do anything you want to. I really believe that. I'm a great believer of Norman Vincent Peale."

At twenty, Cynthia has a solid belief in herself that makes her seem wiser than her years. She says it comes partly from the fact that she chose her career when she was so young.

"I graduated high school when I was fifteen, so I missed all the high school parties and proms. That makes you grow in one way, but the way I did it makes you grow in another."

Dancers often seem to live in a different world — motivated by forces that other people can't see or understand. Only a dancer has a career that starts in adolescence and ends at thirty-five.

Cynthia said the special comaraderie among dancers comes from shared experiences.

"You've experienced it," she said. "It is something tacit. You don't have to explain it. It is something we understand without having to say."

That is because the best way to say it is with dance. And Cynthia Ann Roses says it every time she takes the stage. §

Schaumburg Mattress Factory

THOUGHTS on a MATTRESS

For almost five years our little mattress factory has been doing an ever increasing business by attracting the astute, intelligent customer with the experience to recognize the difference between some so-called "discount" or "sale" price and a top quality product at a low price.

And we would like to emphasize one point - this is a FACTORY - not a "Factory Outlet" or "Factory Closeout Mart" or some other rip-off of just another retail store. We actually make our mattresses and box springs right here before your very eyes.

Out mattresses and box springs are made with top quality materials and specifications that have been proven over many years. Our prices are based on the cost of the materials that go into each product that we make. And we know that when you compare quality for quality, our prices are very, very low.

I guess that is why so many customers who have shopped all the so-called "sale" priced mattresses in the area come back and buy ours.

Incidentally, our service is excellent, too.

Imports:

thing to thwart the competition. Their tactic is to produce a good beer at a lower price.

One such brewery is Huber's Brewing Co. of Milwaukee. It Augsburger beer is a bavarian-style brew with a heavy, creamy taste, and it is available throughout the Midwest as far west as Denver.

The G. Heileman Brewing Co., Chicago, is brewing two fine beers which are foreign-like in their flavor: Special Export and Royal Amber, both creamy, tart beers sold throughout the Midwest.

Old Chicago Dark, brewed by Peter Hand Co., (a subsidiary of Huber's) is lighter than imported darks such as Heineken, but it still carries a full-bodied imported taste, and it is full-brewed, not just syrup-colored like other U.S. "darks." However, Yuengling Porter, a Pennsylvania brew, still probably takes first prize among U.S. darks.

Another Pennsylvania-brewer, Horlacher Co., offers Imperial Pilsener, made almost entirely from imported hops. It carries a tart, sharp flavor.

Pabst Brewing Co.'s Andeker, which is aged more than thirty days, rounds out the list of fine domestic brews with its hearty, foreign flavor.

One of the best places to invest in your first 6-pack of foreign beer is World Wide Liquor Store, a Northwest suburban chain with a local store on Algonquin Road off Rte. 53 in Rolling Meadows. It carries more than thirty names from four continents.

"We sell a lot of Spanish beer because there's a lot of Spaniards in the neighborhood," said World Wide owner Vincent Bufalino. "But Italian beer is also big," he joked.

Other places to try are Foremost, Teddy's and Bell's Liquor stores. Each carry as many as twenty-five labels depending on demand.

"Sometimes certain foreign beers are hard to come by," said William Nixon, assistant manager of Bell's Liquor Store on Dundee Road in Buffalo Grove. "Our stock depends largely on what the customers are buying at the time. The Western European brands have always sold the fastest."

Western European countries lead in import sales, but remember, they're not the only nations with the quality beer — there's a whole world of flavor waiting to be tasted.

Magic carpet adventure in exotic Morocco

Story and photos by Randy Mink

Snake charmers, veiled women, carpet bazaars, mint tea, fez-topped waiters, imperial palaces, camels, sweeping desert vistas.

For sheer escapism, Morocco is one of the dreamiest destinations around.

Exotic and oriental, yet just flamenco steps from Europe, the Islamic kingdom is called the "closest of the faraway countries." Morocco, with its strong Middle Eastern flavor, is the westernmost Arab nation.

Resting on the northwest tip of Africa, Morocco, claiming both Atlantic and Mediterranean coastlines, lies only two and a half hours by ferry boat from Southern Spain, across the Straits of Gibraltar. A tourist-class ticket from the Spanish port of Algeciras costs about $6 one way.

Randy Mink is a free lance travel writer from Des Plaines.

Now with low-cost charter flights from New York to Casablanca, Morocco's biggest city, the dazzling bazaars and desert oases have become more accessible to American tourists. Round trip flights start at $299.

Those who include Morocco as a mere footnote to their European travels most likely will get their first — and perhaps only — taste of North Africa in Tangier, a rather grimy port, where the ferries from Spain disgorge thousands of tourists daily. Immediately, in scenes straight out of the Bible, you see the contrast from the 20th Century Western world — veiled mothers carrying children or chickens on their backs; donkeys toting huge loads through narrow streets; hole-in-the-wall shops crammed with carpets, leather goods and gleaming copper pots.

Tangier, unfortunately, teems with drug peddlers, pesty "guides" and others who make it their business to rip off tourists. But the city is worth seeing if your European trip calls for only a brief sashay into North Africa.

Ideally, you will travel deeper into Morocco.

Pink-walled Marrakech, more than any Moroccan city, beckons the true vagabond. Away from the calm of your luxury hotel, the sights are so exotic, the colors so profuse, the smells so alien, you need to begin with small doses. Plunging into the wild 'n' wooly street life for an extended period can be a little rich for the first-timer's blood.

Streams of motorcycles and bikes, but not many cars, file by the ancient city walls. On their heads, pedestrians carry everything from straw mats to tables. One woman is seen wearing a purple veil and black caftan, her friend a turquoise veil and green robe — the bizarre color combinations are endless.

The men, clad in heavy hooded robes, or djellabahs, sport Moslem skullcaps, stocking caps and tassled red fezzes, shuffling along in white or yellow leather slippers called babouches.

Marrakech is best known for its pink buildings, a-by-product of the sandy reddish soil that blankets the area. Moroccans refer to the city as "Red Marrakech." Centuries ago, when Marrakech was an imperial city, the king made it law that all buildings be covered with native red mud. It's still the custom today. The massive 12th Century ramparts, Arabesque minarets and most of the low-lying adobe buildings glow in varying shades of salmon.

The medina, or old quarter, is centered around Djemaa-el-F'na Square, a ten-ring circus where storytellers, acrobats, magicians, snake charmers, African dancers and medicine men attract throngs of curiosity-seekers, mostly natives. If a camera-toting tourist even pokes his head into a gathering, the performers immediately stick out their hand or tambourine for money.

In Marrakech, it seems, everyone wants a financial reward. Little boys offer to guide you through the medina's twisting alleys. Nursing mothers beg for coins. Little girls string cheap beaded necklaces on your camera and call it a "gift." Blind men stand in a row, moaning religious chants. And how I remember the pathetic old woman — it's really quite haunting — who spotted me eating in a restaurant and stuck her hand in the door. The manager shooed her away.

Exploring the medina's souks, or markets, is a trip into fantasyland. You may get lost in the maze, but worry about that later.

The famous dye souks, a photographer's delight, are ablaze with red, yellow, blue and orange strands of wool hanging out to dry on bamboo poles. You'll hear artisans hammering brass into exquisite trays and smell cedar wood being carved into chests. Shops with room enough for only two customers are piled high with gaudy carpets, sheepskin jackets, spice jars or caftans trimmed with gold embroidery.

To keep you longer, a merchant may offer a glass of mint tea, while you decide what you want and how much you'll pay. The custom of bargaining is practiced seriously, and the Moroccans resent foreigners who don't play the game.

Be ready to be tugged, pawed at and even dragged by shopkeepers or their agents as you wander down the labyrinth of alleys shaded by reed slats. Moroccans will do anything to get your business and most sellers understand English. It's "buyer beware," so carefully inspect any merchandise before you close a deal.

Away from all this turmoil, in the sedate palace-like confines of the Mamounia Hotel, date palms cast their silhouettes against a swirling pink-and-purple sunset and snowy peaks of the Atlas Mountains.

The pink Mamounia, spacious and elegant, old and traditional, reflects the imperial splendor of yesteryear and provides the atmosphere for a complete escape. Winston Churchill stayed here during his winters, painting the Atlas range from his balcony.

Reminding you of the Moorish-style Alhambra Palace in Granada, Spain, the main entrance hall has elaborately painted cedar ceilings and plaster pillars carved with intricate Arabic designs, not to mention mosaic wall tiles and thick Moroccan rugs.

A tradition at the Mamounia is afternoon tea, an event you shouldn't miss even if you're staying elsewhere. A small glass of hot, pale-green, mint-flavored tea (the national drink), with just the right amount of sugar added, is served in the sky-lit grand salon, a busy place bubbling with conversation and splashing fountains. Or you can sit on Moroccan-style cushions at hand-beaten copper tables in the bar. Along with tea, order some Moroccan pastries, either light cookies or sticky-sweet honey and almond confections.

You can learn about Moroccan history by visiting the major monuments in Marrakech.

The Menara (meaning "panorama") is a 16th Century reservoir with a pavilion that offered the king a view of the countryside. The body of stored water still is used for irrigating the olive trees, now 800 years old, in the surrounding groves.

The mosaic tombs of the Saadian dynasty and the 12th Century Koutoubia Tower, a city landmark that rises above a mosque, are among other sights on a Marrakech tour. And don't be surprised to find an entrepreneur on a barren roadside lot offering camel rides to tourists.

If you really want to get to know these humped beasts, steer south to Goulimine, a ramshackle outpost on the edge of the Sahara. The nomads converge every Saturday at a weekly camel market. Many of the black-turbaned traders wear robes of indigo — thus their name "bluemen" of Goulimine. Women likewise are draped in voluminous blue garments; only their eyes and forehead show.

Inside the mud-walled arena stand camels of all shapes and sizes. When the animals get jumpy and restless, out come the whips. In the dirt you see ebony-skinned old men stripping rags and braiding them into whips. But the camels generally are docile and like to yawn.

Outside the camel-lot you notice tents stocked with indigo robes and smocks. Beads and silver jewelry are spread out on blue sheets.

Some merchants weigh clumps of sticky dates as their sons swat away flies with a palm frond. Other "bluemen" are stalking off with a yelping goat or shoveling from big, open piles of grain.

After mid-day the nomads trek back on foot into the desert, leading their loaded-up camels with a rope. A few goats and donkeys tag along.

At night, colorful native guedra dances are performed in Goulimine. A woman swathed in loose clothing and heavy silver ornaments stays on her knees and twists subtly throughout the dance. Her arms writhing feverishly, she flicks her wrists and twitches her neck to the monotonous beat of skin drums, chanting and hand-clapping.

Organized day trips to Goulimine from the Atlantic resort of Agadir are about $25. Public buses cost less than $10 roundtrip for the 4½-hour ride.

You'll find Agadir an ultra-modern pleasure spa for sun-worshiping Germans and Scandinavians. The glaring-white town boasts many new beach hotels, and 300 days of sunshine a year are guaranteed. Nothing remains of the old village that was destroyed in 1960 by an earthquake that killed 12,000 persons. Most Americans would rather explore more exotic parts of Morocco than spend any length of time in Agadir.

Also less exotic, yet comforting to fresh arrivals, is Morocco's biggest city, Casablanca. But you must remember this . . . North Africa's commercial giant, population 2 million, will disappoint fans of the Humphrey Bogart movie bearing the Atlantic port's name. There is no particular mystique.

Though cynics could compare the modern white city to Athens, charging lack of character and ambience, Casablanca in reality is no less Moroccan than any other place in the kingdom. It's just that Casa is extremely complex and difficult for the visitor to experience, especially since the city contains not a single must-see tourist attraction. (Even the guidebooks and government tourist brochures admit this shortcoming.)

Yet, relatively speaking, Casablanca, formerly part of French Morocco, is still one of the world's intriguing cities, at least to Western eyes. You just have to relax and enjoy the intermingling of French and Middle Eastern culture.

Delightful to behold are the beautiful, cream-colored buildings with gracefully rounded corners and French-style shutters and grillwork. Drop into a patisserie for French pastries or linger at a sidewalk cafe. Get used to the traffic. Just when you think you're really in Paris, a horse cart may cross your path or you'll spot an Arabic sign advertising Royal Air Maroc or Coca-Cola.

What better way to absorb a little Casablanca than at a Parisian-style outdoor cafe facing Place Mohammed V, the heartbeat of downtown.

Sipping mint tea, you sit among fez-crowned men wearing djellabahs, businessmen in coats and ties, and young men in flared slacks and European-tapered shirts.

Not only will you see veiled women passing by, but also their more "sophisticated" sisters dressed in pants or skirts, platform shoes or fashionably high boots, bearing a refinement associated with the women of Paris.

The cosmopolitan side of Casablanca also is reflected in the new white high-rise which dominates the square, the Casablanca Hotel, with its plush bars and dining rooms.

You can reach the hotel, located opposite the cafes, via a new system of underground passages capped by an exterior multi-colored bubble. Another part of the square's recent facelift is a sunken garden with blue-tiled fountain and new lawns landscaped with flowers, flags and date palms.

One passage delivers you to the luxury hotel, another takes you to the city's medina, with its crowded alleys, street urchins and stench. Here wallows a decaying area that seems worlds apart from the cafes, banks, airline offices and hotel salons across the square. The old sector certainly lacks the flair and charm of medinas in other Moroccan cities.

In Casablanca you're just as likely to hear Western rock music as oriental strains oozing out of shops. Instead of donkeys, cars and motorbikes push their way through the narrow cobbled lanes. Don't be surprised to be jabbed by elbows or hit with a soccer ball. At night everything takes on a spooky glow when the glare of bare light bulbs illuminates the brochettes (skewers of meat) sizzling over open fires.

The clash between Casablanca's prosperity and poverty manifests itself when shabbily

Parke County, Ind. — rich in covered bridges

The covered bridge has become a prized possession in America, a treasured remnant of the rural past.

Parke County, Ind., located 50 miles due west of Indianapolis, is rich in these treasures. The county has more covered bridges than any other county in the United States — thirty-five original bridges which have been carefully preserved and looked after by the local citizenry.

The bridges are the object of attention this week as county residents welcome visitors to the Parke County Covered Bridge Festival which began yesterday and continues through Sunday, Oct. 23. The bridges together with the autumn scenery, food and craft festivals and down home hospitality are the magic ingredients that have attracted 400,000 visitors to this annual event.

Visitors take in the bridges and the autumn scenery in four driving routes indicated on maps which are available free at the Tourist Information Center in Rockville, the Parke County seat. There are between four and six bridges along each of the routes which vary from 25 to 35 miles in length. Along the way visitors can stop at food stands, craft exhibits and special events planned during the festival.

A special treat is the scarecrows who leer and smirk and peer out from behind trees at passersby along the roadway. The scarecrows are set up by local residents and neighbor tries to outdo neighbor to come up with the scariest scarecrow of 'em all. The annual scarecrow spectacle has developed into a contest that is judged by the visitors. When you pick up your map you can also pick up a ballot and give your critical review.

Every town in the county has some sort of special event going on during the festival but the town of Rockville seems to be the focus of activity. Some of this year's activities include The Parke County Covered Bridge Antique Show and Sale held both weekends at the 4-H Fairgrounds Commercial Building (admission $1.25); The Parke County Quilters show at the Rockville Community Center; The annual art exhibit sponsored by the Covered Bridge Art Assn. in Rockville; The Fourth Annual Covered Bridge Festival 10 Mile Road Run on Oct. 15; the photography exhibit sponsored by the Parke County Camera Club at the Presbyterian Church in Rockville; the traditional Sunday morning Hymn Sing at 7:30 a.m. Sunday sponsored by the Parke County Ministerial Assn. in Rockville; the Have-a-Rest Tent for senior citizens featuring daily devotions, hymns and organ music; and the melodrama presented by the Parke Players at the Rockville Theater.

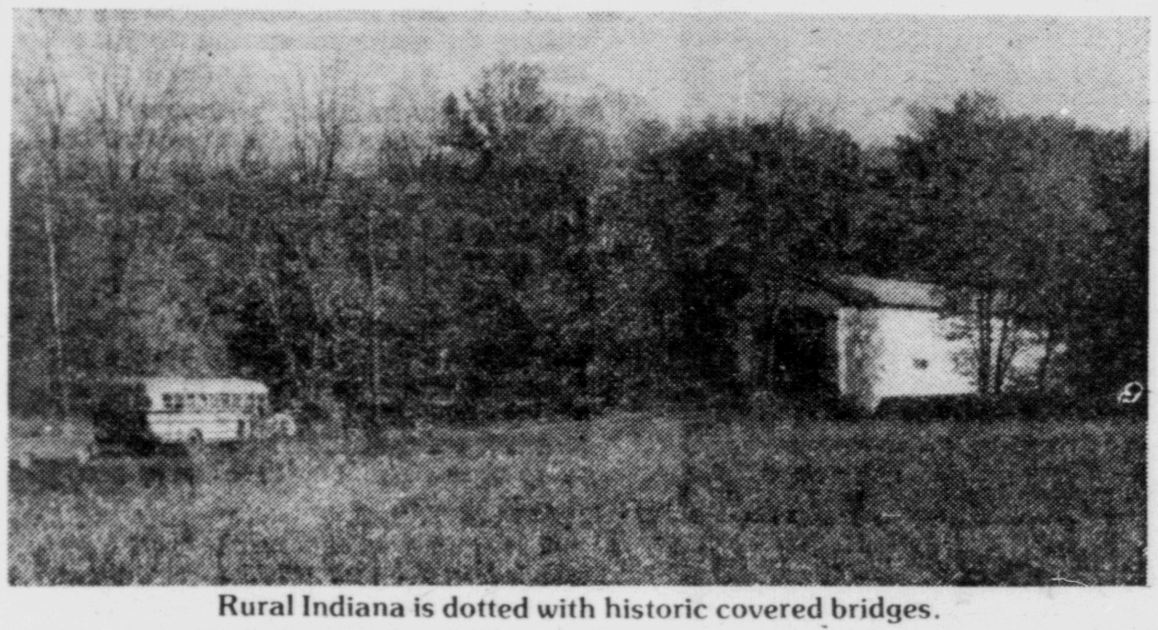
A very popular attraction in Parke County is Billie Creek Village located a mile east of Rockville. Buildings of architectural and historic interest were moved to the site and became part of the village's turn-of-the-century setting. Most of the buildings have artisans at work demonstrating some of the handicrafts and activities that were a part of community life 75 years ago. Admission to the village is $2 but a family pass is available for $5 that is good throughout the festival.

No one need go hungry at festival time, not with Parke County's abundant service organizations setting up concessions. There's the Covered Bridge Kitchen operated by the Covered Bridge Assn., a chicken barbecue sponsored by the Rosedale American Legion, Sunday morning pancake breakfasts sponsored by the Rockville Rotary Club, and barbecued pork chops served up by the Rockville Elks.

Lodging can be hard to come by during the festival since hotels and motels are quickly booked. Rooms in private homes can be reserved by contacting Mrs. Alta Pickett, 502 W. Market St., Rockville, Ind. 47872 phone 317-569-5679. There are also many camping facilities at Turkey Run and Shades state parks, Raccoon Lake Recreation Area, Rockville Lake Park, the 4-H Fairgrounds and the municipal parks in many of the county's towns. There are also private campgrounds.

The Covered Bridge Festival is run by the citizens of Parke County who have organized the Parke County, Inc., a non-profit corporation. Information on the festival is available from Tourist Information Center, Box 165, Rockville, Ind. 47872 phone 317-569-5226.

Rockville is about a 3½-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs and is reached by taking I-80,94 to Rte. 41 and proceeding south past I-74 to Rockville.



Rural Indiana is dotted with historic covered bridges.

Florida packages offer varied attractions

Delta Air Lines' Florida Fly/Drive Dream Vacation packages are for vacationists who want to travel at their own pace and see as many of the state's varied attractions as possible.

One of Delta's tour packages, "Florida Bonus Fly Inn Drive," provides a choice of car sizes, a variety of hotels throughout Florida, and admission discount bonuses at twenty-one well-known attractions. The basic rate for seven days, six nights averages from $184 to $342 per party of up to four persons, plus roundtrip air fare, and includes selected Alamo or Avis rental car for seven 24-hour periods, and a room for six nights.

The "Delta Drive-Around" plan is available to those who want a central headquarters while visiting Walt Disney World and nearby attractions. Package price of $140.50 per person, based on double occupancy, plus air fare, includes accommodations at the Rodeway Inn in Orlando seven days, six nights; air-conditioned car for six 24-hour periods with unlimited mileage, two days' admission to Walt Disney World and 16 attraction tickets; admission to Sea World and all attractions; Circus World, Stars Hall of Fame, and Mystery Fun House plus eighteen holes of Mystery Mini Golf. Shorter packages are available as are optional tours to Kennedy Space Center, Cypress Gardens, Busch Gardens, Silver Springs, and St. Augustine.

Delta's "Florida Exclusively Yours" plan puts you even closer to Walt Disney World's gates, at Ramada Inn-Southwest. Package price per party, of up to four persons, ranges from $197 to $285 depending on type of rental car selected, plus air fare, and includes seven days, six nights' motel accommodations and rental car for seven 24-hour periods with unlimited mileage.

The "Including Walt Disney World" plan is the name of an eight-day, seven-night package utilizing an Airways Rental car and including two admissions to Walt Disney World's Magic Kingdom, twenty attractions tickets and five sightseeing attractions. Hotel accommodations are available in the Walt Disney World area, Daytona/Ormond Beach, Tampa, and St. Petersburg, at package prices ranging from $179 to $286 per person, based on double occupancy.

Travel agents have details of these and other packages. Package rates are effective through December 15.

Ski guide lists Vermont vacation resorts

A total of nearly seventy downhill and cross-country ski resorts are included in the new 1978 Vermont Ski Guide released by the Vermont Travel Division.

The annual twenty-eight-page full-color booklet contains information about lifts and lodging, lessons, trails and ski package vacations. It also carries details on transportation and general information to help winter vacation planners.

Free copies are available by mail, write the Vermont Travel Division, 61 Elm St., Montpelier, Vt. 05602.

A luxury resort for the nation's joggers

For the first time, a luxury resort has designed a vacation package specifically aimed at the ten million joggers throughout America.

A unique workshop and holiday plan, emphasizing the physical and mental aspects of running, will be offered at the 400-room Princess Tower in Freeport, Bahamas. The complete four day workshops are scheduled for the weekends of Nov. 3-6, Nov. 17-20, Nov. 24-27 and Dec. 1-4. Additional sessions have been planned beginning in February 1978.

These packages are under the direction of Mike Spino, author of two running textbooks, and Michael Murphy, founder of the well-known Esalen Institute in Big Sur, Cal. Among the areas of training that will be covered are: breathing patterns and techniques to increase distance, styles of body movement in running that relax the body and remove fatique, and yoga-based stretching exercises and muscle/skeletal exercises that will reduce chances of injury and increase performance.

This "running" vacation package is priced from $269 per person, based on double occupancy. The plan includes workshops, a superior room in the Princess Tower for three nights, three meals per day, with guest's choice of a special training diet or gourmet menu, a copy of Spino's book, and a personalized training program for the visitor's aid at home.

For reservations or further information, see your travel agent or write to Mike Spino, "Innerspaces of Running" Workshop, 1345 Avenue of the Americas, Room 3305, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Trailways reduces its intercity bus fares

Trailways, the intercity bus company, has announced a reduction in its regularly scheduled interstate fares, effective through December 2.

Trailways will cut its maximum $75 one-way fare to anywhere in the country to $65 during midweek and offer a $39 midweek maximum price for one-way tickets formerly priced up to $64.99.

The special fares, subject to Interstate Commerce Commission approval, can be used only on interstate travel from 6 p.m. Sundays through noon Fridays. Tickets must be purchased during this time period also. The new fare allows for unlimited stopovers, so a passenger traveling from New York to Jacksonville, for example, would not have to travel straight through. The passenger can travel New York to Durham, N.C., spend the night and then continue to Jacksonville.

Children under five ride on Trailways free of charge. Tickets for children under 12 are half fare. This applies to special fares as well.

Morocco:

dressed children from the medina cross under Place Mohammed V to work the outdoor cafes, begging for money or selling gum. Little old men peddle hot jewelry. Any visitor with leather shoes can expect to be hounded by the ubiquitous shoe shiners.

What Casa does not offer in picture-postcard sights, it makes up for in fine restaurants and hotels. You can feast on gourmet French cuisine or sample the Moroccan dishes your guidebook suggests.

On top of the twelve-story Marhaba Hotel is a bar with Moroccan leather ottomans and strands of bright wool, reminiscent of the Marrakech dye souks, hanging overhead.

In the Marhaba's rooftop restaurant I had bouillabaisse, steak, salad and French bread, along with reasonably-priced Moroccan wine. For dessert I could choose from a cart of French pastries or have a basketful of oranges, dates and figs. The meal cost only $8.

At Le President restaurant in the Casablanca Hotel, formerly a Holiday Inn, you can enjoy a top-notch French meal. Everything from the velour walls to the discreet (but smiling) service, widely separated tables, fresh flowers and sparkling crystalware, contribute to the elegance.

Even the most exquisite dinner in the better hotels will not cost more than $15. You can eat for much less at smaller modern restaurants downtown. One night I had chicken crepes, French onion soup, French bread and local wine for $2.20. (This place, geared to young people, also served pizza and hamburgers.)

At Moroccan-style restaurants you sit on velvety brocaded cushions or pouffes (leather stools) next to intricately tiled walls and Moorish archways. Waiters bring course after course on brass trays. Before the meal, they pour water over your hands.

While the Moroccan kitchen offers many specialties, visitors are most likely to try couscous, a grain dish of wheat semolina topped with vegetables, lamb or chicken, chick peas and raisins. Also common is tajine, a juicy stew — heavy with oil and butter — of meat, onions, carrots, olives, prunes and a subtle variety of spices.

Bastilla is a flaky, sugar-coated pie stuffed with crushed almonds, cinnamon and bits of pigeon. It's also called pigeon pie. (If it makes you queasy, just pretend you're eating chicken.) Chicken with lemons and olives is another treat.

Room rates in the deluxe hotels range from $25 to $40 for a double, well below rates elsewhere in the world. One night I slept in the respectable George V Hotel and paid just $4.40 for a single with full bath.

Inflation spells disaster to Stein

by John N. Frank

Ask Benjamin Stein what he's always wanted to do with his life and he'll answer instantly, "Be a writer, I've always wanted to be a writer, I just love writing."

That love of writing, plus a desire to let the American people know where inflation is leading them, have led Stein to author "On the Brink," (Simon and Schuster, $8.95), a novel dealing with the United States in 1981.

Stein began his book in March, 1976 at a time when everyone, he says, was writing disaster books or movies.

"So I decided that rather than write a book about a man being eaten by a shark or a person burning alive on the top of a 125-story building, I'd write about inflation. Inflation is the only disaster that's already started," Stein says.

"On the Brink" is set in a world where oil prices have just jumped dramatically and America's response is to print more and more money until it becomes worth less than the paper it's printed on.

The bottom falls out of the stock and bonds markets, people riot in the streets and a dictator is on the rise.

But in Washington, the president is too worried about the political consequences of doing anything which might restore stability to act. He listens to a chairman of the federal reserve who says print more money, print more money.

And so Stein's book goes until, with the entire country seemingly on the brink of chaos, a surprise ending emerges and order returns.

The ending is a bit hoaky, but overall the book is well written and does a good job of telling an economic story in a way non-economists will understand.

That was what he set out to do with "On the Brink," Stein says.

"We are tolerating steadily more and more inflation in the economy. When I was in high school, we had 2 per cent inflation and people were screaming about it. My book shows something that could happen if we continue to tolerate inflation," Stein says.

Stein had seen how politics colored the economic decisions of the nation's government while a speech writer in the Nixon White House.

That job gave him his first chance to be a writer after two unpleasant years of practicing law, he says.

"You can't just go be a writer, you had to have some other profession." Upon graduation from Columbia University, he decided to become a lawyer.

"Someone told me to go to Yale, that you didn't have to do any work there and it would be like three years at a country club. So I went to Yale, but it was like a slum."

Practicing law wasn't any more rewarding to him, so when the offer came from the Nixon White House Stein says he jumped at the chance to write.

That chance was short-lived. Nixon resigned in August 1974 and Stein started looking for another job.

He went to work with the Wall Street Journal in New York City, but is now working as a consultant with Norman Lear in Hollywood while he continues to do free-lance articles for newspapers and magazines while working on several new books.

The move from Washington to Hollywood wasn't as big a change as many might think, Stein says, because he's dealing with the same type of people now as he did when he worked in Washington.

"In both places the people are quite confident and always cheerful," even when things start to go wrong.

Stein spends a great deal of his book looking at People in Washington, as well as people around the country who are watching their lives go down the drain in a flood of worthless money.

"I'm concerned with real live people. What happens with inflation? It's like a terrible disease, a mental and physical disease."

If people can't depend on the money they earn being worth something, it cuts them off from their main link to the world around them, Stein says. They become desperate for something or someone they can look to for order and out of that desperation arises dictators.

"Hitler was just a twerp living in a garrett in Munich until the inflation of 1923," Stein says.

A man named Whitelaw is the dictator character in Stein's "On the Brink." He tours the country attracting tremendous crowds with empty rhetoric and promises of stability.

"He gets small businessmen, small farmers, retired people, young people who don't know what else to do, marginal people — and there are an awful lot of them out there," Stein writes of Whitelaw.

He is opposed by a Southern president who smiles a lot — Stein calls this character a combination of the best of Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter — but cannot take the needed drastic steps. Finally, he wins a struggle for the people's allegiance with Whitelaw because his advisors find a way to restore order.

But Stein doubts real life political leaders will have the courage to stop run-away inflation.

"Politicans are just naturally going to try and buy all the votes they can with what they consider free money. The politican who has the courage to do something that makes economic sense is a rare and vanishing breed."

If that statement proves true during the next decade Stein's scenario of a world going crazy from inflation may not be far away.

Tracing the history of 'The Today Show'

THE TODAY SHOW by Robert Metz (Playboy Press, $10).

Reviewed by Diane Mermigas

Television's morning monarch, the "Today Show," came up through the ranks shaky and showy and slow.

The show, which had been a daring venture at the time it premiered in 1952, was the brainchild of one Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, the son of a wealthy Los Angeles roofing manufacturer who opted for advertising after an unsuccessful bid for mayor and eventually became NBC's vice president in charge of television.

Even though television critics heralded the start of the morning news and talk show as "electronic mishmash" that would never work, the timing for such an innovation couldn't have been better.

It was a time in broadcast history that was ripe for a personality like Dave Garroway who would bridge the vintage world of radio and the spunky, young world of television.

He would come from Chicago, where he hosted a two-hour, midnight radio jazz and talk show called the "11:60 Club." He joined the ranks of Jack Benny and Burns and Allen in prime time television with a platform for his zany humor and motor-mouth conversation in "Garroway at Large."

Soon, he became the hottest property around, and his short television career paved the way for him becoming the first host of NBC's "Today Show."

The story behind the birth, development and struggle of the "Today Show" is the story of television and of the comings and goings of a generation that called themselves "flower children."

That story, complete with fascinating anecdotes and behind-the-scenes color, is amusingly relayed by Robert Metz in "The Today Show." It is the same successful, storytelling style the New York Times columnist applied in an earlier television history, "CBS: Reflections in a Bloodshot Eye."

The first half of the book is largely devoted to the rise and fall of Garroway, and the daring and risk that went into the conception of the "Today Show" which changed the character of morning television.

Metz warmly captures the light moments of doing live television that the audience never knew about like the casualties of Garroway's live commercials. One day a puppy was placed on stage to eat one sponsor's breakfast. Just before the camera turned to the dog, it nonchalantly had a bowel movement that left a brown lump on the white surface below.

Producer Mort Werner, we are told, leaned over and quickly scooped it up with his hands and the commercial came off as planned without a problem. "Mort quietly walked over to a badly shaken floor director — low man on the production totem pole — smiled, and said 'I want to show you the difference between a floor director and a producer.' With that he opened his hands and said, 'To be a producer is to have the ability to handle this.' "

And so the stories go.

Metz also includes the personal tragedies of "Today Show" personalities — the idiosyncrasies of Garroway, the loss of his wife and his fall from grace after having led the morning show through fifteen years in the business.

From the chimpanzee, Muggs, who shared some of those first milestones with Garroway to later media stars like John Chancellor, Hugh Downs, Frank Blair, Edwin Newman and Barbara Walters who succeeded Garroway, the book is an insightful and provocative profile of personalities.

When the reader reaches the final chapter, devoted to the current "Today Show," he realizes that Metz has taken him through some of the most painful and triumphant moments of morning television without a bump or scar.

And in a rather sublte way, Metz leaves you wondering just where the "Today Show" and all of its descendants go from here.

Today show veterans Dave Garroway, center, Jack Lescoulie and Frank Blair joined current host Tom Brokow, left, on the show's 25th anniversary.

Characters, plot spring to life in hitchhiking tale

BREAD AND BUTTER by Jack Flam (Viking, $10).

Reviewed by Bernadine M. Rechner

Pick up "Bread and Butter" and you won't put it down until the end, in this instance 266 pages later. For here is a fast paced adventure that is read at a leisurely tempo to a conclusion that sneaks up on you in a surprisingly short time.

Author Jack Flam created Sam Morse, expelled him from college six weeks before graduation, gave him a series of menial jobs and finally set him on the road to find himself. Hitchhiking from New York to Miami, Sam is as free as the proverbial breeze until he meets Patsy and the little complications begin.

When the two of them get a lift from Charley Summers, a middle-age traveling man, Patsy begins to exert control. A roll in the hay puts Charley firmly under Patsy's influence and lands the hitchhikers the use of Charley's summer house near Orlando as temporary quarters. It is a subtle kind of blackmail which stems as much from Charley's concern for his two new friends, who parade as brother and sister, as from his fear of exposure.

The house is three miles from a tiny town and not too far from a local commune run by Kris Carter, a kind of touch-me-not prostitute with a 13-year old daughter and a number of shattered marriages.

Between the conservative, almost redneck locals and the liberal, hippie commune dwellers is Sam trying to find himself and recoup some of the money he has spent on Patsy. It is Kris Carter who offers Sam a bread and butter, one day job that he needs to finance his return to the road, a job which ultimately brings the book to its conclusion.

"Bread and Butter" is not really a pretty story for it details the failings of a number of lifestyles — the itinerant, the traveling salesman, the suburban wife, the commune resident, the native villager.

Flam's characters are intriguing, finely drawn eccentrics. There are a number of Thigpins in town, among them Tar Thigpin who lives with his pack of dogs and hunts wildcats for fun. There is MacKinley Stokes, an eleven-year-old streetwise kid who is brother to an escaped felon loose in the area. There is Priscilla Summers, cool suburbanite wife of Charley who invites Sam and Patsy to dinner at their house. There is Patsy, manipulative, devious, an opportunist. And, of course, there is Sam, a live-and-let-live cynic whose decisions are often haphazard and erroneous.

The book has its heavy side — sex, drugs, crime — but it has its lighter side as well. MacKinley Stokes is one of those nosey, lovable brats that brings a smile with him each time he appears. Sam himself has a humourous outlook on life which brings a bit of comic relief to a story that is sad and pathetic.

Flam has a way with the langugage, an easily readable style highlighted by superb descriptions, which make his characters and situations leap to life, and some fascinating insights into human nature. "People's hobbies are like that. You can always avoid conservation by talking about them."

"Bread and Butter" is almost flawless. Though the ending may be disappointing, it is perfectly in character and absolutely believable. This novel is, in every way, a "good read."

A good romance with suspense and freshness

THE STONE BULL by Phyllis A. Whitney (Doubleday, $7.95).

Reviewed by Cathy Collison

Romance need not be trapped in Harlequin paperbacks as Phyllis Whitney once again proves. "A Stone Bull," the author's latest work, has the beautiful woman, the sinister situation and the inevitable happy ending. But it also has freshness, suspense and good romance writing equal to that of a Daphne du Maurier.

This heroine may not be as memorable as Rebecca, but she shares many of the same characteristics. A young bride just arriving at her husband's resort in the Catskill Mountains, she immediately confronts a hostile aunt and a mysterious "accidental" death.

"Now that it is later, now that night has fallen and I sit here waiting, I am not so sure I shall be comfortable with this family. I have a strange sense that something more is wrong than I've glimpsed on the surface. As though something were stirring beneath the peace and serenity — something faintly sinister."

This heroine, too, must confront her own problems. Still blaming herself for her sister's suicide, she desperately hopes the new marriage can free her from guilt. Ariel, her sister, was a renowned ballet dancer. But Brendon, our heroine's husband, has said he knows nothing of ballet. Will the heroine escape the fetters of a famous sister?

Of course not. For Ariel also had visited this secluded resort in the Catskills. But the plot does not grow stale here. Characters like sculptor Magnus who formed the stone bull in the clearing, his father Keir, as well as the heroine's new family all add to the intrigue of this well-crafted story. And Jenny, the heroine, stumbles against danger while trying to solve the accidental death of the sculptor's wife.

"What was I to do? How was I to live? My search for Floris' killer was real enough, yet it was only a marking of time. Something to keep me from thinking, from facing my life as it must be lived from now on. As it must be lived away from Laurel Mountain and all it stood for. Away from Brendon.

"But I hadn't bolted the door. A key was slipped into the lock and it was turning. The door was pushing slowly . . ."

What happens next is best told in Phyllis Whitney's own words. As her other novels, "The Stone Bull" manages to sidestep explicit sex and hackneyed sentiment while offering first class romantic suspense.

Finch presents a realistic account of decathlon hero

DECATHLON CHALLENGE: Bruce Jenner's Story, by Bruce Jenner and Phillip Finch, (Prentice Hall $8.95.)

Reviewed by Wandalyn Rice

We expect too much of our champions. It is not enough that an athlete or movie star excel in his chosen field; we insist that he also prove to be an inspiring leader.

The trap in reading "Decathlon Challenge" on Bruce Jenner's single-minded pursuit of the 1976 Olympic decathlon championship is to expect some kind of uplifting saga that we can apply to our own lives.

To the credit of author Phillip Finch, who really shouldn't have to share the by-line with Jenner, the book doesn't try to manufacture a greater moral purpose to Jenner's quest. He doesn't give up four years of his life, this book says, for God or country or even for the chance at money. He does it because, after competing in the 1972 Munich Olympics he "knew I could do better . . . How much better, I didn't know."

The book's format is unusual and avoids the pitfalls of an "as told to" style. In it, Finch writes a straight, journalistic third-person account of Jenner's decathlon efforts and intersperses them with direct quotes from Jenner, taken from interviews.

The system works well. At several points Jenner responds directly to comments and speculations Finch includes in the narrative, but the separation of the two viewpoints provides a chance for Finch to offer more than a "gee whiz" account of a hero.

After all, it is necessary to know, as Finch tells us, that Jenner was so dedicated to the decathlon that is totally dominated his life. The question "Will it make me better in the decathlon that it totally dominated his life. "It was, alarmingly enough, surely one of his considerations when he decided to marry."

The centrality of the decathlon in Jenner's life means that in other ways he is not very interesting. He admits his principal reaction to the massacre of Israeli athletes in Munich was anger because "these Arabs had come along and killed people and were cheating me out of my Olympics." The reaction, though human, is not particularly admirable.

The best parts of the book are when Finch and Jenner combine efforts to describe his constant training and his actual competition. Finch is a good enough writer to make the facts come alive and Jenner's observations add an extra perspective.

The book concludes with an obligatory chapter in which Jenner propounds a proposal for how to improve amateur athletics in this country. But that isn't what the book is about.

The book is, simply stated, the story of how one man devoted four years to a nebulous goal. If the book can't explain why he did it, it does give a good account of how.

For sports buffs, or simply those who fell in love with Jenner during the Olympics last year, that is probably enough.

Biography seeks to recast image of MacDonald

RAMSAY MACDONALD by David Marquand (Rowman and Littlefield, $25).

Reviewed by Arnold Beichman

It is, of course, nothing new for political parties to transform former leaders into un-persons when times and conditions change.

The man who ruled the Soviet Union, for example, from 1953 to 1964 — almost eleven years — is an un-person in his own country. Almost never mentioned in public or in print, the name of Nikita Khrushchev has slipped down the Orwellian memory-hole.

In British Labour Party annals, there is a similar un-person: James Ramsay MacDonald, the first Labour Prime Minister whose last task was to preside from 1931 to 1935 over a national coalition of Conservative, Liberal, and Labour ministers. Because his conscience drove him to seek a national coalition government during a grave economic crisis, he was reviled by his onetime Labour adulators as a "lost leader."

David Marquand, a Labour MP and one of the party's intellectual luminaries, has written the definitive biography of a man against whom a political party he helped to found committed what the biographer regards as a cruel act of injustice — obscuring MacDonald's achievements and distorting his failures.

MacDonald's major achievement as party leader, a post he took on when disillusion with World War I set in, was to replace the Liberal Party of Gladstone, Asquith, and Lloyd George with the Labour party as the main opposition, anti-Conservative party in Britain. This replacement was permanent and remains, to this day, unquestioned. Without MacDonald's leadership and his public acceptance, Labour would surely have developed into a strong parliamentary force in a three-party political system but one destined to compete with the Liberals for second place.

To achieve this status in a mere 20 years, Labour had to persuade a large number of Liberal voters that although Labour "was a working-class party, it was not an exclusively working-class party." Under MacDonald's ledership, Labour was transformed from a party of protest into a party of government. In so doing he helped strengthen British democracy. Such is the message and theme of Marquand's biography, a major contribution to contemporary history and a superbly fascinating piece of historical writing.

A black's search for 'roots' makes for good reading

SONG OF SOLOMON by Toni Morrison (Knopf, $8.95).

Reviewed by Ken Vanderbeek

Macon Dead Jr. faces an identity crisis at quite an early age. Macon is only four when he is struck by the desire to delve into his family heritage. Like Ralph Ellison's Invisible Man, Richard Wright's Black Boy, and Alex Haley, he will search for his "roots," which have been lost in a legacy of American racism.

In remarkable prose, Toni Morrison weaves the story of Macon, who is so ardent in his search for a past with meaning, that he wishes to fly. The flight motif is first apparent on the day of Macon's birth. For it is on that day that poor blacks gather around Mercy Hospital singing a lyrical song about flying when a black man jumps from the hospital roof in his own effort to "fly" from inner-city poverty:

"Oh Sugarman done fly away
Sugarman done gone
Sugarman cut cross the sky
Sugarman gone home."

Macon grows into a strikingly realistic character possessing the same dreams of escape and adventure that many youngsters have. Nicknamed Milkman because his mother Ruth Dead breastfeeds him until he is four, he is the son of a domineering father whose hatred of his wife is so extreme it becomes passionate. Milkman suffers from his parents' hatreds and further from the mysteries surrounding his Aunt Pilate, whom his father disowns.

Macon Sr., the wealthiest black man in the Midwest city, separates himself from his agrarian sister to strive for success. He aptly displays his status by driving a Packard through the ghettos every Sunday, a routine which becomes "much too important for (him) to enjoy," and a "burden" on Milkman.

By the time Milkman is twelve and already endured enough of his father's excessive pride, he is ready to begin his "flight." His father has but to tell him about the origin of the family's name before he is ready to explore. Here Morrison's "roots" theme takes hold and Macon's identity crisis begins to surface. His father tells him their name was the result of an error caused when his grandfather went to register in the Virginia Freedman's Bureau in 1869. The grandfather confronted a drunk clerk. "He asked Papa where he was born," Macon Sr. tells his son. "Papa said 'Macon.' The he asked him who his father was Papa said, 'He's dead.' The clerk wrote it all down but in the wrong spaces.

At the outset of his quest, Milkman, who has shunned the security of his father's wealth, goes first to Pilate's forbidden household — forbidden because his father's relationship with her has made it so. His visit in defiance of his father, opens up a world of adventure for him.

Pilate, whose agrarian roots run as deep as her family's, tells Macon his genealogy. Morrison is successful in portraying Pilate as an apt storyteller who spins the part legendary, part traditional and sometimes exaggerated oral history of the Dead family's struggle to erase memories of slavery and become a respected lower-middle class family. The stories begin with Macon's grandfather who was murdered by whites jealous of his prosperity as a farmer.

Inspired by Pilate's yarns, Milkman travels to Pennsylvania where a crone named Circe tells of the time the Deads farmed there. Later, Milkman traces his roots farther to Virginia where his grandfather was killed. It is there he hears the Song of Solomon — the key to his ancestral past:

"Solomon done fly
Solomon done gone
Solomon cut across the sky,
Solomon gone home."

This lyrical tie-back to the first song about Sugarman, is a symbol showing that Milkman is successful in unraveling his family's past. The sense of his accomplishment becomes the reader's reward in this well-written novel, sure to be a classic in black literature.

The chess story of the year is the subject of a featured cover article in September's U.S. Chess Federation publication "Chess Life and Review." It tells how junior high school and elementary school teams from north Philadelphia won and finished second in their respective sections of the U.S. National School Championships.

The all black teams and their white teacher-coaches were able, on the basis of previous accomplishments, to raise $15,000 to pay for the trip! Broad sections of the Philadelphia community responded to the achievements of these "disadvantaged children," who were just as at home at the chessboard as on the basketball court.

Deprived of junk food, stuffed with vitamin B and mildly dosed with transcendental meditation, these athlete-chessplayers were met on their return by a mad hurrah, according to the New York Times:

"At the airport, mounted policemen pointed the way to a reception area where a red-white-and-blue rostrum had been set up. Also on hand were two television crews, a city councilman, a state senator, the entire Police and Firemen's Band, and a svelte blonde who would read a proclamation on behalf of the Mayor.... As the TV crews muscled into position, a dozen black youths in blazers were disgorged from the cars. Most of them seemed to be carrying trophies."

A few more such demonstrations of the stunning potentials of our more-neglected children, white and non-white, and it will be significantly less easy to explain away our failure to decently educate them.

The controversial Soviet emigre Viktor Korchnoi scored a surprising 8½-4½ smash of his former countryman Lev Polugaevsky in their quarterfinal Candidates Match. Korchnoi will play Boris Spassky in November to see who meets Karpov for the World Championship.

In SOLVE-IT is Polugaevsky's one victory in the match.

Stamp notes

Oct. 21 will see the release of two 13-cent U.S. Christmas stamps, both of which will be printed in the small definitive stamp size in order to reduce the costs of the issue.

George Washington kneeling in prayer at Valley Forge is depicted on one adhesive while the other features holiday mail in a rural mailbox against a background of snow.

Stevan Dohanos based his design of Washington on a painting by J. C. Leyendecker which appeared as a "Saturday Evening Post" cover in 1935. It marks the winter of 1777 that Washington and his troops retreated to Valley Forge.

Dolli Tingle of Westport, Conn., designed the mail box adhesive. She also designed the needlepoint Christmas Tree stamp of 1973.

The mail box stamp will be printed on the standard gravure press with five plate numbers to the pane. The Washington adhesive will be printed on the gravure portion of the new combination gravure-intaglio press and will have 'floating' plate numbers and lack selvages on two sides. The Washington stamps also lack "Mr. Zip," "Use ZIP code" and "Mail Early in the Day" on the selvage.

Collectors affixing their own Christmas stamps to covers may send them to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Valley Forge, Pa. 19481" for the Washington cancellation or to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Omaha, Neb. 68108" for the mail box cancellation.

Collectors wishing the Postal Service to affix the new stamps should send self-addressed covers to "Valley Forge Stamp, Postmaster, Valley Forga, Pa. 19481" or to "Mailbox Stamp, Postmaster, Omaha, Neb. 68108." Enclose the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

All orders must be postmarked no later than Nov. 5.

The Canada Post Office announced that release of the 50-cent, 60-cent and 75-cent Street Scenes definitives has been postponed until Dec. 7. Labor disruptions during the summer at the security printers caused a production slowdown which resulted in the cancellation of the original Oct. 5 release date.
